In the immortal words of the not so immortal Calvin Coolidge, "Nothing in the world can take the place of persistence. . . . Persistence and determination alone are omnipotent." The purpose of the Undergraduate Review is to provide Illinois Wesleyan students with a forum to showcase the fruits of their intellectual persistence. With this year's issue, we hope our own persistence has allowed that purpose to be fulfilled.

However, it was not our persistence alone that made this publication possible. Thanks go out to Dean Hurwitz and Student Senate for their generous support, and to Kari and Steve for their noble efforts at the computer terminal, and the rest of the staff for their editorial efforts. It is our hope that the UR will garner increased support from the student body and engender more involvement in intellectual pursuits in the Wesleyan community.
