

1987

Consecration

David Essex

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/ijls>

 Part of the English Language and Literature Commons

Recommended Citation

Essex, David. "Consecration." Iowa Journal of Literary Studies 8 (1987): 101-101.

Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0743-2747.1236>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in Iowa Journal of Literary Studies by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

CONSECRATION

---

David Essex

I recalled the Diving Game (named also Acapulco) we made ourselves play up the quarry's ascending ledges, told her of the foolish risks we took, invincibly adolescent. How my friend ended it, how they deputized the rescue divers, of the searchlights' full moons on the water, the hooks, the winches and the rest of the grappling tackle, the last rites in the parking lot, now turned Lover's Lane. The July night was scalding hot, as if heat radiated from the doubloon above us. She took the lead. We scraped under the rusty wire, stripping in midstride as we raced hell-bent for the edge. She stopped and contemplated the onyx water, naked and unashamed. I joked about the Inca ritual, the sacrificial pit, trying to remember where it would be deep enough, trying to empty my mind of desire. She stepped to the edge, I took her hand, together we gave ourselves to gravity.