Private aviators, on the other hand, were excited about the new facility and its modern amenities. The airfield hosted many record breaking flights, time records, and air races between the two World Wars. Howard Hughes used Floyd Bennett for his around-the-world flight. Female pilots Amelia Earhart, Jackie Cochran, and Laura Ingalls made historic flights out of Floyd Bennett.

The airfield became a base for the aviation units of both the Coast Guard and the NYPD, and was used as a Naval Air Station during the World War. After the war, it was used until it was Barren Island was once one of many small islands that filled the marshes of Jamaica Bay. Up until the mid-nineteenth century most of the area around the marsh was farmland used for grazing land for livestock. Local farmers raised and collected oysters, which were abundant. Eventually this place became a hiding place to dump things people didn't want to see. One way this happened was through waste management. The answer was to transform waste in a process known as "waste reduction", basically, cooking the waste and garbage into raw materials that could be reused.
