Wheeler pushing forward in new role

Unanimously named county board chairman

BY JOHN DYKSTRA
jdykstra@daily-journal.com

The Andy Wheeler era officially began Monday after the Kankakee County Board unanimously elected him to become its chairman.

Wheeler, who is starting his second four-year term as District 15's representative, replaced Mike Bossert as the county's top chair. Bossert, who had been chairman since 2008, lost the Limestone Township board seat to Shane Ritter in April.

The board elected Wheeler and vice chairman Steve Liehr on 25-0 votes. Board members Pat Polk, Bill Olthoff and Bob Reid were absent from the vote. Wheeler and Liehr's terms each are for two years.

With the county's finances in dire straits, Wheeler, 47, emphasized the importance of unity and called recent discussions with board members "very encouraging." The new board consists of 22 Republicans and six Democrats.

"The key is getting everyone associated with the county on the same page — department heads, board members, labor partners," Wheeler said. "We are all in this together. We all need to win this situation. The solutions we develop are between each other. The only way we are going to get out of this is together."

Wheeler

The county projects it will face a $3.25 million deficit in its operating fund. It owes $3 million in tax anticipation warrants and another $3.5 million to the county highway department. It also borrows up to $7 million annually from its special funds to pay off county expenses, such as payroll.

"It's the first day of pushing forward," Wheeler said. "We have to earn the public's trust back. We have to do the things they put us here to do. We have to dig ourselves out of the hole. There is a brighter sunshine on the horizon, but it's still on the horizon."

Liehr previously was vice chairman for Bossert from 2008 to 2010. He has served on the county board for 13 years over two stints.

The 73-year-old represents District 28. He has the same goals as Wheeler.

"It's working with the chairman to make sure the county's finances are solid," Liehr said. "Andy has tremendous skills and is a very hard worker. I think he will be a huge plus for the county."

Return to Pearl Harbor 75 years later

USS Arizona survivor will observe memory of fallen servicemen

BY AUDREY MCAVOY
The Associated Press

HONOLULU — Lauren Bruner was getting ready for church in 1941 on his battleship, the USS Arizona, when the alarm sounded.

The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor had begun, and Bruner, then 21, scampered up five stories by ladder to the enormous anti-aircraft guns he was responsible for manning.

But bullets hit his left leg and explosions set off by the Sunday morning bombardment rocked his ship before he could get to the weapons. The ship sank just nine minutes later. Bruner escaped, but suffered severe burns.

This week Bruner, now 96, plans to visit a memorial over the Arizona's sunken wreckage and attend a remembrance ceremony at Pearl Harbor on the 75th anniversary of the Dec. 7, 1941, attack.

Bruner has traveled from his Southern California home for the events many times, but doesn't know how long the Arizona's few remaining survivors will be able to keep up the tradition.

"It's getting close to being the end pretty soon. There's only five of us left now," Bruner said.

More than 2,300 servicemen died in the Japanese attack that plunged the United States into World War II. About half of those killed were on the Arizona, most still entombed in the wreckage.

Fans flock to Blackhawks' broadcasters

Foley, Olczyk enjoy mingling with locals

Pat Foley couldn't stop smiling Monday night as hundreds of Chicago Blackhawks fans handed him memorabilia to sign and had him pose for pictures with them.

"Events like this are awesome," the Hall of Fame Blackhawks broadcaster said. "The fact that anyone wants to come out to see us is humbling. People come up and are so nice. It's an uplifting, positive thing. I'm going to be pumped up when I go put on a headset tomorrow, thinking of all these people I met tonight. This is fantastic."

Foley and fellow Blackhawks broadcaster and Hockey Hall of Famer Eddie Olczyk came south of the suburbs through a meet and greet sponsored by Anheuser-Busch. Their visit shocked many local fans.

"I'm surprised they came down this far south," said Jason Kelly, of Manteno, who had Foley sign a puck he got from Eric Daze during the 2001 playoffs. "It's quite a trip down here for them, and they made it. It shows how committed the with her son, Chris, just after he signed with the Blackhawks.

"Eddie was just 18 years old when he posed for that picture," Enz recalled. "It was at a restaurant in Country Club Hills that is now closed. When I went up to him, I asked, 'Do you remember me?' and told him the story. I'm just thrilled to death that I got to see him tonight."

Olczyk, who started his 16-year career with the Blackhawks, particularly asked kids how they were doing in school, relishing the time to meet fans.

"We get a few chances like this to meet the fans and talk a little hockey," he said. "Some fans like to talk a little horse racing. We don't get many nights off, so when we can fit things like this in the schedule, it's pretty good."

5 things about the Rolling Stones

Talking tequila

The band helped popularize the Tequila Sunrise during its 1972 U.S. tour. After being introduced to the drink at a private party, the members would instruct bartenders on how to make it.

A voice with a bite

Lead singer Mick Jagger bit off part of his tongue when he was younger. The accident altered his voice from "posh" to the iconic sound that has made him perhaps the greatest vocalist in rock history.

Birthday that defies odds?

Keith Richards, the bad boy, hard-living Stones lead guitarist, was born on Dec. 18, 1943, and will turn 73 in a few weeks.

Where did that logo come from?

The band's famous tongue logo is said to have been inspired by the Indian Hindu goddess "Kali the Destroyer," although Jagger's own tongue and lips were surely also an influence.

Somber anniversary

On this date in 1969, the band staged its infamous Altamont Free Concert in northern California. The Hell's Angels were hired to provide security, and four concertgoers were killed.

Alabama Metal to close more plants

Production at local site to end Jan. 27

BY LEE PROVOST

lprovost@daily-journal.com
815-937-3364

The Alabama Metal Industries plant that is closing early next year is one of four production sites the Birmingham, Ala.-based company is shuttering, said a person who spoke Monday to the Journal on the condition of anonymity.

In addition to the 250,000-square-foot plant in Bourbonnais, the company also is closing plants in Dayton, Texas, and Orem, Utah. A fourth production line of industrial bar grating also is being shut down in Birmingham.

The plant closure will result in the Kankakee County area losing 86 jobs. Those jobs paid an hourly wage of $16.50 for starting employees to $30 per hour for longer-serving workers. The company has been operating a plant at 1115 E. 5000N Road since 1998.

The company has been leasing the location.

Plant production will be stopped Jan. 27, and the location will be vacated by March 31, the person said. The location has been operating two shifts five to six days per week.

The person said the Bourbonnais site has been profitable for the company, but the company is discontinuing its bar grating production.

The bar grating is mainly used by the domestic oil industry. However, there has been a considerable decline in domestic oil production because its costs cannot compete with that of foreign oil, meaning there is no longer a demand for the grating product.

"This has been a profitable and well-run plant, but it's easier to import than buy domestic," the person noted.

The person also noted the company is publicly traded. The Journal said in Saturday's edition that Alabama Metal was privately held.

The plant is located just east of the CB&I Construction Warehouse.

Alabama Metal is a division of Buffalo, N.Y.-based Gibraltar Industries Company. Gibraltar is a worldwide leader in the manufacturing and distribution of building products. The company announced Dec. 2 that it would be eliminating its bar grating production.

Miller named ONU's latest Student Laureate

DAILY JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Senior Kaleb Miller is Olivet Nazarene University's 2016 recipient of the Lincoln Academy's Abraham Lincoln Civic Engagement Award, presented for excellence in curricular and extracurricular activities.

Miller accepted the award last month in a ceremony at Illinois' Old State Capitol. This year marks the academy's 42nd annual recognition of Student Laureates, a group made up of one senior from each college or university in Illinois.

Miller, of Canton, serves as Olivet's student body president. A business major, he is active in Enactus, an international community of student, academic and business leaders committed to the power of entrepreneurial action.

Miller is completing an internship at Riverside Healthcare in Kankakee.

"I appreciate Kaleb's insight and common-sense approach to leadership," said Dr. Woody Webb, Olivet's vice president for student development. "This award only affirms what I know to be true about Kaleb. He is a man of integrity and a strong work ethic. He is highly respected by his peers, faculty and administration. His faith commitment is deep and leaves an impact on others. I have complete confidence that Kaleb will continue to make a Kingdom difference, no matter where his career takes him."

Illinois Gov. Bruce Rauner, president of The Lincoln Academy, and First Lady Diana Rauner welcomed all the Student Laureates and awarded each with a certificate of merit, a Lincoln medal and a $1,000 check.

"President Lincoln's legacy is a reminder of the power of public service and civic engagement here in Illinois and across the country," Gov. Rauner said during the ceremony. "The students chosen to receive this honor have exemplified the principles and ideals of the greatest Illinoisian through their hard work and dedication to their schools and communities."

Time to register for the free Christmas dinner

To be held at 9 area locations

DAILY JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

The 22nd annual free Christmas Day dinner provided by Christmas Day Inc. is approaching quickly, and now is the time to register.

It is important to RSVP because the caterer needs to know the number of people who will be attending and how many dinners have to be served. The RSVP deadline is Dec. 22.

Last year, 1,250 dinners were served by LaVilletta Restaurant at the Elks between nine locations in Kankakee County.

In 1995, a missions committee for The Grace Community United Methodist Church brainstormed on what could bring people together during the holiday season while serving the less fortunate. After months of discussion, it was decided Kankakee County would serve a Christmas Day dinner for those who would be home alone.

Each year, a benefit golf outing is held at Oak Springs Golf Club to raise money for the dinner.

This year's dinner locations will be Central Christian Church in Bourbonnais; Quality Inn & Suites in Bradley; Community Center in Grant Park; Civic Auditorium in Kankakee; Lisieux Pastoral Center in Kankakee; Leo Hassett Center in Manteno; First Baptist Church in Mokenca; Northlake Villa Senior Center in St. Anne; and the Sun River Terrace Community Center.

Anniversary

The Navy and National Park Service expect several dozen attack survivors to attend the remembrance ceremony Wednesday on a pier overlooking the harbor. They, along with thousands of others, will observe a moment of silence at 7:55 a.m. — the same minute the Japanese planes hit their first target in the harbor.

Back then, in 1941, Bruner didn't know who was attacking until the planes got close enough for him to see the red Rising Sun Japanese insignia on their sides. The aircraft shot at "everything in sight," he said. Then an explosion tore through his battle station.

"That's where the flames blew right through and cooked me right there," Bruner said in a telephone interview from his home in La Mirada, Calif.

With "everything burning," Bruner tried to get off the ship as fast as he could. But the water in the harbor 80 feet below — infused with leaked oil — was on fire, too, so jumping wasn't an option.

Bruner and a few fellow shipmates shouted to a sailor on the ship moored next to the Arizona to toss over some rope. The six of them tied the rope and carried themselves hand-over-hand across the 100-foot expanse to the USS Vestal.

"You're like a chicken getting barbecued," he said. All of them made it, becoming six of the 335 sailors and Marines on the Arizona to survive. Another 1,177 shipmates died.

Doctors on the USS Solace hospital ship wanted to amputate most of Bruner's hands, leaving him with just his forefingers and thumbs, he said. Ultimately they peeled off his dead skin and let new skin grow in. They put him in a special bed with hoops that allowed sheets to be draped above him but not touch him.

Navy documents recently uncovered by the genealogy and historical records company Ancestry show Bruner suffered burns on his face and the back of his neck, his right shoulder, right arm and forearm, fingers, hands, outer thighs and lower legs.

The Associated Press

Lauren Bruner, one of five remaining survivors of the USS Arizona, which was attacked on Dec. 7, 1941, at Pearl Harbor, was getting ready for church when the alarm on his battleship sounded. Bruner suffered burns on his face and the back of his neck, his right shoulder, right arm and forearm, fingers, hands, outer thighs and lower legs. He spent seven months recovering before returning to service to help the Navy train new recruits to fight the war.

The burns on his right arm were particularly severe and took longer to heal, according to the documents, which Ancestry has posted in a special section for Pearl Harbor survivors within its military records site Fold3.com.

Bruner spent seven months recovering but returned to service, he said, because the Navy needed sailors to train new recruits to fight the war. He was on the USS Coghlan when it bombed Japanese positions on Attu Island in Alaska in 1943. His ship later took troops to the South Pacific and was near Guam when the war ended.

He doesn't like to rehash many details from Dec. 7. He said he just "grins and bears it" to cope with the memories.

"There are parts of this whole thing that I can't talk about. If I do talk about it, I cannot sleep," he said.

After the Navy, Bruner went to work for a former Marine's refrigeration business and spent 39 years with the company. He married twice, but outlived both wives.

Bruner wants his ashes interred inside his old battleship after he dies, similar to many other Arizona survivors who have chosen to be buried with their shipmates. Bruner said he prefers this to lying in a sparsely visited cemetery.

"I think I've got the last spot," he said, expressing confidence he'll be the last of the survivors to go.

Braidwood nuclear phone test Thursday

DAILY JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Braidwood Generating Station will conduct an annual test of its phone notification system on Thursday.

The phone notification system is designed to advise residents of important issues involving the nuclear facility.

The system, which was put into place in 2011, allows the station to call residents at any time, day or night, in the towns of Braidwood and Godley to provide an update on plant operations, if the need arises.

"It is our responsibility as partners with our communities to keep our neighbors informed," said Braidwood Site Vice President Marri Marchionda-Palmer. "This system provides us another method to communicate, should the need arise."

Braidwood and Godley residents on the notification list were mailed a postcard informing them of the system test call. Residents living in those communities who did not receive postcards can be added by contacting the Braidwood Station hotline at 815-417-4567. Participation in the system is optional.

Continuing budget crisis hurting homeless

Another year of financial uncertainty looms for shelters, low-income students

BY IVAN MORENO
The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD — Homeless shelters in Illinois and low-income college students who rely on state funds are facing another year of financial uncertainty as Republican Gov. Bruce Rauner and majority Democratic lawmakers remain unable to make progress on resolving a budget war.

Several meetings during the past month only have served to prove how far apart the two sides are: Rauner, a former venture capitalist who took office two years vowing to overhaul how the state is managed, continues to insist Democrats pass part of his pro-business agenda, while they say he should focus on a budget deal without pre-conditions.

The money lawmakers approved as part of a six-month spending plan in June is about to run out, but they adjourned for the year Thursday without agreeing with the governor on a plan going forward. That means social service providers, such as programs that deliver meals for homebound seniors and homeless shelters, will start the new year without state support. Some already have exhausted their budget reserves.

"They don't even have as much resilience as they did a year ago when they weren't getting paid," said Dan Lesser, director of economic justice at the Sargent Shriver National Center on Poverty.

$500 MILLION PER MONTH

Illinois hasn't had a full budget since July 1, 2015 — the longest a state has gone without a spending plan since at least World War II.

About 90 percent of the state's spending is on autopilot because of court orders requiring funds for crucial services such as Medicaid and salaries for state workers. Every day that passes, Illinois is going into debt — about $500 million per month, according to the state comptroller — because the court orders are forcing the state to spend more money than it's collecting in taxes.

However, those court orders don't cover higher education institutions and some social service programs. That has prompted some providers to close their doors and layoffs in higher education.

"They're all going to be in the same pickle they were in last year," said Rep. Elaine Nekritz, a Democrat from Buffalo Grove.

NOT ENOUGH RELIEF

The six-month budget provided some relief, but some of that money went to cover debts that social service providers had incurred during the past 18 months. Colleges have received about two-thirds of the funding they typically get from the state and have no money for tuition grants for low-income students this semester or the next.

The Peoples Church of Chicago runs a shelter for the homeless that is scheduled to close by the end of December because it hasn't received state support for more than a year, said Dick Simpson, a member of the board that oversees the shelter. About 80 people rely on the shelter on a daily basis and they'll have to find help elsewhere.

"And some of them will die. It's Social service providers, such as programs that deliver meals for homebound seniors and homeless shelters, will start the new year without state support as Republican Gov. Bruce Rauner and majority Democratic lawmakers remain unable to make progress on resolving a budget war.

that serious," said Simpson, who is also a political science professor at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

Rauner plans to meet with legislative leaders throughout December with the goal of agreeing to a budget deal that can be considered the first week of January during a two-day lame-duck session — a period of time when outgoing lawmakers can be more willing to take tough votes.

But Democratic House Speaker Michael Madigan has said the only way a budget will pass is if Rauner drops his demands.

"I'm so frustrated I'm almost giving up hope," said Rep. David Harris, a Republican from suburban Chicago. "I have no idea when this impasse is going to be broken."

Both sides reported no notable progress following weekend meetings at Rauner's offices in Chicago.

Madigan complained that the budget was discussed for just 14 minutes out of a nearly 90-minute meeting on Sunday. But Senate Republican leader Christine Radogno said Democrats were given ample opportunity to broach the subject but were "unprepared."

Mendoza sworn in as comptroller

Takes on budget crisis

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPRINGFIELD — Susana Mendoza has been sworn in as Illinois comptroller.

The Democrat will serve the final two years of Republican Judy Baar Topinka's term. Topinka was re-elected in 2014 but died suddenly.

Mendoza beat appointed comptroller Leslie Munger in a special election last month.

Mendoza takes over during a period of crisis.

The state continues limping along without a budget for the second year in a row because of disagreements between GOP Gov. Bruce Rauner and Democrats who control the Legislature.

It has resulted in a backlog of overdue bills topping $10 billion. On Friday, six Democratic state representatives sued the comptroller over paychecks they haven't received since May.

Mendoza says she will continue withholding pay unless ordered by a court. She is not accepting her $136,000 salary.

Illinois comptroller Susana Mendoza is not accepting her $136,000 salary as she will work to diminish Illinois' backlog of overdue bills topping $10 billion.

Judge sides with city in food truck lawsuit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A Cook County circuit court judge has ruled against a Chicago food truck operator in a case involving city rules requiring mobile eateries to do business at least 200 feet from restaurants.

Judge Anna Helen Demacopoulos upheld the 200-foot rule Monday along with another rule requiring food trucks to use a city GPS tracking device.

Lawyers for Laura Pekarik, who has operated "Cupcakes for Courage" food truck for five years, had argued food truck owners have been hamstrung by the rules. They said Monday they plan to appeal the decision.

Their lawsuit argued Chicago can't protect restaurants from competition and that the tracking devices are an illegal search under the Illinois Constitution.

The judge said Monday the law allows the city to strike a balance between competitive businesses.

First black woman selected state police colonel

BY JOHN REYNOLDS

The (Springfield) State Journal-Register

SPRINGFIELD — When JoAnn Johnson joined the Illinois State Police 27 years ago, she didn't set out to be the first African-American woman to reach the rank of colonel.

The Springfield resident was drawn to law enforcement by her father, who worked as a Chicago police officer. They would watch police-themed TV shows like "Hill Street Blues" as she was growing up, and her father would let her know which parts were realistic and which parts were fantasy.

By the time Johnson enrolled at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, she knew she wanted to be a police officer so she could help people and investigate crime. She was the only black woman in her academy class, but that didn't deter her from completing the course.

"I took pride in doing a good job," Johnson said. "I've always set out to do 110 percent at everything I've done. My father taught me that. In doing that, I feel like my hard work has been rewarded along the way."

Johnson, 48, was promoted to the rank of colonel on Nov. 1. She works at ISP headquar-

The State Journal-Register

Illinois State Police colonel JoAnne Johnson poses for a photo in her office at the state police headquarters in Springfield, Ill. ters in downtown Springfield and is in charge of the division of internal investigation. The division investigates allegations against both sworn and civilian members of the state police, as well as employees at some other state agencies such as the Departments of Corrections and Transportation.

Johnson is one of four colonels in the state police, and there are only two people above her in the chain of command: First Deputy Director Chad Peterson and Illinois State Police Director Leo Schmitz.

Johnson's done a lot of diverse jobs with the agency since she started on the midnight shift in Elgin as a patrol officer. She worked in criminal investigations and also served as an undercover narcotics officer in a joint-jurisdictional drug task force in the early 1990s.

"I didn't have any children at the time, which made it easier," Johnson said of her undercover work. "There were a lot of late nights working undercover; a lot of talking and some scary events. I did learn a lot."

In 2010, Johnson moved to Springfield to teach at the Illinois State Police Academy. Three years later, she was promoted to lieutenant colonel and moved to the internal investigation division.

Investigating fellow employees isn't easy, she acknowledged, but it's important work.

"(People working in internal investigations) understand the sensitivity of potentially investigating one of your own. We go to great lengths to work the cases thoroughly because we realize we may be proving that our officers did not engage in any misconduct. We are finders of fact. We leave no stone unturned, and the evidence falls where it falls," Johnson said.

While Johnson has been able to climb the ladder at ISP, women still are a decided minority in the department.

There are about 1,500 men who are sworn officers compared to about 167 women. Of those 167 women, 22 are African-American, Johnson said. Johnson noted that the state police are trying to recruit more women and more minorities.

"State police are very active in recruiting in minority neighborhoods," she said. "We want to build those numbers up. We want to get our female officers out at recruiting events, schools and other events in the community so people can see that I can do that, too."

Retired U.S. Marshal Robert Moore, a Springfield resident, has known Johnson for about five years. He's the criminal justice chair for the Springfield branch of the NAACP, vice president of the local National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives, or NOBLE, and an author.

Moore said Johnson's promotion is important.

"I am very excited about her attaining that rank," he said. "It continues to show that diversity is important, that hard work is important, and it's also important to show that departments like the state police are still promoting diversity."

Johnson's work in the internal affairs division is also significant, Moore said.

"She is making an impact. That's what we look at," he said. "When you have her over the internal affairs unit, that sends a strong message itself — that there's fairness and we like to see fairness in that arena."

While the work of a state trooper can be physically demanding, Johnson said women are very capable of learning the defense tactics that are needed to keep them safe. She added that women are often able to avoid physical confrontations through communication skills.

"I'm trained and know how to defend myself against a 6-foot-2 inch, 200-pound man or woman, but I really don't want to do that — especially on a little strip of real estate called the shoulder of the highway," Johnson said. "We have learned to use our voices and our communicative skills and tactics to help us accomplish what we need to accomplish without having to go to fisticuffs or having to use hands-on."

Johnson, who married Richard Johnson in 2013, has two daughters, ages 9 and 11. Despite her demanding routine, she's found a way to balance home life and work life.

"I'm a soccer mom and a softball mom. I do all of the things moms do, and I am there for my family, yet I can still do this job. I think women need to see that you can do all of this," Johnson said.

Couple grateful for return of gravestone picture

BY JARAD JARMON

Mattoon Journal Gazette & (Charleston) Times-Courier

ASHMORE — For Fairel Smith, having a picture of his mother and stepfather enshrined on their gravestone at the Enon Cemetery was not only an expensive gesture but also a prideful one as well.

Smith, of Shorewood, said he wanted to make sure, should those in the area pass the gravestone, they would be able to recognize the two. Smith's wife Kathy said his mother Lucille Christian, originally Lucille Hallock, was in the local area for much her life, later spending her remaining days in Dwight.

The photo was important to him. It was his special way to pay tribute to his mother and stepfather, he said.

So, on one of Fairel's regularly scheduled trips down to where his mother was buried a few years ago, it was especially disheartening to find it had been ripped off the stone, leaving marks from where it was pulled away.

Kathy said they did not think they would ever see the picture again.

But in October, on their regular trip down to the area to decorate the gravestone with flowers, they were "dumbfounded" as they approached the gravesite: The picture had been returned with the same sunbaked streaks across the photo along with its other imperfections.

The initial shock that came from the seeing the now re-emerged photo mounted back on the gravestone was immense for the couple. Kathy said it was beyond belief what happened.

"It's gone," she thought before seeing the picture again. "It is never going to come back."

She had seen pictures like the one that was removed from the memorial stone at flea markets and garage sales. Kathy said they had seen people selling "likely" stolen gravestone pictures.

But the photo was there on the monument as if had never left. Kathy said at that point, it was a moment of total disbelief.

"I thought I was seeing something," she said.

When they noticed the photo was removed in the first place, Fairel said they thought to go to McDonald's in Charleston in hopes of posting a picture of the missing photo with a reward for the finder.

He said he just wanted the photo back.

At the restaurant, Fairel, on a whim, started chatting and questioning people about the stone. He happened to find a man who claimed he worked for the monument company. From Fairel's account, the man said he thought he could look into it.

This encounter was the last they had with that man.

But, three years later, the picture has been returned.

Fairel said he has no idea who returned the photo or who had it in the first place, but for him, it does not matter too much.

"I am just glad it is back up," he said.

Fairel said he is just thankful to the person who brought it back.

Lawyers: Juror was biased, man's execution should be halted

BY KATE BRUMBACK
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The execution of a Georgia death row inmate convicted of killing his father-in-law following a custody fight regarding his young son should be halted because a juror lied about her own custody battle and messy divorces — and then persuaded fellow jurors to vote for a death sentence, his attorneys argue.

No one disputes that William Sallie killed John Lee Moore in March 1990, but he has been unable to present evidence of juror bias that should entitle him to a new trial because he missed a filing deadline by eight days at a time when he didn't have a lawyer, his lawyers have said in court filings.

Sallie, 50, is scheduled to be put to death today. His first conviction and death sentence were overturned because his trial lawyer was at the same time a law clerk for judges in the circuit where the trial was held.

During his second trial, in 2001, the woman eventually chosen as a juror lied during jury selection and failed to disclose domestic violence, messy divorces and a child custody battle that were "bizarrely similar" to Sallie's case, his lawyers said. She later bragged to his attorneys' investigator she convinced her divided peers to vote unanimously for death.

Sallie had abused his wife, who was living with her parents in rural south Georgia in March 1990 after filing for divorce, according to a Georgia Supreme Court summary of the case. The two fought over their son, with custody ultimately going to Sallie's wife.

After breaking into his in-laws' house early one morning, Sallie shot John and Linda Moore in their bedroom. John Moore died from his injuries.

Death sentences in Georgia are automatically appealed. Once that appeal is complete, post-conviction proceedings involving petitions challenging the legality of the conviction and/or the sentence are typically filed in state court and, subsequently, federal court.

There's no time limit to file a post-conviction petition in Georgia courts. There's a one-year limit after the direct appeal is complete to file a post-conviction petition in federal court, but that clock pauses once a state petition is filed and stays paused until appeals on the state petition are completed.

Sallie filed his state post-conviction petition on his own a year and eight days after his direct appeal was complete. Since it was more than a year after the direct appeal ended, the clock wasn't paused on the federal filing deadline and it expired.

Georgia and Alabama are the only two states that don't guarantee an attorney for state post-conviction proceedings, according to the American Bar Association.

Sallie

Dear Judge Gergel,
I would like to ask if my lawyers can represent me for the guilt phase of the trial only.
Can you let me have them back for the guilt phase, and then let me represent myself for the sentencing phase of the trial?
If you would allow that, then that is what I would like to do.
Dylann Roof
12/04/16

Court records

In Dylann Roof's handwritten note to U.S. District Judge Richard Gergel, it is unclear why Roof is so determined to keep the lawyers out of the penalty part of his case. His lawyers suggest there might be something embarrassing Roof is afraid they would use to try to spare his life.

Roof allowed to hire lawyers back, for now

BY JEFFREY COLLINS
The Associated Press

CHARLESTON, S.C. — A federal judge agreed Monday to let a white man accused of fatally shooting nine black parishioners rehire his attorneys until a verdict is reached, but to remain his own lawyer if he is found guilty and the trial moves into a penalty phase.

Roof

The decision by U.S. District Judge Richard Gergel ended a week of Dylann Roof acting as his own lawyer in his death penalty trial. Roof wrote the Judge a handwritten note with his request during the weekend.

It is unclear why Roof is so determined to keep the lawyers out of the penalty part of his case. In their own motion Friday asking Gergel to order Roof to hire them back, they suggested there is something embarrassing Roof is afraid they might use to try to spare his life. They did not elaborate.

Roof, in his gray and white jail jumpsuit, simply answered questions with "yes" or "no." Then, after Gergel ruled, the 22-year-old described by his lawyers as a "ninth-grade dropout" quietly slid back into the far left chair at the defense table. Lead lawyer and capital defense expert David Bruck took back the lead chair, at least for now.

Death penalty trials are split into two parts: the guilt phase, and then a separate portion that focuses on whether the defendant will be sentenced to death, or life in prison. Roof's lawyers can represent him in the guilt portion.

Gergel, who last week called Roof's decision to be his own lawyer "unwise," said he is still worried Roof is making a grave error by deciding to represent himself in the penalty phase.

"I continue, Mr. Roof, to urge you to reconsider this decision," Gergel said.

Authorities said Roof shot nine black people during a prayer meeting on June 17, 2015, at Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Charleston because he hated African-Americans. He faces hate crimes and obstruction of religion charges.

A state death-penalty trial on nine counts of murder will follow the federal trial.

Roof's main act during his week as his own lawyer was to oversee, along with prosecutors, the selection of 67 people who will make up the pool for the 12 jurors and six alternates. The jury will be selected Wednesday before opening statements.

The week of jury qualification was much shorter than the federal death-penalty trial of Boston bomber Dshokhar Tsarnaev, which took almost two months.

Gergel held a 50-minute hearing to deal with other motions Monday. He agreed to allow Roof's parents, grandmother and grandfather, who is a lawyer, to be in the courtroom for the trial even though they are potential witnesses. All other witnesses must stay out of the courtroom unless they are testifying.

Accuse him of impatience, but not inaction

Carrier deal hint of what lies ahead with Trump

He's not president, yet. Yet President-Elect Donald Trump stepped right in, visited officials with the Carrier air conditioning plant in Indianapolis and negotiated a business deal to save 1,000 American jobs.

Now, business deals similar to this one, involving incentive packages, have problems. Could there have been a better agreement? Yes. No deal is perfect. Indeed, only about half of the 2,000 threatened jobs were immediately saved, though that number might climb if the plant does well. Likewise, Indiana poured in $7 million in incentives to preserve the jobs that were saved.

The New York Times credited Trump with a mix of incentives and intimidattion. Trump, the Times said, made it clear he would follow through with a tariff on the units Carrier made out of the country. There was an implicit, but not specific, threat to pull defense contracts, too.

There was criticism from the Democrats. Bernie Sanders said the precedent has been set that all firms need to do to get incentives is to threaten to leave. The Obama administration said it had done 800 times as well in creating American manufacturing jobs.

But credit Trump with this. He did something. He did not sit and wait.

There, no doubt, will be a lot of warts with a Trump presidency. He might need more patience before hitting that "send" button on his phone. Not everyone will agree with his policies.

The lesson of Carrier is this. Trump is like an impatient business executive. Get results now. You might accuse him of many things. Inaction is not one of them.

Climate change research can have benefits

I have seen two climate change letters in the past week. I am not going to debate the issue due to everyone having confirmation bias, as well as a doctorate from the University of Google.

However, they have revealed attitudes I consider disturbing if they come from men who consider themselves wise, far seeing patriots. Climate change is just one facet of the cultural and practical problems we are faced with today. There also are opportunities with climate change research.

The concerns:

We are running out of oil. When I was going to college in 2009, I was told by 2030, oil would be reserved strictly for military jets and commercial freight. I never question this because:

1. My instructor was a wise, worldly and practical man who did his research.

2. I understood it to be an estimate using the best available data at the time.

The point was clear though that we would run out of oil. The amount of time left is arguable but the end is certain.

Yes, we have fracking technology. It is the industrial equivalent of scraping the bottom of a tub of butter. You get results but at the cost of releasing toxins into the environment and inducing earthquakes.

If you think we have hundreds of years of oil left, ask yourself why oil companies (and all their supposed power) aren't planning any new refineries.

You will reach an economic breaking point. This is basic supply and demand. Whether it is $6 per gallon of gas or $8 per gallon, you will reach a point where renewable sources become the better choice. This is the joy of living in a capitalist society. Even if you cannot convince a man on a point, his wallet will finish the job for you.

The corruption of the American dream. For generations, the American dream has been that your children will be better off than you. Somehow, that idea changed into materialism. The dream now is a large house, two-car garage, two cars that sit in the driveway because the garage is stuffed. Anything less and you will be considered "deprived." In order to create such an illusion of wealth, we go into debt and think this is the natural state of things. We never question it even as we become miserable, angry and feel helpless in our lives.

Our economy is unsustainable. Our economy is based off the idea of unlimited growth. Unfortunately, unlimited growth requires unlimited energy. Since unlimited energy is currently unavailable, that means our system is going to falter at some point. Our very way of life is unsustainable. We will have to slow down and gradually retool our economy and culture so that we can thrive in healthy ways.

The benefits:

Energy independence and a modern grid. America's strength always has been in its resources and its regional independence. If we cut back on energy use, we can use a combination of renewable energy sources to become energy independent. We also will build a modern, decentralized power grid that will strengthen our national defense.

Reshoring. As the cost of shipping goes up, companies will begin bringing factories back to America. In addition, we are in the midst of what is called the third industrial revolution." It is being powered by the Maker Movement. They have a variety of people who wish to create manufacturing on a local scale.

No entangling alliances. When America becomes self sufficient again, we won't need to wage wars for resources. Our foreign policy will become less intrusive. We will live more peaceful lives because we won't be pushing people around.

Yes, I know these are vague. In this day and age, anyone can find facts and figures to support their side, no matter the opinion. This probably is why civil debate is unheard of. The only option left to people is to simply act and go around the politics. By the time anyone knows what you are doing, and figures out how to stop you, you will be done and on to the next project.

Trump's risky nationalism

"For the first time since the end of the Second World War, the future relationship of America to the world is not fully settled."

— Henry Kissinger, in an interview with The Atlantic in its December issue.

WASHINGTON — Donald Trump is an avowed economic nationalist. He promises to put American interests "first" in fashioning trade policy and negotiations. If he fulfills these pledges — and the evidence so far suggests he will — he will redefine America's global role in a fundamentally deceptive and destructive way.

There is a real issue here. It transcends Trump's headline-grabbing success last week in pushing Carrier, a maker of air conditioners, to reverse its decision to move about 1,000 jobs to Mexico. History matters. Ever since World War II, with some lapses, American leaders have embraced the notion that trade could foster prosperity and promote democratic societies.

Trade was not just about economics; it also was about geopolitics. Disillusioned with the isolationism that followed World War I, Americans turned internationalist after World War II. The emphasis on trade was not simply to bolster prosperity; it also aimed to bind nations together so they would compete commercially and not resort to war.

By and large, the strategy succeeded. Shielded by massive numbers of U.S. troops, Western Europe and Japan staged strong economic recoveries that strengthened their wobbly democracies. So what we got for championing open trade — aside from the usual benefits of more consumer choice and greater economic efficiency — was a more stable postwar world.

Fine, say critics. But this pro-trade foreign policy subordinated America's economic interests — the well-being of its workers and companies — to fuzziest geopolitical goals. World War II ended seven decades ago. Surely a few decades of aiding our competitors was sufficient, especially when U.S. companies were so dominant during those years. Now the pro-trade bias hurts U.S. firms and produces chronic American trade deficits.

Without citing the history, Trump buys into this critique. His stump speeches regularly denounced imports as destroying American jobs and creating trade deficits. For these sins, he blamed inept U.S. trade negotiators who gave away too much in access to the U.S. market and received too little in return.

Could he be right? Stripped of rhetorical excesses, this narrative sounds reasonable enough. But there are gaping omissions.

For starters, it vastly exaggerates the role of trade in destroying U.S. jobs. Of course, many American factories have shut, and their production has moved abroad (Mexico, China) or been replaced by the imports from foreign competitors. But these losses don't explain the steep declines in manufacturing jobs, which dropped a third since

Perhaps Trump's economic nationalism is rhetorical bluff, intended to improve his bargaining position in negotiations.

1990 (from almost 18 million to 12 million in 2015), even though factory output — of planes, earth-moving equipment, pharmaceuticals, computer chips — nearly doubled during the same years. Automation is the main cause.

The often-overlooked truth is that the U.S. economy, despite much rhetoric to the contrary, is less globalized than virtually all other advanced countries. We produce most of what we consume. True, we imported about $2.8 trillion of goods and services last year, but we also exported almost $2.3 trillion. As a share of the $18 trillion economy, the deficit was less than 3 percent and about half its 2006 level.

The danger of economic nationalism is that it deludes us into thinking that our problems mainly originate abroad and can be fixed by "tougher" trade policies. Not so. It's worth recalling that the two largest economic setbacks since World War II were both domestic in origin: the high inflation of the late '70s, peaking at more than 13 percent (caused by easy money); and the 2008-09 financial crisis (caused by reckless financial speculation).

Although the United States should pursue its economic interests, it's doubtful that trade concessions will cure chronic trade deficits. These mainly reflect the dollar's role as the major international money for trade and international investment. Demand for dollars by foreigners raises the currency's value, putting U.S. producers at a competitive disadvantage in global markets. This is unfair to American factories and farms, but the alternative — ruining the dollar through high inflation or exchange controls — would be worse.

Trade remains foreign policy. It's true that today's circumstances are very different from those after World War II. But the basic reality endures: Who we trade with and how is an expression of national purpose and power. Trump is wrong to reject the Trans-Pacific Partnership, which would encourage trade between the United States and other Pacific-rim countries, creating an alternative to a China-dominated system.

Perhaps Trump's economic nationalism is rhetorical bluff, intended to improve his bargaining position in negotiations. Or perhaps not. But that path lies protectionism, isolationism, more trade conflicts and threatened economic growth. It would redefine America's relationship with the world.

Democrats aim to rebuild the blue political wall

Party could lose Midwest Senate seats, governors if voting continues to lag behind Republicans

BY THOMAS BEAUMONT
The Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — With the dust now settled from the election, Democrats are looking to rebuild the political “blue wall” of traditionally Democratic upper Midwest and Great Lakes states that Republican Donald Trump captured with an appeal to white, working-class voters.

Hillary Clinton’s failure to hold key blocs of these voters helped seal Trump’s stunning electoral victory and leaves Democrats with a gaping, perhaps long-term, hole in the party’s national battle front. Trump boasted of his accomplishment at a post-election rally in Ohio.

The president-elect crowed: “We didn’t break it; we shattered that sucker. We shattered it, man. That poor wall is busted up.”

Trump carried Michigan and Pennsylvania, where Democratic nominees had won the previous six presidential elections. Trump also won Wisconsin, carried by Democrats in seven straight tries, and Iowa, carried just once by a Republican over the same period.

In each, Trump vastly outperformed 2012 GOP nominee Mitt Romney in rural areas, while also seizing more typically Democratic-voting small cities and working-class suburbs.

Should Democratic voting continue to lag behind

Republicans in midterm elections, as it did in 2014, the results could be devastating in two years when the party will defend Senate seats in Michigan, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania, and try to retake governorships in Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin.

“Democrats suffered the consequences of apathy and selective amnesia over the past midterms and arrogance over the presidential electorate,” said Haley Morris, a senior adviser to Democrat Gary Peters’ Michigan Senate campaign, among the Democrats’ few 2014 victories in the region. “We got walloped across the Midwest in 2010 and 2014. Democrats had a glimpse of what the results could look like without Barack Obama on the ticket and ignored it.”

Mark Jefferson, the Republican National Committee’s Midwest regional political

The Associated Press

After Donald Trump edged Hillary Clinton to win the presidential election, if Democratic voting continues to lag behind Republicans in midterm elections, as it did in 2014, the results could be devastating in two years when the party will defend Senate seats in Michigan, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania, and try to retake governorships in Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin.

director, said the GOP consistently focused on “blue-collar Reagan Democrats, who were heavily trending toward Trump.”

County-specific, unofficial national voting data tabulated by The Associated Press shows Clinton received fewer votes than Trump in places Democrats had banked on for consecutive elections, and even decades, such as Dubuque County, Iowa.

Trump edged Clinton by fewer than 1,000 votes in this northeast Iowa county known for its small-city namesake on the Mississippi River and its once thriving manufacturing economy. Trump became the first Republican to carry Dubuque County since Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1956.

Clinton’s 22,774 Dubuque County total fell roughly 6,000 fewer short of Obama’s 28,768 in 2012, and more than 1,000 behind his 23,791 in 2008.

Dubuque’s Rebecca Thoeni, a lifelong Democrat until recently, said Clinton did not seem to reach out to her or her peers in 2016.

“Then I saw Donald Trump, and he got out there and showed he was serious about keeping jobs,” said Thoeni, who attended a Dubuque Trump rally in January. “He explained things in layman’s terms. That’s what changed me.”

Thoeni’s is a scenario that echoed loudly around the country, where six in 10 white women without college degrees said they voted for Trump, according to exit polls conducted for The Associated Press by Edison Research. The rate was even higher among white, noncollege-educated men.

And it played out in the thousands in Macomb County, Mich., home to 10 percent of the state’s voters.

After railing for months against the North American Free Trade Agreement, enacted under President Bill Clinton, Trump won Macomb by 48,000 votes. Clinton received 176,238 votes, compared with Obama’s 208,016 in 2012 and 223,754 in 2008.

“In counties decimated by trade deals, decades of talking points don’t pay the bills,” said Robert Becker, who ran Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders’ winning campaign for the Michigan Democratic presidential 2016 primary. “For the party’s future, we have to be honest that the jobs being created in the country aren’t being created in this part of the country.”

The pattern held in Wisconsin, too, where Trump won fewer votes than Romney did in suburban Milwaukee and where Trump’s criticism of Gov. Scott Walker worked against him. However, he carried the state in part by winning places like Racine County, part of a former union-heavy industrial corridor between Milwaukee and Chicago.

Trump received about 4,000 votes more than Clinton in Racine County. Clinton’s 42,506 were more than 10,000 off Obama’s 53,008 in 2012 and 53,405 in 2008.

Feed's first 'open mic' for short films

Talkies starts on Thursday at arts and cultural center

BY MARY HALL
mhall@daily-journal.com
815-937-3391

It's an unusual film, and one that hits a lot of themes: alcoholism, death, grief, growing up too fast and treatment of and expectations for those with disabilities.

"Reinventing the Approach," a film by Olivet Nazarene University student Luke Guertler, will be the first in a new film event series called Talkies, taking place during the coming months at Feed Arts and Cultural Center in Kankakee.

The monthly series will feature a variety of films from just a few minutes long to about half an hour. It is a spin-off of the 48 Hour Film Festival, which Feed has put on for the last several years but has started to show low participation.

Brian Prairie, of Kankakee, hopes showing short films, followed by audience discussion, will foster more interest in a local film community.

During the last few years, Feed has tried a variety of film events, from the 48 Hour Film Festival, where participants created their own films during two days, to full-length film showings, during which most people left right after the movie was over. Now, he's thinking he's hit the sweet spot.

"There are a lot of people interested in film in the area, to talk about it, to express an interest in it, whether [people] want to make one or not," said Prairie. "Kankakee and the surround-

GO!

WHAT: "Reinventing the Approach" film premiere

WHERE: Feed Arts and Cultural Center, 259 S. Schuyler Ave., Kankakee

WHEN: 7 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday

DETAILS: This free event is the first in the Talkies series of short film screenings and discussions, curated by Brian Prairie, of Kankakee. The film runs about 30 minutes long, and there will be a short discussion afterward with director Luke Guertler, ONU student, as well as members of the cast and crew. For more information, visit feedarts.org.

ing areas have a lot of great textures, old buildings, vibrant imagery in our community that can be used as background in films," he added.

It's easy to see his passion behind the Talkies series. The goal is to build a stronger film community to increase participation in events such as the 48 Hour Film Festival.

"We all have stories to tell," Prairie said. "Feed has a bunch of fantastic artists ... telling their story through photo and drawing and spoken word. There's also the ability to tell through film."

What I loved about the mobile film challenge was that it was accessible to anyone who had a mobile phone," he added. "The majority of the population has a film camera in their pocket. As long as you have something to say, you can tell [your story]."

Prairie, creative director and production artist at Ravenspring Creative, has said for now he'll choose other short films from internet sites such as Vimeo. The ultimate goal would be to show more local filmmakers creating their own work.

The collaboration between Guertler and Prairie first started through the idea of community. Introduced through a mutual friend, the pair began meeting to talk film and Guertler's ideas for his project.

"He wanted some opinions and a venue to show his film. I wanted this event to be an open mic for film," said Prairie.

Guertler, a junior from Nashua, N.H., studying film and TV production, wrote, directed, filmed and edited "Reinventing" around his busy class schedule. The actors are students from Olivet as well.

And, while initially planned as a romance, Guertler found a better story in Carver, a man who appears to be on the autism spectrum (although that's not explicitly said), and the alcoholic woman he helps come to terms with her past.

"I realized that I could make this film so much more real if there were more than just the theme of heartache, but also redemption from someone like Carver, from a group that is normally written off," Guertler said.

And those themes are why Prairie said even as a student work, this film is worth seeing.

"It was so beautifully told that I didn't care that the camera work was shaky or the color was off in one scene," he said. "I lost myself [in it] timewise."

'The majority of the population has a film camera in their pocket. As long as you have something to say, you can tell [your story].'

Eat right for where you're from

BY DAILY JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

READ IT: "Food, Genes, and Culture: Eating Right for Your Origins"

Every diet seems to promise a one-size-fits-all solution to health — from vegan to low fat, low carb to slow carb.

But, according to renowned ethnobotanist Gary Nabhan, these diets ignore the diversity of human genes and how they interact with what we eat.

"Food, Genes, and Culture" shows why the perfect diet for one person could be disastrous for another.

If your ancestors were herders in Northern Europe, milk might well provide you with important nutrients, whereas if you're Native American, you have a higher likelihood of lactose intolerance.

If your ancestral roots lie in the Greek islands, the acclaimed Mediterranean diet might save your heart; if not, all that olive oil could just give you stomach cramps.

Nabhan traces food traditions around the world, from Bali to Mexico, uncovering the links between ancestry and individual responses to food.

The implications go well beyond personal taste. Today's widespread mismatch between diet and genes is leading to serious health conditions, including a dramatic growth during the last 50 years in autoimmune and inflammatory diseases.

Readers might just find the path to their own perfect diet.

Want to get invited to parties?

Don't do these 8 things

BY AMELIA RAYNO
Star Tribune (Minneapolis)

Let's face it — there are two kinds of people in this world: those who host parties and those who don't.

If you're a host, odds are you know what you're doing. You've read the guides. You've pored over Pinterest. You've perfected your style through bashes aplenty.

But if you're a serial attendee, there's a good chance you've never put a passing thought into guest etiquette. What's the big deal, right? You show up, mind your alcohol consumption, say thank you and leave. Simple, right?

Wrong. Our guide on the best guest do's and don'ts will transform you from an ill-mannered invitee into a punctual, gift-carrying, coaster-toting gala hero — and likely will get your name on the guest list at many soirees to come.

THE FAUX PAS: NEGLECTING TO RSVP

Why it's a problem: If hosts don't know you're coming, they can't plan for seating, plates and glasses, food and drinks.

Expert says: Don't assume the host knows you'll be there and don't make them track you down for an answer.

"With technology now, so many people do paperless posts," said Amy Fuerstenberg, of Mi Mi Design, a Minneapolis wedding planning company. "And it still astonishes me that folks don't RSVP. It's so easy! Click, click! Done."

THE FAUX PAS: ARRIVING EARLY

Why it's a problem: The minutes before a party is set to start often are the most hectic for the host, who is probably not quite ready to entertain you yet.

Expert says: "That's the war zone," Fuerstenberg said of the hour before a party starts. "Just don't come early."

THE FAUX PAS: STAYING TOO LATE

Why it's a problem: The host is trying to wrap things up and start post-party cleanup. Hanging around after the fun is done is simply impolite.

Expert says: "It's the classic 'Just one more, man?'" said Jesse Held, the bar director at Jester Concept restaurants, who works many private events. "And I'm like, 'Hey, I'm trying to clean up and get out of here.'"

THE FAUX PAS: LOITERING IN THE KITCHEN — WITHOUT OFFERING A HELPING HAND

Why it's a problem: If the host is trying to prepare drinks or finish last-second dishes, you'll be in the way or, worse, keep other guests from getting their cocktails or food.

Expert says: "I love talking to people," said Becky Harris, of Event Lab in Minneapolis. "But the kitchen during a party is not always the place."

THE FAUX PAS: ACTING A LITTLE TOO MUCH LIKE YOU'RE AT HOME

Why it's a problem: A party is essentially a home invasion that comes with enough work as it is.

Expert says: Held has seen people move furniture and dig through bathroom amenities like makeup and hair products. But one of the most common blunders, Harris said, is neglecting to use a coaster for drinks.

"It's rude to assume the host will just clean up after you," she said. "Take your glass and wadded-up napkin to the kitchen."

THE FAUX PAS: MUMBLING GRATITUDE ON YOUR WAY OUT THE DOOR

Why it's a problem: Saying "Thank you!" is great, but it's important to make it meaningful.

Expert says: "You should always thank your host twice," Fuerstenberg said. "You thank them that night and then you follow up the next day just to let them know you're still thinking about it and that you really appreciate it."

You can call, text or email. You don't have to send a card. But it would be nice.

THE FAUX PAS: ASKING UNINVITED FRIENDS ALONG

Why it's a problem: Springing an extra attendee on a host might not seem like a big deal, but it can throw party preparation — drinks, food, seats, etc. — out of whack for gatherings large or small. Besides, many hosts carefully select guests based on space and the chemistry of the group.

Expert says: "It can be a game-changer," Fuerstenberg said. "And there might be a method to the madness of why the host didn't invite them."

THE FAUX PAS: NEVER RETURNING THE FAVOR

Why it's a problem: Best tip for being a good guest? Be a host every once in a while.

Expert says: "It doesn't have to be a dinner party if you're not really a cook or a planner," said Mpls.St.Paul magazine's Stephanie March, who throws and attends plenty of parties. "It doesn't have to be at your house, even. We could go have a cocktail or eat somewhere else. Just make the effort to say 'Come join me,' and take care of the bill. It's the actual invitation that matters."

Knitted breast prostheses made with loving care

DEAR ABBY: You would be doing millions of women a great service by telling them about Knitted Knockers Support Foundation. It has been tirelessly working at inspiring volunteer knitters and crocheters to provide free soft, light prostheses for breast cancer survivors.

Typically, the traditional prostheses can be hot, heavy, expensive and take quite a while to arrive. Knitted Knockers are made by people who care. Sometimes, your request can be filled that very day. All you need to do is ask. These are sent nationwide and all over the world.

I learned about this wonderful organization earlier this year, and I am now the Northern California distribution point. The response we've had from women who receive them is astounding.

Please let breast cancer survivors know about Knitted Knockers at Knitted-Knockers.org. There, they will find an order form to fill out, and we will be happy to mail out one or a pair. They give women confidence and comfort at a time when they can really use it.

If you know a knitter or crocheter, encourage them to join the cause. Knit and crochet patterns and a list of acceptable yarns are on the website. Abby, thanks for passing the word on! — Claire G. in California

DEAR CLAIRE: I know many women will be glad to know about the service you are offering, and grateful for the knitters and crocheters who devote their time so generously to make recovery easier for breast cancer survivors. Thank you for writing.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a retired widow and former model. I have dated mostly men my own age and a little older. I was in a sexless (but affectionate) marriage for nearly 30 years, and I have looked forward to a robust sex life with a new love. But, I'm finding that men who are intellectually matched to me no longer are interested in making love. If they are interested, they don't seem to want a monogamous relationship. Any hints? — Starved for Affection

DEAR STARVED: Just this. Widen your dating profile to include younger men, and, if you're lucky, you might find someone who is not only your intellectual match but also can perform.

DEAR ABBY: It's Santa here, asking if I could address your readers about a couple of things my helpers at the malls are bringing to my attention.

First and foremost: When you stand in line with your child, and it's finally their turn and they start to cry, scream and tremble, please don't force them to sit on Santa's lap. If you do, you are traumatizing your child. Is a picture really worth your child's well-being?

Next, I would discourage new moms from rushing from the hospital with their newborn, 2- or 3-day-old babies. You need to remember how many children sit on Santa's lap. Babies' immune systems are fragile, and Santa's suit can be loaded with germs. Thanks for your time, Abby, and Merry Christmas to all. — Shopping Mall Santa

DEAR S.M. SANTA: Thank you for your sensible suggestions. Some parents' heads become so full of sugar-plums at Christmas that they forget their little ones are too young to associate Santa with the goodies he brings with him. I hope readers will take your message to heart.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

You can't stop the beat

'Hairspray Live!' telecast Wednesday

BY LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. — In the steadily escalating battle of the TV musicals, NBC's "Hairspray Live!" is the most ambitious contender yet.

It's got a deep bench of stars, including Kristin Chenoweth, Jennifer Hudson, Ariana Grande and Martin Short. It boasts strong themes of racial equality, tolerance and self-acceptance. And it has the outsized, joyful talents of Harvey Fierstein as writer and actor, reprising his Tony Award-winning role as Edna Turnblad.

Executive producer Neil Meron also counts the TV musical's timing as a bonus, calling it impeccable despite its 1960s setting and roots in John Waters' 1988 film and, more directly, in the 2002-09 Broadway musical with Fierstein.

"People already were excited about it, but after the election, they were saying, 'Boy, do we need this now,'" Meron said recently on a Universal Studios set as the cast rehearsed "I Can Hear the Bells" for Wednesday's telecast at 7 p.m.

With the country in a "divisive place," he said, viewers are eager for entertainment "that can be really healing."

"Hairspray Live!" is set in 1962 Baltimore, where "The Corny Collins Show" is TV's hot dance program and the focus of teen Tracy Turnblad's dreams. When she's chosen to perform and gains instant celebrity, the plus-sized dynamo uses it to fight the show's whites-only rule.

Tracy is played by Maddie Baillio, 20, of League City, Texas, a college student plucked from more than 1,300 hopefuls in an open casting call for her first professional role. Short plays husband to Fierstein's supportive wife and mother.

The cast includes Derek Hough as Collins; Grande as Tracy's pal Penny; Hudson as record-store owner Motormouth Maybelle; Ephraim Sykes as her son, Seaweed; Chenoweth and Dove Cameron as mean mom-daughter duo Velma and Amber Von Tussle; and Garrett Clayton as Link, Tracy's squeeze. Two former "Hairspray" Tracys, Ricki Lake (the movie) and Marissa Jaret Winokur (the play), are set for cameo appearances.

Among the catchy songs sure to rattle around in viewers' brains for days:

Trae Patton/NBC via AP

Maddie Baillio, as Tracy Turnblad; Jennifer Hudson, as Motormouth Maybelle; and Harvey Fierstein, as Edna Turnblad, rehearse for "Hairspray Live!"

"Good Morning Baltimore" and "You Can't Stop the Beat."

The production is big (55 cast members, 600 costumes, 18 sets) and sprawling, designed to shift between the confines of two Universal Studios soundstages and a variety of backlot locations. It's also got an element of risk, following other recent musicals that aired live to ramp up the excitement factor (and keep viewers tuning in to broadcast networks and commercials).

The TV musical competition is both intra- and intermural: The bar for "Hairspray Live!" was set at varying heights by NBC's "Sound of Music," "Peter Pan" and "The Wiz" broadcasts. "The Wiz" aired live in 2015, as did this year's "Grease" on competitor Fox, and "Hairspray" plucked its pair of directors, Kenny Leon and Alex Rudzinski, from those respective telecasts. Jerry Mitchell, who choreographed the Broadway musical, also is aboard.

The "Hairspray" producers have "certainly upped the ante," said Hough. "The people who are part of this, including some who worked on 'Grease' as well, they want to try to top themselves."

Exactly, said Meron, who is producing "Hairspray Live!" with Craig Zadan. The partners also produced the 2007 movie version of the stage musical, with Nikki Blonsky as Tracy and John Travolta as Edna.

While "Grease" made creative use of backlot locations, Meron said the "Hairspray" plan is to spend more of the show, about 40 percent, outdoors on the lot.

That will include mundane facades transformed into a colorful Baltimore downtown, one that happens to be in sight of the clock tower featured in "Back to the Future." Neon signs advertise businesses including Waters Plumbing, a bow to the story's free-thinking originator, and Divine Pet Food. That honors the original film's Edna, the late Divine (Harris Glenn Milstead), who set the template for a male to own the role.

As with "The Wiz," which starred newcomer Shanice Williams, "Hairspray" is rolling the dice with Baillio. But Fierstein says it's no gamble.

She "has a voice that is just wonderful. ... She's excited about life. She's excited to do this," he told a teleconference, adding, "It's given me a whole new light to have this terrific new young star."

Baillio said the themes that are as relevant as ever:

"One of the things I love about Tracy is her body positivity, and that she sees everyone as equal and believes everyone should be dancing together on 'The Corny Collins Show' and in life," said the sophomore at Marymount Manhattan College in New York. "It's bold to say, but I hope it changes opinions."

Just what makes a show a 'hit' in 2016?

"This Is Us" (8 p.m., NBC, TV-14) "celebrates" its first Christmas episode with a trip to the hospital after Kate comes down with appendicitis. This talky drama has done well for NBC so far. It should be interesting to see where it lands when it no longer has a boost from "The Voice."

Meanwhile, "Bull" (8 p.m., CBS, TV-14) has emerged as the most-watched new drama of the season. That, in spite of a fairly charmless central character. According to CBS, "Kevin Can Wait" is also the most-watched new comedy of the season. That, in spite of, well, just about everything.

Their success demonstrates CBS still is the most popular network with audiences in the habit of watching TV in the old-fashioned sense. Other networks rely on delayed viewing and tabulating audiences as they "consume" media in all of the myriad ways now available.

Speaking of old-fashioned television, "Barbara Walters Presents" (7 p.m., ID, TV-14) enters its second season with a glance at scandals past. "Gary Hart and Donna Rice: The Scandal that Changed History" examines the brash behavior of the front-runner for the 1988 Democratic nomination, a man who dared the press to scrutinize his private life and then got much more than he bargained for.

"I Bought a Rainforest" (8 p.m., Animal Planet) follows wildlife cameraman Charlie Hamilton James, who purchased 100 acres of Peruvian rainforest without giving it much thought. He figured his plot would save at least a piece of the wild from destruction. But this was no "Green Acres." His neighbors included illegal loggers, miners and cattle ranchers who did not cotton to his idealism.

During the darkest days of the Cultural Revolution, Chinese intellectuals considered less than enthusiastic about Chairman Mao's flavor of Communism were sent to the countryside for hard labor in "re-education" camps.

A kinder, gentler variation on this theme emerges in most Hallmark movies. Lori Loughlin and Colin Ferguon star in the 2016 romance "Every Christmas Has a Story" (7 p.m., Hallmark, TV-PG).

sentiment, a TV personality is sent out to the hinterlands to produce a Christmas special and mend fences with her audience. Naturally, this move changes her attitude and her life.

You can't deviate from the holiday party line. On Hallmark at least.

TV-themed DVDs available today include "The 2016 World Series: The Official Film From Major League Baseball."

TONIGHT'S OTHER HIGHLIGHTS

Results and eliminations on "The Voice" (7 p.m., NBC, TV-PG).

Remaining contestants must create a cupcake-themed display on "Window Warriors" (8 p.m., GSN, TV-PG).

CULT CHOICE

Keegan-Michael Key and Jordan Peele star as mild men posing as gangsters to retrieve their stolen kitten in the 2016 comedy "Keanu" (8 p.m., HBO2), a film that seemed to affirm suspicions that Key and Peele work best in short-form sketches.

Authorities shut down fake US embassy in Ghana

A fake U.S. embassy that operated for “about a decade” in Ghana’s capital issuing counterfeit and fraudulently obtained visas has been shut down, the U.S. State Department announced.

The scam was orchestrated by “Ghanaian and Turkish organized crime rings” and a Ghanaian attorney, a statement said. Several suspects have been arrested, though others remain at large. Raids led to the recovery of 150 passports from 10 countries and visas from the U.S., India, South Africa and the European Schengen zone.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Mark Toner said no one was able to enter the United States illegally using a counterfeit visa obtained at the fake embassy.

“This was a criminal, fraud operation masquerading as a fake U.S. embassy,” he told reporters.

It was not clear how many people were defrauded by the fake embassy, which charged $6,000 for its services.

2 Russian nurses killed in rebel shelling of Aleppo

Rebel shelling killed two Russian nurses and eight civilians Monday in Aleppo, and a Russian fighter jet crashed as it was returning to an aircraft carrier in the Mediterranean after a sortie over Syria, but the pilot ejected safely, Moscow officials said.

The shelling that targeted government-controlled western Aleppo was one of the most intense in recent days. It coincided with a crushing air and ground assault that has seen forces loyal to Syrian President Bashar Assad recapture most of opposition-held eastern Aleppo.

Russia and militias allied with Iran and Lebanon’s Hezbollah have been staunch supporters of Assad in his country’s bitter civil war, now in its sixth year.

Top Gambian opposition leader, 18 others freed

A top Gambian opposition politician and 18 other protesters were released from prison after an appeals court granted them bail on Monday, just days after strongman ruler Yahya Jammeh agreed to step aside after losing the presidential election.

Ousainou Darboe, the head of the United Democratic Party, and the 18 others had been arrested in April after they took part in a peaceful demonstration. They each had been sentenced to three years in prison after they marched for electoral reform and to demand the body of party member Solo Sandeng, who was arrested days earlier and was tortured and died in prison.

Darboe also is a mentor to 51-year-old Adama Barrow, the man who defeated Jammeh in Thursday’s vote. Barrow has vowed to free all political prisoners and has urged exiles who fled Jammeh’s 22-year reign to return and help him reform this tiny West African country.

Trump taps Carson to lead HUD agency

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Donald Trump chose retired neurosurgeon Ben Carson on Monday to be secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, raising fresh concerns about the lack of experience some of Trump’s Cabinet picks have with agencies they’re now being chosen to lead.

Carson, who opposed Trump in the Republican primaries, has no background in government or running a large bureaucracy.

In addition, South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley, Trump’s choice to be ambassador to the United Nations, has no foreign policy experience. Steve Mnuchin, a former Goldman Sachs partner and Hollywood executive, is Trump’s man to lead the Treasury Department but has never worked in government. And retired Gen. James Mattis, a widely praised battlefield commander, spent decades in the Marines but now is tapped to run the nation’s largest government agency, the Defense Department, with 740,000 civilian employees in addition to 1.3 million service personnel.

Democrats swiftly criticized Carson’s qualifications for his job.

The Associated Press/file

President-elect Trump has chosen former Republican rival Ben Carson to become secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, despite Carson’s lack of experience running a large organization.

House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi called him a “disconcerting and disturbingly unqualified choice.” And New York Sen. Charles Schumer said he had “serious concerns about Dr. Carson’s lack of expertise and experience in dealing with housing issues. Someone who is as anti-government as him is a strange fit for housing secretary, to say the least.”

Carson would oversee a budget of nearly $50 billion that provides rental assistance for more than 5 million households. Demand for that assistance is high in part because housing costs are rising faster than incomes. HUD also promotes home ownership with the Federal Housing Administration underwriting about 1 in 6 mortgages issued in the U.S. The agency is charged with enforcing federal fair housing laws, too.

In a statement, Trump said he was “thrilled to nominate” Carson, describing his “brilliant mind” and his passion “about strengthening communities and families within those communities.”

On Monday, Trump received a fresh stream of visitors to the New York skyscraper that bears his name. His most surprising guest was Democratic former Vice President Al Gore. Transition officials said early Monday that Gore would meet with Trump’s daughter, Ivanka, about climate change, which is Gore’s signature issue.

But Gore said he also met with Trump directly and the two had a “very productive conversation.”

“It was a sincere search for areas of common ground,” said Gore, who did not detail what the men discussed. The president-elect has called man-made climate change a hoax and has pledged to undo a number of regulations designed to protect the environment.

Former South Carolina labor chief Catherine Templeton also met with Trump on Monday. She told The Associated Press the meeting was “productive” and she hoped to help the administration in any way she could.

A source close to the transition confirmed Templeton, a labor lawyer who specialized in fighting unions, was under consideration for labor secretary. The source spoke anonymously due to lack of permission to speak publicly.

Man convicted in son’s hot-car death gets life

A judge on Monday sentenced a Georgia man to serve life in prison without the possibility of parole after a jury found that he intentionally left his toddler son in a hot SUV to die.

Jurors last month convicted Justin Ross Harris, 36, of malice murder and other charges in the June 2014 death of his 22-month-old son, Cooper.

Prosecutors argued throughout the trial that Harris was unhappily married and intentionally killed his son because he wanted an escape from family life. Defense attorneys maintained that Harris was a loving father and that while he was responsible for the boy’s death, it was a tragic accident. Harris did not testify at trial and did not speak at his sentencing hearing.

Prosecutors had decided not to seek the death penalty.

Recovery of fire victims winds down; investigation looms

Some people managed to text loved ones goodbye and “I love you” before they died in an Oakland warehouse fire that claimed three dozen lives, officials said, as heart-rending reports of victims’ last moments emerged from the most lethal building fire in the U.S. in more than a decade.

The painful and exhaustive search for those killed in the fire appeared to be coming to a close. Alameda County Sheriff Gregory Ahern told The Associated Press he didn’t think there would be additional bodies found.

Officials said they would turn next to investigating the fire, which erupted late Friday during a party. It’s unclear how it started. The district attorney warned of possible murder charges as she determines whether there were crimes linked to the blaze.

Stopgap spending bill to be unveiled as Congress finishes up

Congress is quickening its pace toward adjourning late this week, marching toward a final vote on legislation boosting medical research and speeding drug approvals and readying a separate stopgap spending bill to prevent the government from shutting down this weekend.

The temporary budget bill, scheduled to be unveiled today, would keep federal agencies functioning into next spring, giving the new Congress and the incoming Trump administration time to approve more than $1 trillion to fund federal agencies through the Sept. 30 end of the current government budget year.

Current spending expires at midnight on Friday.

North Carolina governor concedes re-election bid

North Carolina Gov. Pat McCrory conceded the governor’s race Monday, clearing the way for Democrat Roy Cooper to be declared the winner nearly four weeks after Election Day. The win by Cooper, the state’s outgoing attorney general, gives Democrats an important consolation prize after a disappointing election across the country. However, Republicans retain super majorities in both legislative chambers.

McCrory, who became the first sitting North Carolina governor elected to a four-year term to lose a re-election bid, was weighed down by a series of divisive laws he signed, including a religious freedom bill that curtailed the state rights of gays and lesbians.

Judge orders Michigan recount to begin Monday

A federal judge ruled in a late-night order Michigan must begin its presidential recount at noon Monday, making it more likely the state will complete the count ahead of a Dec. 13 deadline.

In his ruling early Monday morning, Judge Mark Goldsmith rejected an effort by state officials to delay the hand-counting of about 4.8 million ballots.

Green Party presidential nominee Jill Stein argued that a law requiring a break of at least two business days after the Board of Canvassers’ final action on a recount request was unconstitutional. Goldsmith found that Stein had “shown the likelihood of irreparable harm” if the count was delayed even by two days and rejected the state’s arguments about the cost to taxpayers.

Republican Donald Trump defeated Democrat Hillary Clinton by 10,704 votes, or two-tenths of a percentage point, in Michigan. Stein received about 1 percent of the vote.

Teens charged in stabbing of students

Two suburban Chicago high school students have been charged with attempted murder in the stabbing of two other students across the street from their school.

A 15-year-old boy and a 16-year-old boy were charged as juveniles in an incident near East Aurora High School last Friday that police said was a gang-related fight.

Police said that at about 2:15 that afternoon, the 15-year-old allegedly pulled out a knife and stabbed two 16-year-old Aurora boys. The teens were arrested a short time later and a knife was recovered. The two injured boys were treated at an area hospital for non-life-threatening injuries.

On Monday morning, students were searched for weapons with security wants and additional police officers were assigned to the campus. No weapons were recovered.

East St. Louis corruption investigation nets arrests

A state and federal corruption investigation in the troubled southwestern Illinois community of East St. Louis led to the arrests Monday of eight public officials and one private citizen, days after a township supervisor pleaded guilty to spending public money on personal trips and gifts.

Officials arrested included an East St. Louis councilwoman, a Washington Park auxiliary police officer, an Alorton police officer and a former mayor of the same community, a township trustee and a U.S. Postal Service worker.

The arrests come just days after Hamilton Dean’s husband, East St. Louis Township Supervisor Oliver Hamilton, pleaded guilty to federal wire fraud charges. His arrest followed an investigation showing the 63-year-old Hamilton spent $230,000 on a township credit card between Jan. 1, 2012, and June 2016 for various personal items, such as trips and gifts for his political allies.

United Airlines mechanics approve labor contract

Mechanics at United Airlines have approved a six-year labor deal, the latest in a string of pay-raising contracts in the now profitable industry.

The contract with the 9,000 employees at United Continental Holdings Inc. It covers employees of United and the former Continental Airlines; the two merged in 2010.

Few details were disclosed. The union said the contract is worth $1.7 billion more in pay and benefits than the workers’ current deal.

Unions have pushed for pay raises now that airlines are making huge profits after losing billions and — in cases like United — going through bankruptcy protection in the previous decade.

Chicago-based United reported net income of $7.3 billion last year, although that was inflated by a one-time tax-related item. It earned $1.7 billion in the previous two years combined after losing $723 million in 2012.

5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 7, 2016
ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★ Hiding your feelings will only trip you up. The first challenge will be to sort through your thoughts regarding a difficult situation. You are likely to discover many different emotions. Slowing down will empower you to embrace how you feel. Tonight: Get some extra R and R.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Eye what you want, but don't discount what you are hearing. The input you get from different sources will give you a better picture of a relationship and/or a friend. As a result, you also will gain a better perspective. You know what to do. Tonight: Midweek break.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★ Take charge of a work-related matter. A partner could be obsessive about money. This person's intensity fuels your bond, yet also makes it difficult. Understand your significant other better, and you'll feel better as a result. Tonight: Make time for an older friend or loved one.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ You could be on the fence about a planned trip and/or a decision involving in-laws. Look at the long-term implications surrounding a difficult matter. How can you adapt to it or make the situation more viable and better for you? Tonight: Break past a self-imposed restraint.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Close interactions bring strong results. You will need to think about someone's denial or unwillingness to open up. You might wonder what this person is hiding. Know that his or her distance could be caused by fear of judgment from others. Tonight: Make time for a friend.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Others seek you out, possibly even someone you respect but don't often hear from. You might feel pressured by a personal matter, which could cause you to want to escape that situation. Your response will change, given time. Avoid snap judgments. Tonight: Return calls.

Protect your devices from cybercrime

It can give you peace of mind

GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Your smartphone, your tablet, your computer — they are some of your most important and most used possessions. They are the daily tools you use for research, to connect with others and make purchases. You take them everywhere and fill them with your important, personal information.

And all of that makes them the perfect targets for a cyberattack.

The number of cybercrime incidents in the U.S. grows each year, and as Americans move into an increasingly digital society — thanks to smartphones, smart cars and smart in-home technologies — cybercrime is expected to grow in frequency again in 2017.

Protecting yourself, your family and the vital information on your devices means increasing your focus on your own cybersecurity. That starts with these five tips.

- Recognize you're not immune. Cyberattacks increase in frequency and severity every year, so don't make the mistake of believing it can't happen to you.

- It's important to protect yourself by taking personal responsibility for your data; we can't expect banks or other institutions to do it for us," said Jim Karagiannes, Ph.D., professor in DeVry University's College of Engineering & Information Services. "We lock our doors and take other security measures to protect our home and car. We need to also take precautions with our personal security and information."

- Don't store your username, password or credit card information with a website. The convenience makes it tempting, but websites are a popular target for cybercriminals because a successful hack gives them access to hundreds or thousands of files, including yours. Even storing this information on your own computer can expose it in a cyberattack, and if your credit card information is captured, criminals can use it to gather your Social Security number.

That exposes you to identify theft. Keep this information off your devices and, instead, create complex passwords and write down all of your usernames and passwords on a piece of paper that you keep in a safe place, such as a deposit box.

- Use only a credit card, not a debit card, when making online purchases.

Using your credit card instead of your debit card allows you to keep better track of the purchases you have made. It also limits the effects of any possible theft to just the one card instead of several. If you have no choice but to use a debit card for an online purchase, do not use your pin number online.

- If it feels like a trick, it probably is. Cybercriminals often engage in "social engineering" or other nonelectronic methods to try to trick you into surrendering your data. If you get a phone call about a banking or credit card issue, or if your computer tells you to call a number because it just caught a virus, be cautious.

Do not divulge any personal history or credit card details. Hang up or ignore the computer-generated notices and call the customer service number of the institution's website with any questions.

- Replace your existing credit cards with chip cards as soon as possible. Chip cards are becoming the new normal these days, and if your current credit card does not have a silver square chip on its front, consider replacing it quickly. Popularized in Europe, chip cards possess the necessary encrypted information to eliminate delays in the transaction process. Doing so closes the window criminals need to steal your personal information, thus protecting you from identity theft.

You have no intention of abandoning your devices, of course, so protect them. Following the tips above will help better secure your technology and personal information from the threats of cybercrime, so you can enjoy your devices with greater peace of mind.

Best inexpensive sewing machines on the market

Turning 7 years old was a big deal on its own, but for me, it was even better because I became old enough to join 4-H, America's largest youth development organization, which still is alive and well after all these years, empowering about 6 million young people across the U.S. with the skills to lead for a lifetime.

Unlike most 4-H clubs these days, the clubs in my day offered only one program — sewing — and that was just fine with me. I was so excited because I would learn to operate a real full-size electric sewing machine.

My first project was a big, square dish towel. My task was to turn and hem on the sewing machine all the way around without any stitches slipping off the edge, which seemed like miles at the time. It took forever, but I did it. Every inch of that hem brings back a flood of joyful memories. What an accomplishment. Next up? An apron. I did that, too, and with that, a lifelong love for sewing began to form.

These days, I have settled down to sewing an occasional quilt and decorative items for the house.

Oh, how I love to sew, which I understand now makes me a "sewist" (as opposed to the venerable term "sewer," which always made me cringe a bit).

Learning how to sew on a sewing machine is one of life's greatest skills because it opens up a world of possibilities and a myriad of ways to save money. Having a machine and knowing how to use it — whether you're 7, 17 or 70 years old — is just plain awesome.

I could write for hours on all the pros and cons and ins and outs of mechanical vs. computerized sewing machines. You easily could spend thousands of dollars getting the latest and greatest computerized machine that does fancy embroidery or one that creates quilt stitches to look just like the most beautiful handsewn quilting. And you can just as easily go to the other extreme with the cheapest sewing machine out there and end up with a piece of junk that never works right, is a bear to operate and ends up killing every desire you ever had to become a skilled sewist.

After hours of research and review, I am excited to give you my picks for the two best inexpensive sewing machines — one for the more advanced sewist (love that word) and one for a beginner. To see the links and more info on these machines, go to everyday-cheapskate.com/sewing.

- JANOME MOD-100. This is Janome's latest easy-to-use sewing machine, a remarkable top-of-the-line computerized model that has everything an advanced sewist would expect. It also has a price you'd expect for a beginning machine. The Janome MOD-100 features cutting-edge technology to make sewing much easier, including the very desirable drop-in bobbin. I adore this machine's built-in needle threader, presser foot lift, auto-declutch bobbin winder and generous 7-mm stitch width. The backlit LCD screen with easy navigation buttons makes choosing stitches a breeze. The MOD-100 is the perfect option for sewing enthusiasts who want to get a fresh start on garments (you'll love the one-step buttonhole options), home decor and quilting. This 100-stitch sewing machine will make sure your projects are conquered with power, precision and confidence. It comes with a 25-year warranty, too, and costs about $360.

- JANOME MOD-15. I would recommend this basic mechanical machine for a beginner who shows great promise with sewing but has not yet proven the need for a more advanced machine. This is a sweet-heart of a sewing machine, offering all of the basics, including 15 different decorative stitches, four-step buttonhole options, four snap-on presser feet, a bobbin winder and a 25-year warranty. It costs about $135.

1-sided All-City

BBCHS trounces Kankakee in rivalry matchup

BY HANNAH BEVIS
hbevis@daily-journal.com

With just seconds remaining in the first half against Kankakee, Bradley-Bourbonnais' Mikayla Brandon drove hard into the paint with the basketball, spun quickly and flung it out of harm's way to an open Madalin Evans. As Brandon fell to the floor, her eyes followed the ball as it left Evans' hands and arched perfectly into the basket.

Nothing but net. The play was a result of hard work, quick passing and a perfect finish all combined into one, which was the story of the Boilermakers' 55-23 home win against the Kays in an All-City matchup on Monday night. Racking up 40 of their points in the first half, the Boilermakers ran a fast-paced offense that, once it got going, was unstoppable.

Bradley-Bourbonnais coach Evan Tingley was pleased to see his team come out strong against their local rival.

"Going into the game, I was a little concerned," he said. "We had a big win Thursday. I was concerned that we'd have kind of a letdown. ... But I thought we came out with good energy."

Senior Kennedy Weigt put up a game-high 19 points for Bradley-Bourbonnais (7-1), but she was just a third of the Boilers' offensive triple threat, combining with Vinisha Sherrod and Brandon for 29 of Bradley's points in the first half.

"Playing with them makes the game so much easier," Weigt said. "Vinisha is just a great attacker, and she always gives me open shots. Mikayla is just such a good post player inside, she always gets my garbage when I miss, and once she gets inside, if she doesn't have anything, she takes it out."

Bradley's star trio wasn't just finishing at the basket. They were responsible for the entire play, pressuring on defense to force turnovers and keeping Kankakee off balance with a fast-paced attack.

"Those three just put a lot of time into basketball," Tingley said. "They play in the offseason; they get up extra shots; they're just basketball junkies; they're gym rats. It shows. They've worked on their game; they've earned that, and it shows."

But after Weigt and company distanced themselves from the Kays (3-5) with a 29-point lead, it was the bench players who got a chance to shine in the second half. The group passed the ball around well, picked up rebounds in both zones and played a stingy defense against Kankakee to preserve the lead the starters created.

Included in that group was Zoe Langlois, a junior varsity player who played up with the varsity squad and picked up four points.

Despite Bradley's dominant offense, the game might have been closer if the Kays could've had a little bit of luck on their side. No matter how many chances the team got, it seemed as though the ball just refused to go in for a snakebiten Kankakee squad.

Kailee Seppelfrick, one of the team's top players, missed every single 3-point attempt, adding insult to injury for the Kays.

"It was missing shots early on. That kind of got us in the hole. Scorers weren't scoring and turnovers," said Kankakee head coach Leroy Parnell. "[Seppelfrick] was just off today, but I mean we want her to keep shooting those shots."

Leading the offense for the Kays was LoRyelle Robinson with seven points. She played well late, drawing fouls that took her to the free throw line and gave her team a needed boost. Also impressive were Naeona Thomas-Hill, who finished with five points, and Seppelfrick, who, despite scoring just two points, Parnell pointed out as a player who was an important part of the Kays' game.

Parnell admitted Bradley is a tough team to face, but moving forward in the season, the team can improve if they're willing to put in the effort.

"They're decent, but we just have to get our players where they don't back down from people," said Parnell. "That's all it is. We've just got to play basketball."

Raiders on a mission

Iroquois West seizes early SVC control

BY ALLAN SCARABELLO
ascarabello@daily-journal.com
815-937-3390

Iroquois West is focused on the one goal that has eluded them for four seasons. The Raiders have won the Sangamon Valley Conference tournament and captured several regionals. They even made a trip to the Class 1A Final Four in 2015. The one accomplishment that still eludes them is an outright regular season Sangamon Valley Conference championship.

"We've managed to accomplish just about everything you can possibly think of over the last four years except winning the conference outright," Iroquois West coach Kristy Arie said. "That's the single goal we set for ourselves going into the season. If it's going to happen, this is the year. To start this off and get this win under our belt was good for us."

Iroquois West took a giant leap forward in its quest Monday with a 50-44 win over conference foe Cissna Park.

"If it's going to happen, this is the year."

KRISTY ARIE,
IROQUOIS WEST COACH

RIISING STAR

Senior star Grace Schroeder, who finished with a game-high 16 points, was in foul trouble for a lot of the game and sat virtually all of the third quarter.

Tilstra scored six of her team's 11 points while Schroeder was on the bench, helping the Raiders extend their lead.

"We've been trying to get her involved in the game before that, but when Grace went out, she had no choice," Arie said. "She stepped up."

Tilstra's role has increased with the departure of a lot of last year's core.

"We lost five seniors last year," Tilstra said. "They helped us tremendously, and now we have to step up and fill in now that we don't have them with us."

TALE OF 2 QUARTERS

Cissna Park came out on fire in the first quarter, outscoring Iroquois

West 14-5.

Things went south for the Timberwolves in the second quarter, as everything they threw up failed to go in. The Iroquois West defense held Cissna Park without a field goal and outscored the Timberwolves 20-1 to go into the break with a 10-point lead.

"It just took us a while to get settled," Arie said. "We were a little flustered in the first quarter. We settled down and maintained our composure and did what we know we could do. It fell a little easier for us in the second quarter."

LATE FREE THROWS

Iroquois West scored eight points from the free throw line in the fourth quarter to close out Cissna Park.

Junior Maya Sanchez was able to get to the basket and scored all eight of her points from the free throw line, four of which came in the fourth.

"Free throws win you games," Tilstra said. "You don't think about them in the moment, but when you add them up, they make a difference in the end."

Pat Foley became the voice of the Chicago Blackhawks when he was 26 years old. Now 61 years old, the Glenview native is in the Hockey Hall of Fame and still gives the play-by-play calls for the Hawks.

On Monday, he and Hall of Fame center and fellow Hawks announcer Eddie Olyczyk visited local Blackhawks fans at Buffalo Wild Wings in Bradley. The two broadcasters took some time between signing autographs and speaking with fans to talk to the Daily Journal.

Here's what they had to say:

Pat, you have been the voice of the Blackhawks since you were 26 years old. Did you imagine making a lifetime career of it?

PF: I sort of did, to be honest with you. When I got the job, I was hoping to get to 25 years. Things have worked out. I am the luckiest guy you know by 100 miles. It's not even close. I am very fortunate. I am a local kid who has been doing this job since 1980. It doesn't get any better than that.

What is the favorite call you have made in your career?

PF: I couldn't give you one. The [Murray] Bannerman call gets a lot of attention, but the things I am happy about are when I'm on it and maybe even a little ahead of it. The game is so fast — it's hard to do it — but if I see something happening in my mind before it happens and I call it ahead of time. Now, that doesn't happen all the time, but I get excited when it does.

The salary cap has been difficult on the Blackhawks for the past seven seasons. What is it like adjusting to the new names and faces every year?

PF: It doesn't take long. It's part of the deal. You know you're going to be losing people. It's a shame that that happens. I was thinking about it the other day: If you look at our 2010 team and who was on it, all these guys that are still in the NHL are being effective. Could you imagine if we would have been able to keep them? You can't. That's the salary cap world. So, it is a shame to fans. They feel like they get to know these guys and then some of them have to leave. We still have the core guys. That's just the world now. That's the way it is. There's no way to fix it. That's just the deal.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

And the Heisman finalists are ...

Jackson, Watson, Peppers, 2 Sooners

NEW YORK — After putting on a show in Death Valley back in October, Clemson's Deshaun Watson and Louisville's Lamar Jackson will face off again.

This time in New York with the Heisman Trophy on the line.

The Atlantic Coast Conference quarterbacks who dueled in one of the best games of the college football season were named Heisman finalists Monday, along with Michigan's versatile star Jabrill Peppers and Oklahoma teammates Baker Mayfield and Dede Westbrook.

The award will be presented Saturday in Manhattan.

Watson finished third in last year's voting, won by Alabama running back Derrick Henry. Like last year, he heads to New York not as the favorite but as the contender coming on strong.

"You just don't have a lot of two-time Heisman finalists over the history of your program. He is our first, and he's very deserving," Clemson coach Dabo Swinney said in a statement. "I've said it before; I believe he is the best player in the nation and has been a great representative of our University."

Mayfield finished fourth last season, but did not get an invitation to attend the Heisman presentation in New York.

Westbrook and Mayfield are the first teammates to be finalists since Reggie Bush and Matt Leinart from Southern California finished first and third, respectively in 2005.

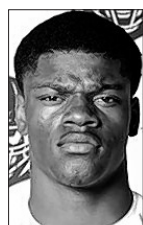

Peppers is the first defensive player to be a Heisman finalist since Notre Dame linebacker Manti Te'o was a distant runner-up to Johnny Manziel in 2012.

Finalists are determined by the margins between vote-getters. The ballots of more than 900 voters, which include former Heisman winners, were due Monday.

Watson entered as the preseason favorite in what looked like a strong field of contenders, but Jackson swept past them all to be front-runner. He was brilliant for the first two months of the season and Louisville was looking like a College Football Playoff contender.

It seemed as if Jackson would be a runaway Heisman winner, but the 15th-ranked Cardinals lost their final two games of the season. He was sacked 11 times in a lopsided loss at Houston and he committed four turnovers in a last-second loss against Kentucky. The last player to win the Heisman after his team lost its final two games was Notre Dame's Tim Brown in 1987.

Watson, meanwhile, has surged since Clemson's only loss to Pitt in mid-November. He also had the benefit of playing in the ACC title game last Saturday and took full advantage of the spotlight. Watson threw three touchdown passes and ran for two scores in a 42-35 victory against Virginia Tech to seal a spot in the College Football Playoff.

The numbers still favor Jackson, who is second in the nation in total yards per game (410.7) and has accounted for 51 touchdowns (21 rushing TDs and 30 TD passes) with 13 turnovers (nine INTs and four lost fumbles) in 12 games. Watson averages 341.8 yards per game and has 43 touchdowns (six rushing and 37 passing) with 15 turnovers (all interceptions) in 13 games.

PORTLAND 112, BULLS 110

Balanced Blazers overtake Bulls

BY JAY COHEN
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — Damian Lillard and the Portland Trail Blazers learned from last month's blowout loss to Chicago.

They turned that knowledge into their own road win Monday night.

Lillard had 30 points and seven assists, CJ McCollum scored 24 and the Trail Blazers beat the Bulls 112-110 for their third consecutive victory.

Portland had won five of six before Chicago visited the Moda Center on Nov. 15 and rolled to a 113-88 win. That loss started the Blazers on a bit of a slide, but they are rounding into form again.

"I think the game in Portland helped us prepare for what kind of game it was going to be," Lillard said. "We saw how physical they were. They compete on both ends of the floor. ... We just came in with the right mindset, knowing what to expect."

Allen Crabbe added 17 points for Portland, which opened a five-game trip with its fourth win in five games. Maurice Harkless had 11 and Evan Turner finished with 10, providing a nice boost in the fourth quarter. "I'm really pleased the way we responded after the way they beat us the first time," Trail Blazers coach Terry Stotts said.

Dwyane Wade scored 34 points for the Bulls, and Jimmy Butler finished with 26 points, seven rebounds and five assists. Robin Lopez had seven points and a season-high 14 rebounds.

Portland trailed 93-92 before Ed Davis converted a driving layup with 8:19 left, sparking an 11-0 run for the Trail Blazers. Turner made three straight jumpers and Lillard connected from long range to make it 103-93 with 5:55 left.

Chicago closed to 108-105 on Nikola Mirotic's two foul shots with 1:56 remaining, but Lillard made four free throws in the final seconds to help Portland hold on.

"We used a lot of energy coming back in the third

Rondo suspended 1 game

The Chicago Bulls suspended Rajon Rondo for Monday's game against the Portland Trail Blazers for conduct detrimental to the team, adding another disciplinary measure to the point guard's lengthy resume.

The 30-year-old Rondo has been suspended several times during his 11 NBA seasons for running afoul of the league or his team.

There was no public indication from the Bulls on what triggered Rondo's suspension. Jerian Grant replaced Rondo in the starting lineup and had five points on 1-for-7 shooting in Chicago's 112-110 loss to Portland.

MLB: WINTER MEETINGS

Heating up: Melancon to Giants, Hill to Dodgers

BY BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

OXON HILL, Md. — Albeit too late to save them this year, the San Francisco Giants got their closer.

All-Star righty Mark Melancon and the Giants reached agreement on a $62 million, four-year contract Monday. As baseball's winter meetings heated up, lefty Rich Hill re-signed with the Los Angeles Dodgers for $48 million during three years.

Chris Sale is still with the White Sox, for now. But the Washington Nationals are trying to put together a deal for the lefty ace.

Nothing yet on the other top trade targets — Pirates outfielder Andrew McCutchen and possibly two Detroit fixtures, slugger Miguel Cabrera and pitcher Justin Verlander.

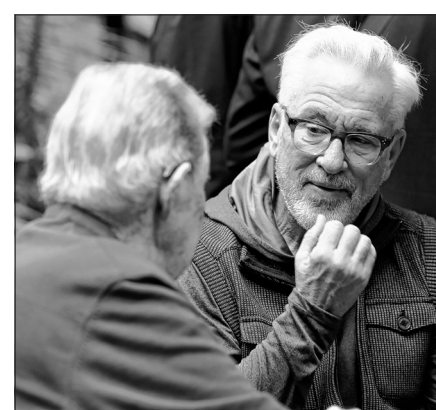

A couple smaller deals also developed as teams met inside a hotel on the banks of the Potomac River outside Washington. The Toronto Blue Jays signed versatile Steve Pearce and Philadelphia added reliever Joaquin Benoit.

And the New York Yankees confirmed they're trying to boost their bullpen with major free-agent talent. "We have been pursuing Aroldis Chapman. We also have been talking to Kenley Jansen. We also had talked with Melancon," Yankees general manager Brian Cashman said.

Jose Reyes, meanwhile, might be changing positions, rather than teams. Mets general manager Sandy Alderson said the star infielder would get his first look at the outfield in spring training.

And the Red Sox said they might fill their designated hitter spot — left vacant by the retiring David Ortiz — with a DH-by-committee. That would still leave room, of course, for them to sign slugger Edwin Encarnacion. Not everyone was in the holiday shopping spirit. Instead of hoping for hitters, pitchers or fielders, Kansas City manager Ned Yost was thinking about his field back home in Georgia.

"I got to refill the feeders at the farm. Planted some grass, finally got some rain, so my wish is that it comes up," he said.

Blackhawks

Last postseason, you criticized the NHL's late starts for playoff games on air. Was that planned or in the heat of the moment?

PF: It was planned. I thought it was time to speak up on behalf of the fans, so I did. I think most fans would think of that, but I was the one who had a microphone in front of me. So, I did it.

Eddie, the 'Hawks have struggled a bit with Jonathan Toews and Corey Crawford injured. With six rookies on the roster and two leaders off the ice, how does this team get back on track?

EO: There are a lot of young guys. Because of the salary cap, the 'Hawks don't have much of a choice. You have to force a lot of young guys in there. So, when you have a lot of young guys, you're going to have a lot of roller coaster play, not only individually, but team-wise. That's kind of what you're seeing as of late now.

But these guys can learn from Toews, [Patrick] Kane, [Duncan] Keith, [Brent] Seabrook, [Marian] Hossa and [Niklas] Hjalmarsson. So, it's a great situation for the young guys to play in and learn from guys who have not only won cups but are really good guys off the ice. They can teach these young guys to be pros.

INDIANAPOLIS 41, NEW YORK JETS 10

They have Luck on their side

Colts QB throws 4 TDs in win

BY BARRY WILNER
AP Pro Football Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Boys just want to have fun.

Andrew Luck certainly didn't have any when he sat out a Thanksgiving night loss with a concussion. He made up for it very nicely Monday night in a 41-10 romp past the inept New York Jets.

"To get back out there and do some decent things, that's fun," Luck said after throwing for four touchdowns, three to Dwayne Allen. "Sitting out is no fun."

Not that Luck had to work very hard against the hosts, who were booed by a much-less-than-filled MetLife Stadium almost from the outset.

Luck missed last week's loss to Pittsburgh, cleared the NFL's concussion protocol on the weekend, and came back in style with a prime-time performance. He lifted Indianapolis (6-6) into a tie for the lead in the AFC South with Tennessee and Houston.

"The quarterback was outstanding," coach Chuck

The Associated Press/Seth Wenig

"To get back out there and do some decent things, that's fun," Luck said after throwing for four touchdowns, three to Dwayne Allen.

Pagano said. "It's always great to have your starting quarterback under center."

Allen and T.Y. Hilton were his main targets as he went 22 of 28 for 278 yards, and they received little opposition from the Jets (3-9).

"It was a great night for everyone," Allen said. "You hope that every night you go to play, it's a night like that. It's not realistic in the National Football League."

This one couldn't have come easier for Indianapolis.

The Colts toyed with the lifeless Jets from the beginning, when New York's Jeremy Ross got to only his 11-yard line with the opening kickoff return. A three-and-out gave Luck the ball, and seven plays later, he hit a wide-open Allen for a 7-0 edge.

Indy needed only four plays on its next series, with Allen even more open for a 21-yard reception to make it 14-0. At that juncture, the Colts had gained 120 yards, the Jets 6.

"I can't put my finger on it, but it has made a big difference," Luck said of getting out quickly. "To be up 7-0 (immediately) means a lot."

Those yardage figures wound up 421 to 250. Indy scored its most points since Week 13 of 2014; the Jets allowed their most since Week 8 of that season.

The Jets (3-9) finally found some spark after Pat McAfee's punt was downed at their 3. Matt Forte turned a short pass into a 40-yard gain with a nasty move on Rashaan Melvin, but that drive stalled and Nick Folk made a 38-yard field goal.

That temporarily quieted the boobirds in the stadium. But Luck hit Hilton for 23 yards on Indy's next play, Gore ran for 19 and Adam Vinatieri kicked a 53-yard field goal to make it 17-3.

And when Allen set a career best with this third TD reception on a perfect 23-yard throw from Luck, the rout was on.

A lot of NFL head coaches have a different standard for stars, subscribing to the philosophy of treating everyone equitably but not necessarily equally.

Ron Rivera is not among those coaches.

So, when reigning MVP Cam Newton boarded the team flight to Seattle without a dress shirt and necktie, Rivera decided to bench him for the first series Sunday night.

The flap became an overbearing cloud hanging over Seattle's 40-7 shellacking of the Panthers after Derek Anderson's single snap resulted in an interception.

Newton didn't express disagreement with Rivera's decision after the game, explaining he realized before the buses left to take the team to the airport that he hadn't packed a shirt and tie.

"We discussed it internally. Me and coach. We're on the same page; I feel good about it," Newton said.

"I wore a similar outfit like this before and nothing was done. But he has rules in place and we have to abide by them and no person is greater than the next person."

Rivera didn't announce his intention to punish his passer. Even after the game he wouldn't say anything beyond acknowledging his quarterback had committed a dress code violation.

Right tackle Trai Turner said he didn't know what was up until the opening play, which ended up being a pass that deflected off Mike Tolbert's hands and into the arms of linebacker Mike Morgan. That led to a Seattle field goal.

The oddity of it all is that Newton is as fashionable as any player in the league.

This is the guy who sported Zebra-print Versace pants on Super Bowl Sunday and who modeled nearly $30,000 worth of duds for his GQ photo shoot last summer, including $495 loafers, a $530 tank top, $1,200 sneakers and a $4,995 leather jacket. And nary a necktie.

AROUND THE NFL

Aside from more than 500 players wearing custom cleats as part of the league's "My Cleats, My Cause" initiative, Week 13 featured an abundance of curious calls and dubious decisions.

Seattle star safety Earl Thomas broke his lower left leg when he collided with teammate Kam Chancellor as both tried to intercept a pass from Newton.

Carolina Panthers coach Ron Rivera made the decision to bench quarterback Cam Newton after he failed to follow a dresscode.

While in the locker room, Thomas tweeted, "This game has been so good to me no regrets. A lot is running through my mind including retirement thanks for all the prayers."

Dallas escaped Minnesota with a 17-15 win on Thursday night when no flag was thrown on the Cowboys for hitting Sam Bradford's facemask on his overthrown 2-point conversion attempt with 25 seconds left.

"I'm sick and tired of the reffing in this league right now," Vikings defensive end Brian Robison said. "I'm sick and tired of it. You've got holding calls all over the place that people don't want to call."

"Bradford gets hit in the face at the end of the game and you don't call it. I'm not laying this loss on reffing, but at some point it's got to get better."

Officials can't see every infraction but it was astonishing that Rams cornerback Trumaine Johnson got away with yanking the facemask of Patriots running back LeGarrette Blount right in front of an official.

After making the tackle, Johnson reached up and jerked Blount's facemask, but head linesman Ed Camp never reached for his flag.

"I cannot believe an official's sitting right there watching and he won't make the call," NBC analyst Rodney Harrison said.

Randall Cobb made a snow angel after scoring a touchdown in Green Bay's win over the Texans at Lambeau Field.

In Chicago, the 49ers were assessed a 15-yard excessive celebration penalty after rookie cornerback Rashard Robinson did a snow angel in the end zone because he mistakenly thought Dontae Johnson had scored on a blocked punt return, as did the rest of the 49ers.

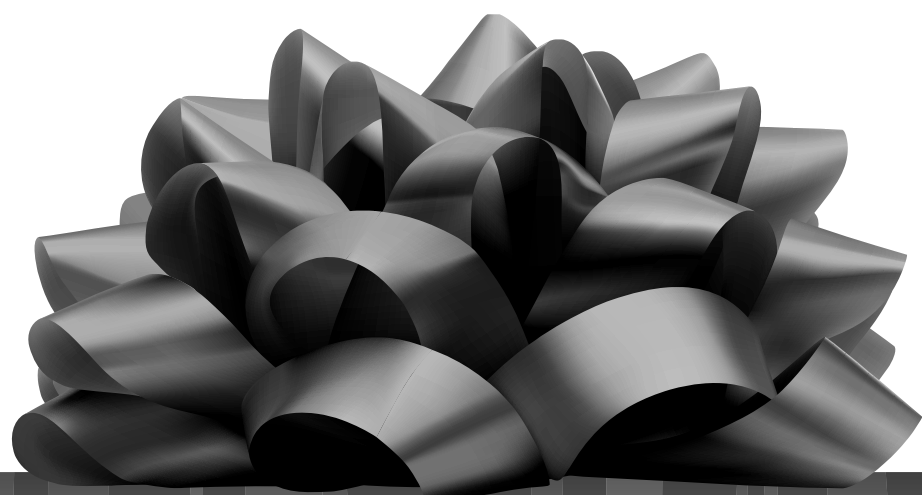

Johnson also did a snow angel and his was legal because it was a single-person celebration — even though he'd actually stepped out at the 4.

Robinson's cost his team 15 yards, and the 49ers settled for a field goal on their way to extending their franchise-record losing streak to 11 games.

In Atlanta, the Falcons were burned by Eric Berry's pick-6, then were done in by their own strategy in a 29-28 loss to Kansas City.

After pulling within 27-22 with 12 minutes left, the Falcons went for 2 and failed.

So, when they went ahead 28-27 with 4:34 remaining, they had to go for 2, and Berry took it back 99 yards for the first game-winning pick-2 in NFL history.
