

Masthead Logo

The Iowa Review

Volume 17
Issue 1 Winter

Article 29

1987

Mutability

Joyce Carol Oates

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Oates, Joyce Carol. "Mutability." The Iowa Review 17.1 (1987): 105-105. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3472>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

ground, there is a funnel of water rising dreamily out of the sea to no purpose.
And though on the horizon a ship has appeared—ghostly, four-masted, storybook—it cannot save the doomed man,

it is irrelevant to his story. With what composure he stares off the canvas, indifferent to his fate! As if, long ago, he'd memorized all the forms of the Gulf, now it is time to forget.

MUTABILITY

The candle flames gutter
but don't go out, we're saved again. How we love one another at such times!—
this evening, yesterday.
Tomorrow morning when we cross out
today's date on all our calendars.

SHRIVEN

After you've been hurt, pierced to the bone, what innocence!—you could live forever.

SILENCE

How we fear it, like this—no warning and now
murmurs of interior life,
our own, ease forward—