PBL STILL MAKES SENSE

In recent years, Aalborg University has been experiencing explosive growth. New interesting study programmes have been launched, the student population has boomed, more staff members have joined, and the University is now conducting research and teaching at three campuses in Denmark. One effect of such intense growth may be that people who were not raised on PBL start asking: what are the aspirations of PBL? We have therefore asked a student, an alumnus and current members of staff to contribute to this anniversary publication with their reflections on PBL – from past, present and future perspectives.
