

Masthead Logo

The Iowa Review

Volume 26
Issue 2 Summer

Article 26

1996

Named

Toi Derricotte

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Derricotte, Toi. "Named." The Iowa Review 26.2 (1996): 52-53. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.4592>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Toi Derricotte

NAMED

“My father puts the
hairbrush up my butt.”

Words, words the

hated inseparable
words immerse me in the sewer hole

of hate. I am

sick. I am nothing but some flying nameless

sack that catches & fills

with words, words like “the hairbrush up my butt.” They hurt. I don’t remember. It just was. It was nothing. Words are the context of a feeling, a city made of words that I un-

do by words’ brutality, or do I do it, putting myself on top of the hairbrush? Is it a dirty feeling? Is it a torn feeling? Is it electric? I can't see my father's face. Could this be the grain of his terror before I felt my own? Perhaps we were all raped. Initiation into humanity—the hairbrush up your butt.

SHOE REPAIR BUSINESS

“This shoe is shiny
as a nigger's heel,” his customer burst out approvingly; then, remembering the owner is black, he tactfully appends, “I mean shiny as a Negro's heel!”