Rowan School Board Hires New Principals

Rowan County School Supt. Clifford Cassidy said today that the Board of Education has hired Buford Risner, former Superintendent of Bath County Schools, as the new Rowan County High School principal.

The board hired Risner at its July 6 meeting. Published reports that Risner had been employed by the Rowan County School Board appeared in newspapers the latter part of June but when contacted at that time Supt. Cassidy set out that no one had been selected by the School Board for the job. He added, however, that Risner was under consideration, and went on to say the board had interviewed five applicants.

A vacancy was created at the local high school when Principal Sherman Arnett was transferred to the Tilden Hodge Elementary School as a 7th grade teacher. Supt. Cassidy also said today that Foley Partin had been hired as principal at Haldeman School.

Two More Rowan Counties Have Licenses Revoked

The Traffic Coordinating Council, Frankfort, reported today that two more Rowan Counties have had their driver licenses revoked - both for conviction of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

They are -
Jeff Roger Stamper, 27, RFD 4, Morehead, revoked until Dec. 15.

Virgil Clay Wright, 38, Green Street, Morehead, revoked until June 22, 1971. The Council also reported that Harold Thomas Light, 48, Flemingsburg, has lost his license to drive until Nov. 15 because of making a false application.

In a somewhat unusual ruling of the Kentucky law, Roger Forest Hobbs, 22, Morehead, was given an indefinite revocation for failing to meet a court civil judgment resulting from an auto accident. The license of Carson Charles Brancham, 53, Olive Hill, was revoked until Oct. 26 for drunken driving.

Short-Weights And Tobacco Nesting Appear Prevalent

By Jack Lewyn

Two burley tobacco marketing problems - short-weights and nesting - have become serious enough to prompt industry leaders to develop stricter actions to overcome them. W. S. Stalon, executive secretary of the Burley Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association, said in a recent report that the heavy take of the co-op of burley from the 1969 crop underscored the problem of short-weights, the loss of weight in tobacco baskets on warehouse floors between the time of sale and the time they are moved to the association's buyer operations.

As sales proceed and the co-op's take increases, baskets of burley cannot be removed fast enough to avoid a backlog, Stalon said, and shrinkage reported often exceeds the two percent tolerance allowed in the contract with warehouses.

In a year of a heavy take of burley under price supports, such as 1969, the redryers cannot get the tobacco off of the warehouse floors without delay.

To minimize the problem in the future, Stalon told warehousemen, it may be necessary to reduce the number of sales hours, cut the maximum weight per basket offered for sale, or request marketing holidays.

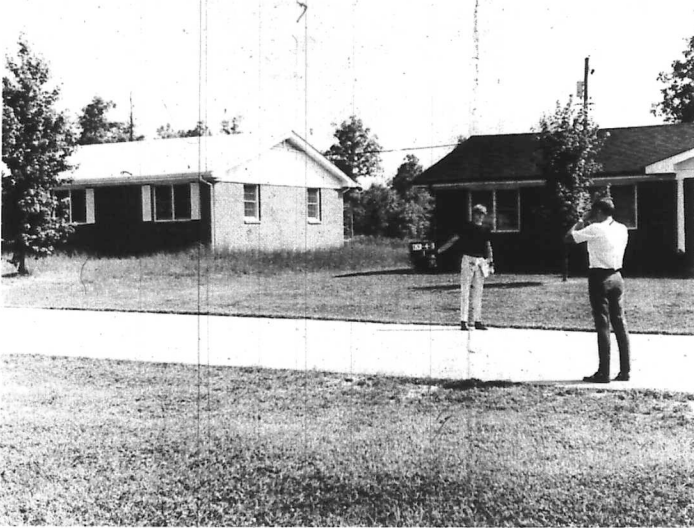

"The movement of price-support tobacco from warehouse floors may be handled with a minimum risk of loss, and 1969 showed us how serious the problem can be," he said.

"Therefore, we must consider moves to reduce the chances of a 1969 crop. The Burley Co-op, which administers the price support program in Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia and Missouri, is equally concerned about the problem of nesting, concealment of foreign matter or inferior grades within a basket.

The co-op returned a total of 546,823 pounds of "nests" to warehouses from its price-support take of the 1969 crop.

"We have a full accounting of the nests at all marketing centers and warehouses," Stalon said, "and there are several where the situation is particularly bad. To end this practice, it appears that some penalty may be necessary, and those growers and warehousemen who condone this practice should be forewarned of it."

Albert G. Clay, chairman of the board of the Burley Auction Warehouse Association, told warehousemen that "nesting" defeats the purpose of the price support program and urged them to stress to growers that the practice cannot be tolerated.

Steps Toward Rowan Re-Assessment

These two men are part of the force of workers that are mapping Rowan County in connection with the 100 percent re-assessment of all county property. Virgil Phillips, who has charge of the re-assessment said that every piece of property, motor vehicle etc. in Rowan County will be re-assessed. Phillips, a representative of State Revenue Commissioner James E. Lackett, has taken over the Tax Commissioner's Office here in the courthouse.

MSU Post Summer Dates Rescheduled

Morehead State University's post summer session, originally set for Aug. 10-26, has been rescheduled Aug. 10-20.

The term was shortened because of MSU's new academic calendar which opens the fall semester Aug. 24.

Classes will meet longer each day to compensate for the shorter session, according to Monroe Wicker, director of school relations.

The post summer term is being abandoned after this summer. It will be replaced next year by a three-week "intermission" which convenes before the regular summer term.

Costs Rise For College Education

This fall, a greater proportion of Rowan County's young people than ever before will be heading for college, mostly at Morehead State University.

And, for the parents of most of them, it presents a bigger financial problem than before because college costs have been zooming skyward.

The result is that funds they had set aside for the purpose are no longer adequate. Added to this is the fact that bank loans are harder to get, interest rates are high and Federal aid to needy students has been reduced.

Hарdest hit by the mounting costs and the tight money conditions are those families that have more than one child going to college at the same time. They have to dig even deeper.

Based upon the number of Rowan County students heading for college and upon the new tuition rates, local families will be carrying a $1,079,000 load for the coming academic year, it is estimated.

Data on college enrollments for the coming semester and on the costs involved were compiled by the U.S. Office of Education, the Census Bureau and others. Their figures indicate that 1,940,000 youths will be starting college this year, bringing the total enrollment to a record 7,700,000.

Rowan County's contingent will total 420, it is estimated. This compares with 170 in the local area who were going to college in 1969.

How much they will have to pay will depend upon where they are going. The range is broad.

At state colleges and other publicly-supported institutions the average outlay will be about $1,250 for tuition, fees, room and board. That is the price for those living in the state. For non-residents it is higher.

Private colleges also vary widely in cost, the average being about $2,720, the Office of Education states.

But that's not all. Then comes the cost of transportation, books, clothing, recreation and miscellaneous items.

Taking everything into consideration, the total cost of a year in a public college at this time is around $1,750 and, in a private college, $3,460.

Triplett Creek Bid Is Approved

Hospital Foundation Will Elect Five Members To Board

Northeast Kentucky Hospital Foundation, Inc., will elect five members to three year terms on the Board of Directors at the annual membership meeting set for this Saturday (4 p.m.) in the Health Center on Sun Street.

The membership is composed of all who contributed the more than $300,000 in 1969 that was the crucial community effort for establishment of St. Claire Medical Center, and almost a quarter million dollars in the now-underway hospital expansion.

Following election of the five board members, officers for the coming year will be named. Only the 15 members of the Board are eligible to vote for officers.

The officers are - Dr. C. Louise Caudill, President; Vice-President, John Rogers, General Manager, Lee Clay Products Company, Clearfield; Secretary, W. E. Crutcher, Morehead Publisher; and Treasurer, E. M. Hogge, Morehead, District Attorney.

Dr. Caudill, who headed the 1960 fund campaign, has either been President or Vice President of the Foundation since its inception 11 years ago. Crutcher and Hogge have held the positions of Secretary and Treasurer, respectively since the Foundation was established.

Crutcher has always appointed Mrs. Eleanor Queen, Cave Run Clinic, as the Recording Secretary.

Mayor Says That Morehead Will Never Again Have A Flood

The 30 year battle to forever prevent floods in Morehead has apparently ended - and favorably so.

Announcement was made in Washington today by Senator John Sherman Cooper and Congressman Carl D. Perkins that the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, Louisville District, had let the contract to widen and straighten Triplett Creek.

The low bid was submitted by Bluegrass Contracting Corporation and Braughton Construction Company, both of Lexington. Their bid was $51,949, probably below estimates. This is for widening the creek to 200 feet from Bridge Street in Morehead to Brady Curve, but does not include re-location of the Morehead and North Fork railroad bridge, or the Triplett highway bridge at Clearfield.

Mayor William H. Layne said that the Clearfield highway bridge would be lengthened, and a temporary bridge erected during construction. He said the State had allocated $75,000 for the project. The railroad bridge will be longer and the cost of this will be defrayed by the U. S. Army Engineers.

The 1939 Flood

The long fight to secure the creek widening can be chronologically cited -

- Although Railroad and Raines Street in Morehead had often had high creek water it was on the night of July 4, 1939 that the real damage came. The National Geographic Magazine reported the "heaviest rainfall ever recorded in the United States" as about six inches fell in the Morehead area within 1 1/2 hours. Triplett Creek went mad, and all of Morehead south of Main Street was flooded. Twenty-five lost their lives and property damage was in the millions as the waters came like a tidal wave. A subsequent federal survey indicated that trees, logs, houses, barns, and animals jammed a mile east of Morehead, and when this broke loose the tremendous wave hit.

- The Morehead News (then the Rowan County News) editorially urged that the only solution was widening and straightening the creek. This was after engineers confirmed that future floods would be prevented if the creek was straightened and widened to 200 feet. Former Congressman Joe B. Bates sought federal funds for the project.

- In 1947 Morehead Mayor William H. Layne again proposed the creek widening as the most urgent business of Council. However, no federal funds were available because of the Korean conflict.

RCHS Band To Attend Music Camp

The Rowan County High School Band under the direction of Mr. James Gallaher, will attend the July 19th - 25th Hemlock Music Camp at Butler State Park.

Mr. Gallaher has attempted contacting each band member but has failed to reach several of them. He asks those members who have not been contacted, to call him, mornings in the band room, or at his home during the evenings.

Gallaher has already had two full band rehearsals and auditions in each section. Those members not contacted will be auditioned as soon as arrangements can be made with them.

The widening and straightening of Triplett Creek is now a reality as the contract has been let. The low bid was submitted by Bluegrass Contracting Corporation and Braughton Construction Company, both of Lexington. Their bid was $51,949. This is for widening the creek to 200 feet from Bridge Street in Morehead to Brady Curve. Mayor William H. Layne said this morning that after meeting with representatives of the contractors he thought the project could be completed by the summer or fall of next year.

Engineers, Louisville district, offered to spend a half-million dollars on the creek widening. Estimates at that time were that the project, including rights-of-way, would cost about $650,000.

In 1961 Congress raised the amount the Corps of Engineers could spend on such projects from $50,000 to a million dollars. Presently, Kentucky's public works program is being cited as an example of the necessity.

In 1962 then Mayor Eldon T. Evans revised the project. "But, he said, "The main reason I seek reelection is to widen and straighten Triplet Creek."

In June of last year the Louisville Corps of Engineers said they would not let until 1970 because of the availability of money. At the meantime, the City borrowed $85,000 for rights-of-way.

This week the Corps followed through and let the contract to the two Lexington contractors. Mayor Layne said this morning that representatives of the contractors had met with him.

Bridges Re-Located

Layne said he understood that the lengthening of the railroad and highway bridges at Clearfield would be finished by the time the creek widening and straightening is completed.

Roughly, the contract calls for re-channeling the creek for about two miles, beginning just above the Morehead State University power plant, and west of the Luther Jayne home at Brady Curve. The new creek bed will be almost straight and 200 feet wide with earthen dikes.

Costs Are Too High... Public Hospitals Have Problem

Public hospitals, the "grande dames" of the health care industry, have reached the crossroads in their long history. An in-depth look at the plight of the tax-supported public hospital is presented in a special issue of Hospitals, Journal of the American Hospital Association released Wednesday.

Their present struggle is seen by some as the long-awaited death rattle in a system of care that has become more and more federal health care institutions provide more than 20 percent of the total health care in the nation.

But Brown explains that the problems facing most city hospitals today are overcrowding, understaffing, obsolescent and outdated facilities, highly fragmented and bureaucratic administration, and woefully inadequate financing.

For years city hospitals were first in everything except the heart of the taxpayer, comments Ray E. Brown, executive vice-president of the Northwestern University-Cook Medical Center.

This does not mean that it has to meet all the hospital needs of the city, but it does mean that it has to meet all the otherwise unmet needs since unmet needs most often are correlated closely with unmet financing.

written by County's former medical director, Robert F. Frank, M.D., indicates that with its decentralization from politics there is finally some hope for Cook County Hospital.

(Unless a taxing district is also created, as usually is the case with a governing commission, the city or county retains the responsibility to finance care for the indigent.)

Many health care experts assign a much larger role to public hospitals than maintaining adequate care for the medically indigent. Some, such as Lester Breslow, M.D., chairman of preventive and social medicine at UCLA, hope that the public hospital will become a "community" hospital.

For years city hospitals were first in everything except the heart of the taxpayer, comments Ray E. Brown, executive vice-president of the Northwestern University-Cook Medical Center.

public hospital will make segregated health care for the poor a matter of history.

The public hospital will doubtless remain the place where the buck stops - where otherwise unmet needs are met. But the AHA Journal analysis shows that experts see an upgrading of health care and a firm refusal to practice second-class medicine as public hospitals begin to gain more autonomy.

Public hospitals have not solved all of the problems, the issue concludes, but more are beginning to find some answers. They are managing not only to preserve their institutions, but in some cases to transform them into leaders in progressive health care.

Editor, The News: Thank you for your article of June 23, covering the Farmers Home Administration loan of $32,600 to Rowan Water, Inc. This article contained excellent summary of the effort and accomplishments of many community-minded citizens during past years in obtaining a rural water distribution system. However, it was incorrect in one detail. Those persons who live in the areas of the planned extensions and who subscribed to a water meter before the loan was obligated paid $30 for this meter. The actual cost of tapping the water main and installing a water meter is more than $50. This does not include the cost of the water main itself. The Farmers Home Administration loan was possible only because some 220 residents of the areas to be served paid a $50 deposit before the water system was a certainty. The loan funds include the cost of construction of the water main and the difference between the $50 paid by each of these subscribers and the actual cost of tapping the water main, purchasing, and installing the water meter. As no additional loan funds are available, it is impossible for Rowan Water, Inc. to sell additional meters for $50. Water meters in the areas which Rowan Water, Inc. is presently serving . . .

Criminal violators, including traffickers in alcoholic beverages in local open territory, are piling gully in the county court, and appealing their cases to the overworked Circuit Court, evidently hoping to wear out the cases in the overloaded high court docket. 5. From what I read in the Morehead News the State Police have run the bootleggers in Rowan County to cover. But, replacing them are the dope peddlers, which is much worse. W. A. Kelsey Lexington, Ky.

FORMER MOREHEADIAN LIKES WYOMING EDITORIAL

Editor, The News: Being from Morehead, a University town, I think it is appropriate that you print the following from the Cheyenne State Tribune: "Today's young people may want to pay heavy attention to a letter written here - and to the circumstances under which it was written. Harold S. Sampson, editor of the Menard-Illinois Times, the award-winning newspaper published by inmates of the Menard State Penitentiary, wrote it. In an editorial which begins: 'Dear Future Establishment,' Sampson warns young people that the future is theirs, and they will have to deal with it under conditions caused by their present actions. . . .

"I wish you could see the long hair and tight pants you with the miniskirt, love beads and boots - have you forgotten that the presidency, the Congress, the Senate, the judiciary and the United States of tomorrow is yours? . . .

"Else, why must you clamor today for the changes you may peacefully, and by choice, bring about in the future? . . .

"What have you accomplished by your riots, your protests, your violence and governmental defiance? Think! Has the establishment toppled, or has it merely been tolerant in its more personal memories of Marxism, goldfishing and panty raids? . . .

"And finally, has it occurred to you that your children may be even more discontent than you are, with the way of life that you are with the mores of the establishment program? . . .

Sampson wrote that young people might very well wonder on what "authority" he offers his advice. "He writes to you more out of shame, not the authority, he has; he addresses you because he is not a member of the so-called establishment. He is a convict who has spent 40 years in defiance of the very establishment you protest. He is a convict who had spent 29 years of his life behind bars because of that defiance. . . .

Sampson wondered whether he and his fellow prisoners might have set a bad example responsible for "your conduct." "Whether you succeed in destroying the establishment, or in slipping in the next cell to this writer by the virtue of your deeds, he feels you should be interested in a conversation overheard the other day: . . .

"Two mothers' sweet old ladies - attending Menard's semi-annual art exhibit, were discussing their sons. The son (of one), apparently, had been involved in the recent university riots. . . .

"One mother said to the other: 'I wish my boy was more like these convicts.' "Now, you think about that!"

SUNDAY SERMON CHILD AND PARENT

Since we live in an age of slogans, try this line: "Fix the child who is juvenile delinquency - have a talk with your child today." It is really a very good idea. A happy home is one of the strongest forces for good in any community. It is not to say that children from happy homes never get into trouble. They do - but the chances are not so great. In a happy home, there is a working relationship between parent and child. Problems are something to be talked about, worked on, and resolved - together. A healthy situation exists - when children do not hesitate to come to their parents, for help and advice. They are certain to find sympathy and understanding, even if there is no quick and ready cure. In a happy home, the parent does not consider it sufficient to say "yes" or "no" or "nothing new." A "why" is equally important. A "why" is equally important. A "why" is equally important. A "why" is equally important. . . .

Warnings could cut storm toll

By JACK GRAEME EDINBURG, Tex. (UPI) - Lack of adequate tornado warnings is partially to blame for the death and devastation wreaked by the freak winds, a self-taught tornado authority says.

Dudley Lynch, 29, of Houston, a former newspaperman, has finished a book for laymen on tornadoes after three years of research, and interviews with about 200 persons all over Texas.

He warned that unless a more efficient warning system is devised, Texans will continue to face tornado mayhem 150 to 200 times yearly.

"Getting a warning to people - and then getting them to act on it - is particularly difficult at night," he said. "Once people turn off their radios or television and go to bed, there is almost no way to warn them of impending peril, Lynch said."

"I think the telephone company may be the answer with some form of warning system that would sound an alarm in the home," he suggested.

Lynch chided Weather Bureau and disaster officials for being so cautious of causing panic that people often don't take warnings seriously.

Lynch first became interested in tornadoes while writing for the Lubbock, Tex., paper in an area often raked by twisters. To his surprise, he found no non-technical information available to laymen on tornadoes in general or Texas tornadoes in particular.

He said people have so little idea of what tornadoes really do that they often take foolish and often fatal delays to watch the funnel approach. By then, it may be too late to seek shelter.

Leech wars on pollution

TOLEDO, OHIO - A microbiologist has enlisted the aid of "a leech that eats bacteria" in the effort to clean up Lake Erie.

The leech-like organism, called bdellovibrio bacteriovorus, is a bacterium that preys upon other bacteria. The powerful tails of the tiny organisms enable them to generate enough force to puncture and destroy their hosts.

Dr. Jeffrey C. Burnham, assistant professor of microbiology at the Medical College of Ohio is studying bdellovibrio with a three-year, $42,000 grant from Owens-Illinois, Inc. He hopes to find a way to use bdellovibrio to infect and destroy algae.

Algae are the aquatic plants thought to be responsible for much of the pollution and pre-mature aging, called eutrophication, affecting Lake Erie. They appear in great "blooms," die, decay, and help fill the lake with organic matter.

Bdellovibrios attack typhoid-causing and other pollutant-associated bacteria strains. Bdellovibrio uses its tail, known as a flagellum, and brute force to drive headlong into a bacterium. Within 30 seconds after it strikes, bdellovibrio begins a corkscrew motion, using force and dissolving enzymes to make its way between the bacterium's cell wall and cell membrane. Lying between the two layers, it begins to reproduce.

In the process, it uses up the contents of the bacteria cell, and produces about half a dozen offspring - all in about four hours time. Finally, the host bacterial cell wall bursts and the new bdellovibrios swim away to attack other cells.

Real estate calls youth

NEW YORK (UPI) - Recent college grads would be wise to get in on the ground floor of a new managerial area that is sure to burgeon in this decade - corporate real estate.

So says Nils A. Lundberg, president of Brooks, Harvey & Co., Inc., real estate financing firm, who advises bright young men and women that real estate offers numerous and challenging opportunities.

Lundberg says that when large corporations become real estate conscious, they find a shortage of people with the expertise and management capability to plan and operate on the required scale. Until recently, there has been little or no training of young executives in creative real estate management, he says.

Insurance Problems

By Gary G. Huddleston

Insurance Commissioner Robert Preston says he's expanding his enforcement division which investigates claims of unfair insurance practices, and he wants to hear from anyone who has a complaint.

Thomas Dixon and Gus T. Petro now process an average of one complaint every 25 minutes of the working day, but the two-man team will be doubled when additional funds become available July 1.

"This is part of the complete revision of Kentucky's insurance code, which became effective June 18," Preston said. "These additional field investigators will enable us to complete all complaints concerning insurance coverage," he said.

"If a particular company or agent is named frequently in correspondence received by our department, a complete investigation will be conducted on each inquiry."

Preston said many persons are surprised at the attention they get after airing their insurance problems to his department.

Dixon, who investigates fire and automobile coverage, explained the best way to compose an effective letter of complaint.

"Confine the letter to the facts and don't get emotional," he advised.

"If a complaint is valid, don't just let off steam and forget it. A sworn affidavit may be required as evidence of an unlawful practice."

Preston warned that if the dispute between an individual and an insurer is factual, his department can't settle it.

"If the disputed point concerns which of two parties to an automobile accident ran a red light, and each points to the other, a jury must decide."

"If a complaint is found, after investigation, to be justified, what action can the Department of Insurance take in behalf of the individual?"

"We communicate with the agent or company and ask that he present evidence supporting his course of action," Preston explained.

"If we determine that the decision was not in accordance with the law, we request that the insurer take corrective action."

"If our request is ignored, we can conduct a hearing to determine if his license to sell insurance in Kentucky should be revoked."

"We find about a 50-50 split," he said. "Half the time the public is right, and half the time the insurer is right."

Petro, who investigates health and life insurance practices, noted there are pleasant moments for one who hears complaints from 8 to 4:30 each day.

"Let's maintain a 'good guy' file, with letters of appreciation from people we have helped," he said.

"After we helped settle a long-standing traffic accident claim for a Somerset lady, she sent us a bouquet of flowers."

"And, a woman from Covington wrote a poem about us after successful settlement of a $90 claim."

Costly To Kentucky ...

Civil Disturbances

Jim Warren

National Guard operations during civil disturbances over the past 16 months have cost the commonwealth over $137,000 according to Mag. Gen. Larry C. Dawson, the state adjutant general.

Dawson said the Department of Military Affairs figures include rations and pay for active duty guardsmen but do not show the cost of fuel and maintenance for vehicles.

The two largest outlays came during the Louisville disturbance in May of 1968 and the recent disturbance on the University of Kentucky campus in Lexington. Costs were $114,386 at Louisville and $15,510 at UK.

Dawson says recent federal pay increases for servicemen have doubled the cost to the state because Kentucky law requires that state active duty pay equal federal pay.

Funding for civil disturbances or disasters is never budgeted. The money must come from the Governor's contingency fund or from Department of Military Affairs funds budgeted for other needs.

GRASS ROOTS

by Roy Stevens
Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation

Farmers, individually and through their farm organizations, have worked for years to improve relations with residents of urban areas.

This effort has taken many forms, including "Nation's Farm City Week" and other special activities aimed at improving communication between the city and country.

Now comes a survey from the highly urbanized state of New Jersey which indicates nonfarm residents think more of farmers than farmers may have imagined.

The survey was conducted in March of this year by Gallup International, and consisted of interviews with nonfarmers to determine their concept of farm people.

The survey found that nonfarmers look upon farm people as hard working, friendly, and honest.

They feel that farmers contribute more than their share to the state's economy, yet believe farmers are more likely to be bad off financially than well off.

They see farmers as small landowners, as older persons, and as being politically conservative.

Over two-thirds of those interviewed believe farmers make less money than do workers on the same level in other fields of endeavor, and only six percent of the respondents said farmers are primarily to blame for high food costs.

Most put the blame for rising food costs on those who perform the "middleman" functions in marketing farm products.

Six out of 10 interviewed think farmers make only 20 cents or less on every dollar spent for food. Some 68 percent feel that farmers do not have enough to say in determining the prices they receive for their products.

While it is difficult to apply the specific findings in New Jersey to agriculture generally, it is probably fair to say the survey represents a number of other areas.

If city dwellers in a state such as New Jersey - which is predominantly urban-oriented - think highly of farmers and are aware of the farm picture, it is not presumptuous to assume that nonfarmers in more rural states such as Kentucky also appreciate farmers and farm problems.

Farmers have built good will by being good farmers and good neighbors, and by telling their story through such programs as Farm City Week.

good public relations are built on performance, not on theatrics.

Farmers know that image is what people see and hear about you; that reputation is what people have been led to think about you; and that character is what you are.

Consumer Protection

By Lewis Sharpley

The Citizens Commission on Consumer Protection has been set up under a new state law consolidating previous agencies under the governor.

The new commission supersedes the Kentucky Consumer Affairs Commission and a similar state consumers agency under the attorney general.

The new agency has a 1970-72 budget of $185,000, voted by the general assembly.

Gov. Louie B. Nunn appointed eight citizen members to the new commission: Mrs. Oscar Sowards, Pikeville, and Mrs. Harold Mullins, Louisville, both prominent in the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs; Mack Morgan Jr., Lexington, of the Kentucky Retail Federation; Larry Allen, London, University of Kentucky 1970 law graduate who recently served as a legislative intern; Miss Marjorie M. Parker, Hopkinsville, school principal; the Rev. John Putka, Covington, theology instructor at Thomas More College; Mrs. Coy Ball, former president of the Daviess County medical auxiliary; and Oden Howell Sr., founder of the Louisville Builders Exchange.

"I have selected qualified and truly interested citizens whose concerns are varied and broadly representative of Kentucky consumers. I know they will work to help every Kentuckian get the best return for his money," the governor said.

Atty. Gen. John Breckinridge is an ex officio member of the commission.

Urges Industry To Study State For New Plants

Commerce Commissioner Paul W. Grubbs, today (6-30) announced a three-month national advertising campaign urging industry to re-finance and relocate in Kentucky.

In a press conference at the Capitol Tuesday, Grubbs said, "At a time when the economy is apparently catching its breath, we are inviting hundreds of industries to use the 'Kentucky plan' to get ready for the strong upsurge that is ahead."

He explained the "Kentucky plan" as the use of industrial revenue bonds, sold by local municipalities to finance industrial construction and the purchase of equipment for firms wishing to relocate in the commonwealth.

Also included in the plan is the use of funds available from the Kentucky Industrial Development Finance Authority (KIDFA), which can finance up to 40 percent of the total cost of buildings and grounds for qualifying industries, he said.

Grubbs noted that the new program resulted from recent trips to Midwest industrial centers where "it was obvious that a large number of industries are now fully saddled with obsolete buildings in congested areas with insufficient labor, but are in need of working capital."

Commissioner Miller on Kentucky Agriculture

by J. Robert (Bob) Miller

The Kentucky Agricultural Council is helping develop goodwill ties between Kentucky and Japan.

Miss Beulah Sparrow, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Sparrow, Anderson County, is now in Japan as one of 17 American youths participating in the International Farm Youth Exchange Program. The Kentucky Agricultural Council is helping to sponsor her in the IFYE program.

Miss Sparrow will spend six months in Japan during which time she will live with six different families.

These young people serve as goodwill ambassadors for the United States. The foreign families learn much about the United States as well as the home states of the individual exchange students.

Of course, the students themselves learn much about the countries in which they visit. Not only does this develop a better understanding of the lives and habits of those living in other lands, but it can instill a greater appreciation for international relations.

Miss Sparrow is well-qualified to represent Kentucky and the United States in a foreign country. She has been active in 4-H Club work, and has attended a number of 4-H leadership conferences. She attends the University of Kentucky, where she is a business administration major.

The Kentucky Agricultural Council, which is comprised of representatives from various agricultural groups and agencies, has been sponsoring an IFYE student from Kentucky for a number of years. This is but one of the Council's many fine projects, and one I feel to be important.

Whenever we have an opportunity to serve our youth, particularly those who have demonstrated a willingness to serve, I feel we should do so... as the Council is doing with its IFYE program.

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES - The Morehead Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses is finalizing its plans to attend a four day training program to be held in Pittsburgh, Pa. and in Detroit, Michigan.

Mr. Daniel W. Price, presiding minister of the group, in discussing this announcement to the congregation pointed to the challenge to Christian thinking and Christian work in the face of the rising tide of a breakdown in law and order.

The object of the program, Mr. Price said, is to equip every one of the preaching fellowship of Jehovah's Witnesses in the principle use of the Bible as a help in fortifying the spiritual morale of people in our community.

Mr. and Mrs. Price will be taking Miss Theresa Roe with them to Pittsburgh. There they will meet Mr. Price's father and brother, who are both ministers.

The families of Mr. Benny Flannery, Mr. R. E. Roe, Mr. Bert Blankenbecker, Mr.

Avery Clark and Mr. James Perry will all be attending the program in Detroit. Most of those attending the Detroit convention will take the opportunity to visit relatives there.

The size of the two conventions are expected to average 25,000 to hear the message on Sunday entitled, "Saving The Human Race - In The Kingdom Way". The theme of the conventions will be "Men of Goodwill" emphasizing the need for more love in the world.

The Morehead Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses is happy to announce that the James Harman family has moved to Morehead from Lebanon, Pennsylvania, to help the congregation in its public service program.

Mr. Harman will be an assistant to the presiding minister. He has been an active Jehovah's Witness since 1956, and has served in various capacities in the different congregations that he has attended.

The rest of the Harman family will be cooperating with the local congregation in its efforts to interest families in home Bible study. Mrs. Amy Harman is very active in this Bible educational program. The two Harman boys, Bob and Mike, will be attending Rowan County schools this fall. They are both enrolled in the congregation's Friday night Ministry Improvement program.

The family will be attending an advanced seminar in Hampton, Virginia later this summer. At the four day seminar they will spend seven hours daily attending lectures and seeing demonstrations and dramas on how to better apply Bible principles in our modern day.

Conduct Funeral For Mrs. Della Armstrong, 79

Let's face it, Bank Credit Cards can't do everything.

Bank Credit Cards can't put pie in the sky or chicken in every pot. They can't even make money grow on trees.

Yet there are some people who would try to tell you that credit cards actually cause inflation.

Nothing could be farther from the truth. Because, using the example we're most familiar with, BankAmericard® helps merchants save money by reducing the operating costs of bookkeeping and credit services. The tendency is for merchants to pass this saving along to the customer. So when the increasing costs of labor, materials and services are pushing prices upward, the net effect of credit cards is a stabilizing one.

Bank Credit Cards don't burn holes in peoples' pockets, either.

Based on our experiences with BankAmericard, it appears that most cardholders tend to use a Bank Credit Card as a budgeting tool; a way to both watch and control spending. Each month, cardholders can see on a single, itemized statement exactly how much was spent. If spending has been higher than the budget permits, they spend less.

And, despite what you may have heard, a lost or stolen card can't put you in the poorhouse.

Technically speaking, you are not liable for any unauthorized purchases made with your card if the loss or theft is reported to the bank within forty-eight hours of its occurrence.

However, when we made BankAmericard available to people in the Morehead area, we wanted to make certain that it was a safe, convenient means of credit.

Not a liability.

So, in the many months that Morehead area families have had BankAmericards in their hands issued by the Citizens Bank, not a one of them has had to pay when, or if, their card fell into the wrong hands.

Now let's talk about what Bank Credit Cards can do.

We feel that Bank Credit Cards, especially BankAmericard, have had quite an influence.

We don't call the Citizens BankAmericard the Smart Money+ for nothing. It has brought a new sophistication and accuracy to budgeting for thousands of families.

BankAmericard is used by millions coast to coast. It's honored in many foreign countries for nearly every type of purchase imaginable.

It can be a special help in an emergency when you need cash. And it can even help you save money when there's a good sale and you're low on cash.

BankAmericard provides more convenient spending; less need for cash and checks and a smart way to control spending. Yet, for all that it can do, it costs absolutely nothing to get a BankAmericard.

As we said before, thousands of Morehead Area families are enjoying the benefits, advantages and conveniences of BankAmericard. If you don't have one, it may be because we accidentally missed you the first time around. That's no problem, because it's easy to apply for a BankAmericard. Just pick up the simplified application form at any BankAmericard merchant's or at the Citizens Bank. Then complete it and send it in.

Now we know there's been some confusion about Bank Credit Cards. We hope this message has helped clarify the situation. And, above all, we hope that we're satisfying you, the consumer. We encourage you to write, giving us your opinion about BankAmericard. Your letter will be held in confidence.

Hello Dolly! Hello Colonel!

By Helen Price Stacy

Something new has been added to Dolly. She's now a Kentucky Colonel.

At last Thursday night's opening of "Hello Dolly!" at the Jenny Wiley Music Theatre at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park near Prestonsburg, Parks Commissioner W. James Host returning to his native Eastern Kentucky, saw a superb performance then presented Margaret Silbar of Lexington, star of Dolly, a Kentucky Colonel's commission from Governor Louie B. Nunn.

Commissioner Host also presented a colonelcy to actor-manager director C. Mitchell Douglas of Chapel Hill, N.C., who is in his third season with theater at Jenny Wiley.

Opening night was a sparkler in many ways. Stars shone over the amphitheater in the beautiful cove hollow surrounded by green hills. The cast and crew came through with an enthusiastic, entertaining performance.

Adding luster to the production was film and TV star Thomas Kirk, a native of Louisville, but who seems more like an Eastern Kentuckian because of his father Louis Kirk of Paintsville, and employee of the

Kentucky Offers Rehabilitation For Users Of Drugs

Gov. Louie B. Nunn has requested the transfer of some drug abusers from the jurisdiction of the Department of Corrections to the Department of Mental Health.

The governor said he feels Kentucky's new drug control law, passed by the General Assembly, is a step forward in correcting drug abuse among young people.

"Parents who are reluctant to submit their sons and daughters to prison terms will be more willing to put their children in medical facilities," he said.

The new law calls for medical treatment for first-time conviction on marijuana usage charges.

Prior to June 18 when the new law (SB 274) went into effect, many drug offenders were classified as felons and in most cases sentenced to prison terms with little chance for the professional rehabilitation they will receive today.

Nunn said the spirit of the new law required a retrospective look at similar past offenders who have been sentenced to confinement in one of the state penal institutions.

For that reason, the state parole board will begin on July 1 to interview those who fall within the scope of the new law. Each offender will be considered on an individual basis and if granted parole will then be referred to the Department of Mental Health for professional treatment.

At the end of the treatment period, and upon recommendation of the Department of Mental Health, the individual will get a final discharge from parole.

The inter-agency cooperation of the state parole board and the Department of Mental Health will give those young people the opportunity to return sooner to society as productive citizens.

Parole Board Chairman, Glenn Wade, called the new law a model for the treatment of dangerous drug offenders.

"This innovative Kentucky law provides help rather than punishment for many first time offenders. This is probably the finest approach any state has for early drug users. As so many of these abusers are young, the majority under 26 years of age, they will be given a chance for rehabilitation and a successful return to society," Wade said.

Floyd County park, and his mother Lucy Day Kirk who was born in Elliott County and grew up in Morehead.

The musical, in a sense, belongs to Dolly, but in addition to Miss Silbar and Messrs. Douglas and Kirk, beauty and talent were added by Connie O'Connell of Tennessee as Mrs. Malloy and even by the single appearance of Carolyn Kohl as Mrs. Rose. Two of the cast who had little to say came across through their acting—Chris Newland with Ermengarde's well-timed wails and Ron Paolillo (Barnaby) with scene-stealing talent.

One thing that makes each of the summer's productions outstanding is use of talented performers in a variety of roles. A leading performer in Dolly might play a bit part and play it well in another of the season's four musicals. He might also serve as a member of the production crew.

When Host complimented the troupe for its enthusiasm and wholesome entertainment, he correctly surmised that the versatility of Jenny Wiley performers might be their Eastern Kentucky stairway to Broadway.

Cordial welcomes were extended to opening nighters by Theater President Hubbard Francis Jr. and Prestonsburg Mayor Dr. George Archer who praised the troupe and also officials at Frankfort "who have been most cooperative to see that our summer music theater is a success." Park Manager R. S. Copeland was recognized, an orchestra from Morehead State University provided musical accompaniment and everyone enjoyed a delightful opening night.

But none more than the 36 senior citizens who traveled from Hamilton, Ohio, by charter bus to Grandview State Park, Beckley, W. Va. to take in "Hatfields and McCoy's," then to Jenny Wiley State Resort Park for "Hello Dolly!" and on to Harrodsburg for "Legend of Daniel Boone."

Group guides were Fern Frost of Hamilton, a kinsman of the poet Robert Frost. Also among first nighters were Sister Kathrine Segnitz, daughter of Dr. Richard H. Segnitz, Lexington, and four other Sisters, all nurses at Our Lady of The Way Hospital, Martin, Ky.; Lena Rivers McClure of Miami and West Liberty who is a former president of the Florida State Speech Association; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Waters, Louisville teachers; and Mrs. Frankie Jahow and granddaughter Tammie of Phoenix.

Of course, to theater goes the play's the thing . . . but what a splendid time to look around, enjoy Kentucky's resort parks, shrines, old homes, historical spots, food, and vast recreational facilities. One family from Cincinnati was not sure which was the bigger attraction: the theater or the food at May Lodge.

There are many historical places in and around Prestonsburg that could be included on a theater itinerary. Garfield House and May House could add to a child's knowledge of regional history.

The trail taken by Jenny Wiley in her capture and subsequent escape from Indians could be explored, as well as the Wiley burial ground. Not far from the park is the famous Ivy Mountain battleground . . . there is the Big Sandy River with its boating history and legend—a waterway traveled by Daniel Boone and his family.

Should more of the Boone story be desired, a vacationing family could travel the Mountain Parkway to the Bluegrass and south on U.S. 127 to Harrodsburg where "Legend of Daniel Boone" plays nightly (except Mondays) through Sept. 7.

It would be difficult to find a more entertaining musical than Dolly which will continue at the Jenny Wiley amphitheater Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays through July 11.

At about lamp lighting time each theater night when the sun has slipped behind a green hill, stage lights go on, the band begins and another performance of Hello Dolly! gets under way.

Even Carol, Pearl and Ethel would be proud of the way it's done in the Kentucky hills.

ROWAN CHAMPION . . . The Tildon Hogge 5th Grade Club which was judged as the county's most outstanding 4-H group in the annual Kentucky Utilities Company 4-H Contest was among the award recipients at a KU recognition banquet in Mayfield. From left - Cecil Wettle, Jr., club president; Cecil Wettle, Sr., Geneva Wettle and Mrs. Eugenia Brown, 4-H leaders; Vanessa Brown, club secretary; Janis Nukes, extension intern trainee, and Champ Clarke, KU farm service adviser who was master of ceremonies.

JOURNEYMEN

Bobby Lord, Decca Recording Artist and Grand Ole Opry Star, will appear on July 18, at the Northeast Gateway Fair.

A singing career that began for Bobby Lord with his own television show "Bobby Lord's HomeFolks Show" while he was a Freshman at the University of Tampa has skyrocketed to a position on the world famous Grand Ole Opry and his own syndicated TV show now seen in forty markets in the States and thirty-four markets overseas.

Bobby's network TV appearances include "Dick Clark Show", "American Swingaround", "The Paul White Show" and "Julie Show" on ABC-TV where he was a featured performer for five years prior to joining the Opry.

Manmoth record sells like "Hawkeye", "Without Your Love", "Life Can Have Meaning", "Charlotte" and "Live Your Life Out Loud" have helped establish the Decca Recording Artist as one of the most versatile performers in the music business today.

Bobby's busy schedule of personal appearances, television and recording leave him little time to spend with his wife Moelle and their three children and at his favorite sport of fishing.

The Journeymen, pictured at left are one of the finest country music bands on tour today.

This group has won wide acclaim for their fine back up work with many of the Nashville stars.

The Journeymen have been together for several years and have toured so extensively throughout the midwest at fairs, festivals and celebrations and special events.

Don't miss the Journeymen when they appear in your area on July 18, at the Northeast Gateway Fair.

Health . . . for all

Emphysema is one of the fastest growing causes of death in the United States. The cause of the crippling lung disease is not known. Not yet. But clues are appearing. An itching finger points to air pollution and smoking.

Recent experiments with dogs show that those who were trained to smoke heavily developed emphysema. And in America's most polluted city, New York, the death rate from the disease has risen 50 percent in the last ten years.

People who smoke and live in polluted cities put themselves in double jeopardy.

The symptoms of emphysema—shortness of breath, chronic cough, and a tendency to tire easily—are often confused with another disease caused by cigarette smoking and aggravated by air pollution, chronic bronchitis.

But bronchitis, which is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes, is subject to treatment. There is no known cure for emphysema.

In emphysema, the tiny air sacs in the lungs lose their elasticity and tear. Although some treatment is available, the damage to the lungs is irreversible. Used air cannot be breathed out. The heart must work harder to pump oxygen-starved blood to needy body tissues. Death often results from respiratory failure or an overtaxed heart.

Quitting smoking and cleaning the polluted air can help prevent emphysema.

For more information about these and other lung disorders, check with your tuberculosis and respiratory disease association. It's a matter of life and breath.

Set For July 14 ...

Milk Hearing

The U.S. Department of Agriculture will hold a public hearing July 14 in Clayton, Mo. (near St. Louis), to consider amending milk classification provisions of seven federal marketing orders. It will begin at 10 a.m. in the Colony Inn, 7730 Bon Homme Ave.

The orders affected are the Louisville-Lexington-Evansville, Paducah, Chicago Regional, Southern Illinois, Central Illinois, St. Louis-Ozarks, and Indiana orders.

Officials of the USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service said federal milk marketing orders set minimum prices to be paid to dairy farmers for the milk they sell to dealers doing business in marketing areas covered by federal orders. The dealers must pay for the milk according to how it is used.

Generally, there are two milk use categories—milk sold for fluid or bottling use (Class I), and milk sold for use in manufactured dairy products (Class II).

A principal issue at the hearing will be the proposal by major dairy farmer cooperatives to establish a new intermediate use class to include all cream products, eggnog, frozen desserts, all cheese products except American-type cheese, and evaporated and condensed milk.

The new Class II would be priced 10 cents over the Minnesota-Wisconsin price series for the month. The latter reflects the average price paid by Minnesota and Wisconsin plants for manufacturing grade milk.

The cooperatives also propose a Class III category which essentially would be limited to butter, dry milk products and American-type hard cheeses. The price in each order now applies to milk going into these products would be continued.

Other proposals would include milk for yogurt in Class I, and adopt a single butterfat differential to handlers and producers that would be 11.5 percent of the Chicago 92-score butter price.

A number of proposals from other dairy farmer cooperative associations would provide about the same changes in milk

Handler groups have submitted a number of proposals calling for variations in the milk use class designations of some of the products as proposed by the dairy farmer groups. Also, another proposal of handlers would limit the Class II price to not more than 10 cents over the Class III price.

During Locust Year ...

Blackberries Are Safe

Many superstitions surrounded the 17-year cicadas which have appeared in many sections of the state this year and none are more whimsical than that which holds that in "locust year" it is unsafe to pick and eat wild blackberries.

This, of course, is pure fancy and for those concerned it is no more factual than the belief entertained by some that because of a "W" design on their wings, locusts presage war or want. It is the contentiousness and lack of good husbandry on the part of men and not designs on the wings of an insect that bring on conflict and poverty.

You can take this from J. P. E. Willet, an early 19th-century entomologist and Baptist preacher who told his congregation one Sunday morning during a "locust year" to forget such stuff.

"To believe such superstitions," he explained "is not only weak and unreasonable, but also wicked and blasphemous."

"Not even the holiest man," he added, "has been able or permitted to see the future and to assert that some insect has his gift to it to impeach God's wisdom."

The origin of the belief that locusts contaminate blackberries and make them unsafe to eat is a bit obscure, but a hint is given in the writings of an early Kentucky chronicler who in an 1833 commentary on the appearance of periodical cicadas, stated they were accompanied by "host of stinkbugs" that fouled up the blackberry crop.

Since in that day people set great store by wild fruits and berries as a supplement to their diet, this was a sort of a mild calamity and hence the superstition. It is a fact, however, and as any blackberry picker knows, that stink bugs habitually sip ripe blackberry juice and often make the berries unpalatable. Entomologists of all degrees of rectitude and formal training concur that both jarflies which are with us every year, and cicadas that come periodically, are absolutely harmless except for drilling holes in tender tree limbs.

Their noisy singing may get on the nerves, but they are not poisonous, do not bite or sting, and are no more a prophet of war or want than a housefly that also has a "W" on its wings. If cicadas were poisonous, there wouldn't be a jaybird or a catfish left in the country after a locust year. Both heartily love to eat cicadas. It is also said that during a locust year, some tribes of American Indians once roasted locusts like chestnuts and ate them with gusto.

So for all concerned or fearful of eating blackberries this year because of locusts, discard the old superstition. To uphold it is to be deprived of a lot of good jelly, jam, cobbler pie, and perhaps some superb homemade wine for the stomach's sake.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the scientific name for the periodical cicada is "Magicicada septendecim." The name seems most appropriate because in view of all the curious legends surrounding it and its appearance, the locust is indeed, a magic insect.

Farm Barn Advertising

By Gary G. Huddleston

Barn advertising, perhaps the first mass commercial attempt to woo the motorist's dollar, is on the decline in Kentucky.

The familiar slogans, once boldly emblazoned on roofs, sides or ends of farm outbuildings, have become less effective as a sales media in the eyes of advertisers, as rural highway traffic is diminished by the expanding interstate system.

Federal legislation in 1966 prohibiting the barnyard artwork within 660 feet of interstate, toll, limited access, and federal-aid primary roads has forced many advertisers to paint over existing signs and has severely limited new painting.

Tom Boylan, advertising director for Rock City on Lookout Mountain in Tennessee, claims farmers don't build barns close to the road anymore.

"In the old days, we weather generally dictated that incoming trucks or wagons stay near the pavement or risk miring hubcap-deep in the mud," Boylan, whose "See Rock City" is the barn slogan most familiar to commonwealth residents, said. "Now, longer, graveled or paved driveways are not uncommon, and many new barns are barely visible from primary roadways."

Clark Byers, who for 30 years has served as Rock City's only painter, said that repainting older barns can be dangerous.

He has fallen through several roofs, and is understandably hesitant about mounting the older structures.

The Mail Pouch chewing tobacco people, who have promoted their product through barn advertising for 70 years, still view the program as effective, but like Rock City, are finding fewer barns to paint.

David Weiss, advertising director for Mail Pouch in Wheeling, W. Va., said "We sell to rural market, so it is effective for us. But there are only so many people who use the rural roads, and even fewer new."

"We paint for corporate tradition," he added. "We like to keep a little bit of Americana going."

Weiss noted that in the early years of the campaign, farmers whose barns were chosen to be painted received their choice of magazine subscriptions as payment for the rented space.

"Only within the past 20 years has cash payment completely replaced magazines as a rental fee."

Mail Pouch once maintained over 2000 barns, but they now paint an average of just 100 a year. Repainting is required every three to five years.

Taking the cue from such national barnyard ad campaigns, local merchants have decorated barns, silos and cribs with their own messages. In some places many still stand today.

Nobody doubts the effectiveness of roadside advertising. And a message on a barn is more likely to draw the attention of passing motorists than a smaller, strictly commercial billboard.

"But," the ad men say, "our customers just aren't riding through the country as much as they used to."

Your . . . Social Security

By Thomas B. Thompson - Ashland District Mgr. For Social Security information write: District Social Security Office, 145 Carter Avenue - Ashland, Ky. Phone 325-7666.

Social security is for younger families and workers too, according to Thomas B. Thompson, manager of the Ashland district social security office.

Thompson stated that a recent survey disclosed that approximately 69 percent of younger workers surveyed looked on social security primarily as a program for older people, and were not aware that they had a current protection under the program too in case of their disability or death.

"It often happens that in the case of the death of a younger worker his social security is the most valuable single asset that he leaves his family," Thompson stated. He went on to point out that in case of death, survivors benefits for a widow and two children range from a minimum of $66 a month to about $434 a month, with an average of about $292 per month. "This can add up to a lot of money, particularly if the children are quite young," Thompson stated. He went on to state that some 3 million surviving children and widowed mothers get social security each month.

Thompson stressed further that if the worker becomes disabled social security can help provide support for both the worker and his family, with benefits ranging from a minimum of $66 to a maximum of $434 a month, with an average of about $273 a month.

"Some 2 1/2 million disabled workers and their dependents receive benefits each month," Thompson stated.

NAMED FOR HENRY KNOX

Fort Knox, established in 1918, was named in honor of Henry T. Knox, Revolutionary War general and first secretary of war. It contains 106,000 acres and the U.S. gold repository, a fortified bullion vault housing more of the U.S. gold reserve.

BARNYARD BILLBOARD-Barn advertising is effective, say rural merchants, but fewer people drive the country roads now. Like covered bridges and the general store, a few remain as monuments to the pre-interstate route automotive age. (Karen Tam Photo)

His 54-hole total was eight strokes better than runner-up Wally Rose of Lexington who carded a 221. Tied 11 strokes back at 224 were Wayne Martin of Pikeville and Bob Lepping of Louisville. Martin won a playoff for third place.

Spannuth, who also won the championship last year, recently finished 12th in the NCAA Invitational Golf Tournament last weekend with a three-over-par 213.

The 20-year-old physical education major from Anderson, Ind. holds the MSU course record of nine-under-par 61.

Winners of lower flights in the third annual tournament included:

Morehead Has Three NCAA Baseball Leaders

Three Morehead State University players are among leaders in final college division baseball statistics released by the NCAA.

Gary Cress, sophomore third baseman from Salisbury, N.C., finished 14th in the nation in hitting with an average of .438.

Cress and Val Falcone, freshman centerfielder from Bethesda, Md., tied for seventh in runs batted in with 33 each. Falcone also finished seventh nationally in home runs.

Rense Stephenson, junior first baseman from South Portsmouth, was eighth in doubles with nine.

The Eagles of Coach Sonny Allen had an 18-9 record this season and landed in third place in the OVC's Eastern Division.

HEAVY USAGE

The average American now uses over one ton of wood in the form of paper, lumber and other wood-based products each year. The growing of one ton of wood requires consumption by trees of almost 1.5 tons of carbon dioxide from the air and results in the release of just over one ton of oxygen to the atmosphere.

Father Cries - Son A Drug Addict

A convicted dope peddler was given the limit of five years in the penitentiary after being tried last month at Morehead. Undercover officers also know that drugs are available at Morehead State University, Rowan County High School, and University Breckinridge High School. Frank Ashley, staff writer for the Louisville Courier-Journal wrote the following story -

The balding man in the back of the room with red, watery eyes hadn't come all the way from New Jersey to spill his son's personal problems to 60 tough policemen and two former dope addicts.

His problems just happened to fit the speaker's solutions.

Sixty-five sets of eyes turned to the back of the room as he addressed the conference speaker, a 23-year-old former heroin addict from New York, now a resident-patient at Lexington's federal narcotics hospital.

"This is a personal problem with me," the man confessed. "My 19-year-old son takes drugs and yesterday I received a call here that he has run away from home. He blew his senior year in high school this year. Now I'd like to know from you what can I do?"

A hush fell over the room and many of the policemen seemed almost ashamed that they had looked. Most of them recognized the balding man as the conference's principal speaker on Tuesday, an assistant to the president of a large Northeastern electronics laboratory which produces police equipment.

The modestly dressed speaker, Terry Tolten, a native of New York City who became addicted to heroin at 13, joined the hush for a few seconds and then braced to answer.

"I'm not trying to be cold," he began, "but the best thing you can do is cut him loose and stop giving yourself an ulcer. He's 18 and he'll have to learn the hard way, the way we did."

The father seemed relieved at the answer coming from a peer of his son and, though the answer was to the point, like most of Terry's remarks, the communication was warm. It was almost as if the strangers had known each other for years.

Later, in an interview, the man said that he had learned only yesterday that his son had made about $20,000 last year by selling marijuana in his high school and was now wanted for questioning by federal agents. The man questioned Terry about what his son would do in the underworld of runaways, and drug users and again he received cold, straight answers. Maybe he would hit the drug scene for a year or two, grow up and come home. Or maybe he would get on the hard stuff and seek professional treatment as Terry had done. Or maybe he would end up a fatal statistic in the death-from-overdose files.

The 65 policemen, attending the week-long 23rd annual conference of the Harvard Associates in Police Science at the Ramada-Imperial House here, apparently profited from the frank discussion of a common problem. The group, which has members from 14 states and Canada, is composed of police officers who have completed a course in homicide investigation at Harvard University.

Most of the policemen asked the former addict for advice. At times, some indicated strong disagreement with Tolten's philosophy, but none showed lack of interest, or even visited the coffee maker during his part of the program.

Terry and a friend, Terry Smith, 18, another ex-addict, had been invited to talk to the policemen about their experiences with drugs and how drugs have affected their lives. Both were addicted to heroin during their high school years and have taken the treatment at the Lexington Clinical Research Center, formerly known as the federal narcotics farm.

The formal speaker for yesterday morning's session was Dr. Harold T. Conrad, M.D., chief of the research center, but his young guests stole the program.

He introduced the two Terrys as residents of Matrix House, the center's new self-help rehabilitation program for narcotics addicts.

Matrix House, he explained, is a "self-help residential community," created to allow ex-addicts who have taken the prescribed treatment at the center to help one another live more effectively in the present, as preparation for more effective living in the future.

Terry Smith said he had problems with his parents and ran away from his Hartford, Conn., home when he was 15. He went to New York and began staying with a friend who introduced him to marijuana and later to heroin. Finally, he began taking heroin regularly and, after being arrested several times for stealing to support his habit, decided to take the treatment at the Lexington center.

Tolten, a director at Matrix House, said he was introduced to heroin when he was 13 by a friend who was 14. He was addicted to the drug for four years.

Both youths said they were learning how to live as responsible adults at Matrix House, something they said they had not learned at home where they had been given every material thing they wanted but no responsibilities.

There are 28 persons at Matrix House now and the number is expected to grow to about 100 by next summer as persons join who are now taking the 18-month treatment at the Clinical Research Center under the federal Narcotic Addict Rehabilitation Act of 1966 (NARA).

Matrix House is run almost entirely by ex-addicts, according to Dr. Conrad, and is modeled after other well known self-help treatment centers.

Its members are required by the total Matrix House community to demonstrate willingness to conform to fundamental rules, including no use of drugs or alcohol, no violence or threats of violence.

Treatment techniques include confrontation sessions, educational seminars, assigned reading, and encounter group sessions. The "street code" and underground value system are rejected, he said, and negative behavior is dealt with by the "peer group."

Tolten and Smith said that Matrix House has been so successful that it has been incorporated and plans are underway to create a branch Matrix House in Louisville.

Tolten and Smith said the police should continue to arrest persons using drugs, but added that the police should try to help the young drug user, not punish him.

Tolten told the policemen to arrest a drug user without trying to get him professional help does more harm than good.

"I guess none of you have ever been in jail," Tolten said. "A jail is a crime school . . . You learn more about drugs in jail than anywhere else."

One policeman asked Tolten how would he deal with persons who use drugs if he were a policeman.

"That's a big question," he said. "You people have a lot of cleaning up to do. The people in my generation feel your generation is a bunch of hypocrites. How can you blame us for using drugs when you have five martinis and turn on the boob-tube . . . That's a cop-out too."

He added that an intense drug-education program is needed in schools and homes to let parents and children know about the harmful effects of drugs.

For the addict who refuses to kick the drug habit, Tolten said, "It is the only answer. He is harmful to society."

Be Careful...

Let Children Play

If any season of the year belongs to kids, it's summer. Nice weather away from school, and plenty of pent-up energy go into the usual 12-hour day filled with games, running, swimming, and just plain goofing-off. "But when kids are having a good time," says Arthur E. Beard, executive director for the Kentucky Traffic Safety Coordinating Committee (KTSCC), "serious drivers know they have to be more alert than ever. You never know when a child is going to dart out in front of your car—seemingly from nowhere—and change a pleasant drive into a crisis situation." Beard says professional truck drivers, the best drivers on the highways, follow a set of guidelines for summertime driving and listed them for conscientious motorists: + When driving near a playground, you have to slow down, even if no signs are posted. Don't speed up until you're well past the playground. + Never speed down a residential street, especially if cars are parked at the curb. Remember, where there are houses, there are children. + If you see a ball, a bicycle, or any other toy roll into the street, stop until you're sure the child, who usually follows, has seen you and is out of danger. + Be careful pulling into driveways. The danger doesn't end until the car is stopped. + Try to avoid parking on the street and never park near a driveway or a street corner where your car will block another driver's vision. + Even keeping these points in mind won't ensure driving safety," Beard continued. "The best advice is to keep alert at all times and never speed. Remember, you have to think both for yourself and the kids."
