

Masthead Logo

The Iowa Review

Volume 23
Issue 1 Winter

Article 21

1993

Sake

Elizabeth Spires

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Spires, Elizabeth. "Sake." The Iowa Review 23.1 (1993): 122-122. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.4238>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

SAKE

A squat bottle,
two cups and us
toasting an anniversary
although we know
the wind may blow
away these walls
of paper, wood and rock;
and if they fall, we'll rise and quickly improvise a journey down Time's cold silvery musical stream, slipping on dripping
stepping stones, drenched to the bone until,
shades of our former selves,
we give up the ghost,
our ghastly smiles belying the cold finality of lying through centuries side by side, cheated by Time.
What is a marriage?
A promise, a vow never to forsake the other,
and love a little realm of light and shadow.
But here, while the sake's warm. Drink again.
For your sake. Mine.