

Masthead Logo

The Iowa Review

Volume 9
Issue 3 Summer

Article 11

1978

Another Coil

Jack Myers

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Myers, Jack. "Another Coil." The Iowa Review 9.3 (1978): 87-87. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.2419>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Another Coil · Jack Myers

for that one who dropped dead in his tracks when he asked and nobody answered.

Vicente Aleixandre

I have lived up here for two months and know no one.
That window across the way from mine is my sun.
I think someone over there must also look out at himself.

Today I can hear his dull yellow wall hand up the message
“No,” as if bending back like this, I were a question.
When I was a boy I thought I could walk through walls.

Sometimes it pleases me to stand on the balcony undressed and listen to the hum of the voltage towers in the fog.
I get quietly thrilled under the mild, cold moon.

Then I go inside and hear a door slam. Someone’s home.
From somewhere the heavy cooking of soups and meats opens up my childhood and waking I feel glad.

After days my woman knocks and for an instant I can’t see her.
There is so much noise and light I hold her as if something terrible had happened in the middle of a very nice day.

She tells me I am sighing again. I’m sorry. I must allow myself these long oar pulls across the room. It’s not because of her.
It’s almost not me. The old man weaving blue rope inside me has told me that he’s finished with another coil.