THE SIERRA STUDENT COALITION: SUSTAINABILITY UNITES, DIVERSE INTERESTS CONNECT, AND THE CAMPUS BECOMES GREENER

Megan Mealer and Rebecca Gearhart*

Sociology and Anthropology Department, Illinois Wesleyan University

The Sierra Student Coalition, or SSC, contains a diversity of environmentally aware people whose main goal is to promote sustainability and show how protecting the environment affects everything in the realm of human condition. The people in the group make choices in their own lives and encourage and influence others to make the same choices in order to better the life of the earth and in turn, everyone in the world. Because of their awareness of how harming the environment affects people, nature, and the earth in general, they want to share this awareness with everyone in order to realize the goal of an over all healthier, cleaner world. Though combing the diversity of interests into one cohesive action may be an obstacle, the general goal of sustainability brings the members of the group together to share with the campus the purpose of sustainability and the reason why everything is affected by environmental issues.
