

EDITORIAL NOTE

A case of plagiarism: “3D APPLICATIONS IN DISASTER MITIGATION AND MANAGEMENT: CORE RESULTS OF DITAC PROJECT” published in ISPRS 8th 3D GeoInfo Conference & WG II/2 Workshop, XL-2/W2, 2013 WG II/2, 173–177

K. Kaptan¹, ²U. Kavlak, ³O. Yilmaz, ⁴O. T. Celik, ⁵A. K. Manesh, ⁶P. Fischer, ⁷O. Lupescu, ⁸P. L. Ingrassia, ⁹W. J. Ammann, ¹⁰M. Ashkenazi, ¹¹C. Arculeo, ¹²R. Komadina, ¹³K. Lechner, ¹⁴G. v. Arnim, ¹⁵B. Hreckovski

^{1, 2, 3, 4}AFAM-Disaster Education, Application and Research Center, Istanbul Aydin University, Turkey

⁵Pre-hospital and Disaster Medicine Centre, Sweden

⁶UKBH University Clinic Bonn, Germany

⁷URGENTA – Clinical Emergency Hospital, Bucharest, Romania

⁸CRIMEDIM – Università del Piemonte Orientale, Novara, Italy

⁹Global Risk Forum GRF Davos, Switzerland

¹⁰Bonn International Center for Conversion, Germany

¹¹Hanover Associates, United Kingdom

¹²General and Teaching Hospital Celje, Slovenia

¹³Disaster German Aerospace Center, Germany

¹⁴Disaster Nations Health Career School of Management gGmbH, Germany

¹⁵Croatian Urgent Medicine and Surgery Association, Croatia

Commission II, WG II/2

After its publication in the ISPRS Archives, it was discovered that this paper was produced as a result of a plagiarism attempt by the authors. The original source of the paper can be found below:

Barbara Theilen-Willige & Tuncay Taymaz (2006b). Remote Sensing and Geographic Information System (GIS) Technologies for Natural Hazard Risk Site Detection, 17th International Geophysical Congress and Exhibition of Turkey, Extended Abstracts Book, 3A-1, pp 1–7, November 14–17, 2006, Ankara – Turkey.

We would like to acknowledge that, as the organisation committee of the 3D GeoInfo 2013 conference, we are fully against all unethical scientific behaviour including plagiarism. We deplore this behaviour of the authors.