Slovakia plans forced school for Roma children

BY TOM PARRY ON MAR 14, 10 11:22 AM IN ROMA

Taking children from their parents to be forcibly placed in boarding schools does not sound like something that happens in modern-day Europe.

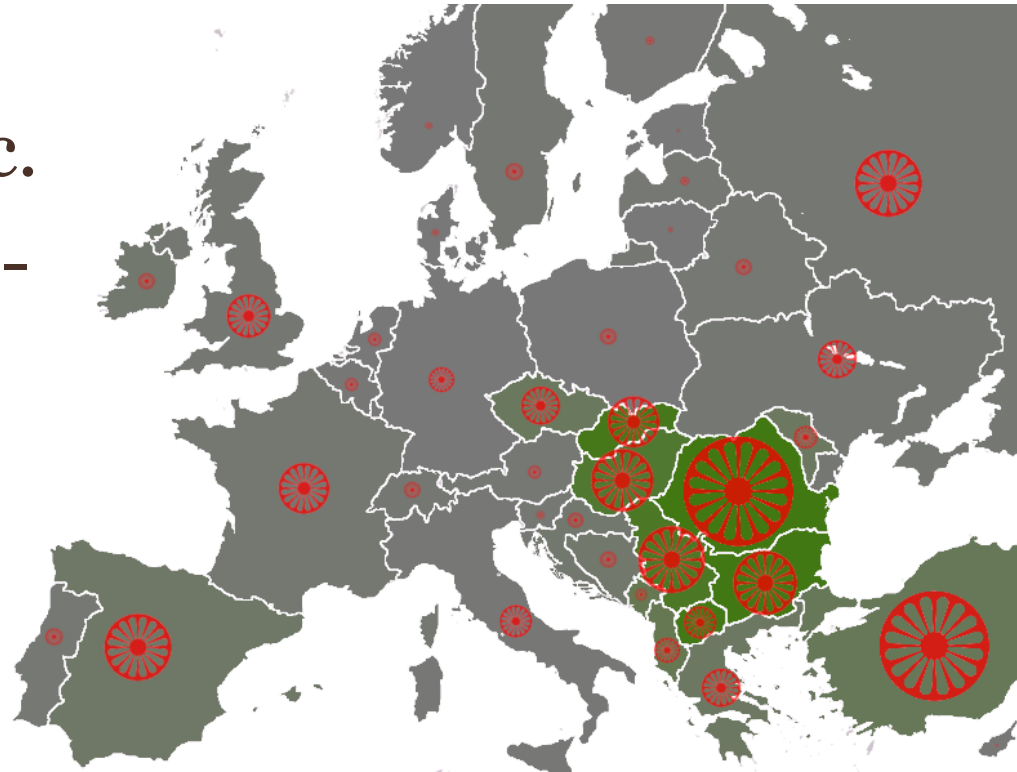

Amnesty, however, claims this policy is exactly what is proposed in Slovakia

The approach of the ERRC involves, in particular, strategic litigation, international advocacy, research and policy development, and training of Romani activists." Below this is a news article titled "ERRC Opposes Ethnic Boarding Schools in Slovakia" with a sub-header "(Last modified: 2010-03-10 15:12:00)". The article text reads: "Budapest, 10 March 2010: Today the European Roma Rights Centre (ERRC) sent a letter of concern to the Prime Minister of the Slovak Republic, Robert Fico, condemning his 3 March 2010 statement that ethnic boarding schools are the sole solution to the lack of development in Romani communities in the country. In its letter, the ERRC recalled that discrimination against Romani school children is well documented and widespread across Europe, including Slovakia, and stressed that segregation of Romani children in special schools was held illegal by the European Court of Human Rights in the case D.H. and Others v. the Czech Republic." Below the article is a "Top" link and a "Read More..." link. To the right of the article is a sidebar with a list of activities: "ERRC Seeks Legal Director", "ERRC Invites Applications for Gender Equality Research Fellowship", "ERRC Invites Applications for Legal Traineeship", "Attacks on Roma", "ERRC Newsletter", "ITALY CRISIS", and "CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS - Roma Rights 1/2010: Implementation of judgments concerning Roma in Europe". National Referred Claims by Nationality

Why this research now?

- The IRB as a relatively new institution with many significant changes in the last 10 years
- Policies that affect claimants, all Canadians, international relations, transnational communities, and more
- Refugee issues intertwined with immigration policies, including public attitudes
- November 2007: lifting visa restrictions
- July 2009: re-imposing visa restrictions

Why anthropology?

- Issues of representation, identity, agency, history, memory, as well as the varied and heterogeneous effects of displacement, discrimination, persecution, violence, etc.
- Ethnographic fieldwork, in-depth interviews and participant-observation lead to insights gained from long-term contact with informants.
- The anthropology of policy – to reconfigure supposedly neutral or apolitical statistics and numbers. Part of a holistic platform to understand lived experiences, emphasize urgency: speak the language of the policy-makers.

Dear Mr. Kenney...

- “It’s hard to believe that the Czech Republic is an island of persecution in Europe...[We need to] prevent people from abusing our very generous refugee determination system.” (Canwest News 2009)
- “The sheer volume of these claims is undermining our ability to help people fleeing real persecution.” (CIC 2009, emphasis added)

Canada cuts refugee targets for 2010

BY NORMA GREENAWAY, CANWEST NEWS SERVICE NOVEMBER 2, 2009

Refugees who fled the conflict in Sudan's western Darfur region peek through a hole in a shelter. Canada plans to cut substantially the number of refugees it will accept in the coming year from people who make their claim after arriving in the country, according to new government figures.

OTTAWA — Canada expects to accept fewer refugees and family class immigrants in the coming year than this year, new government figures show.

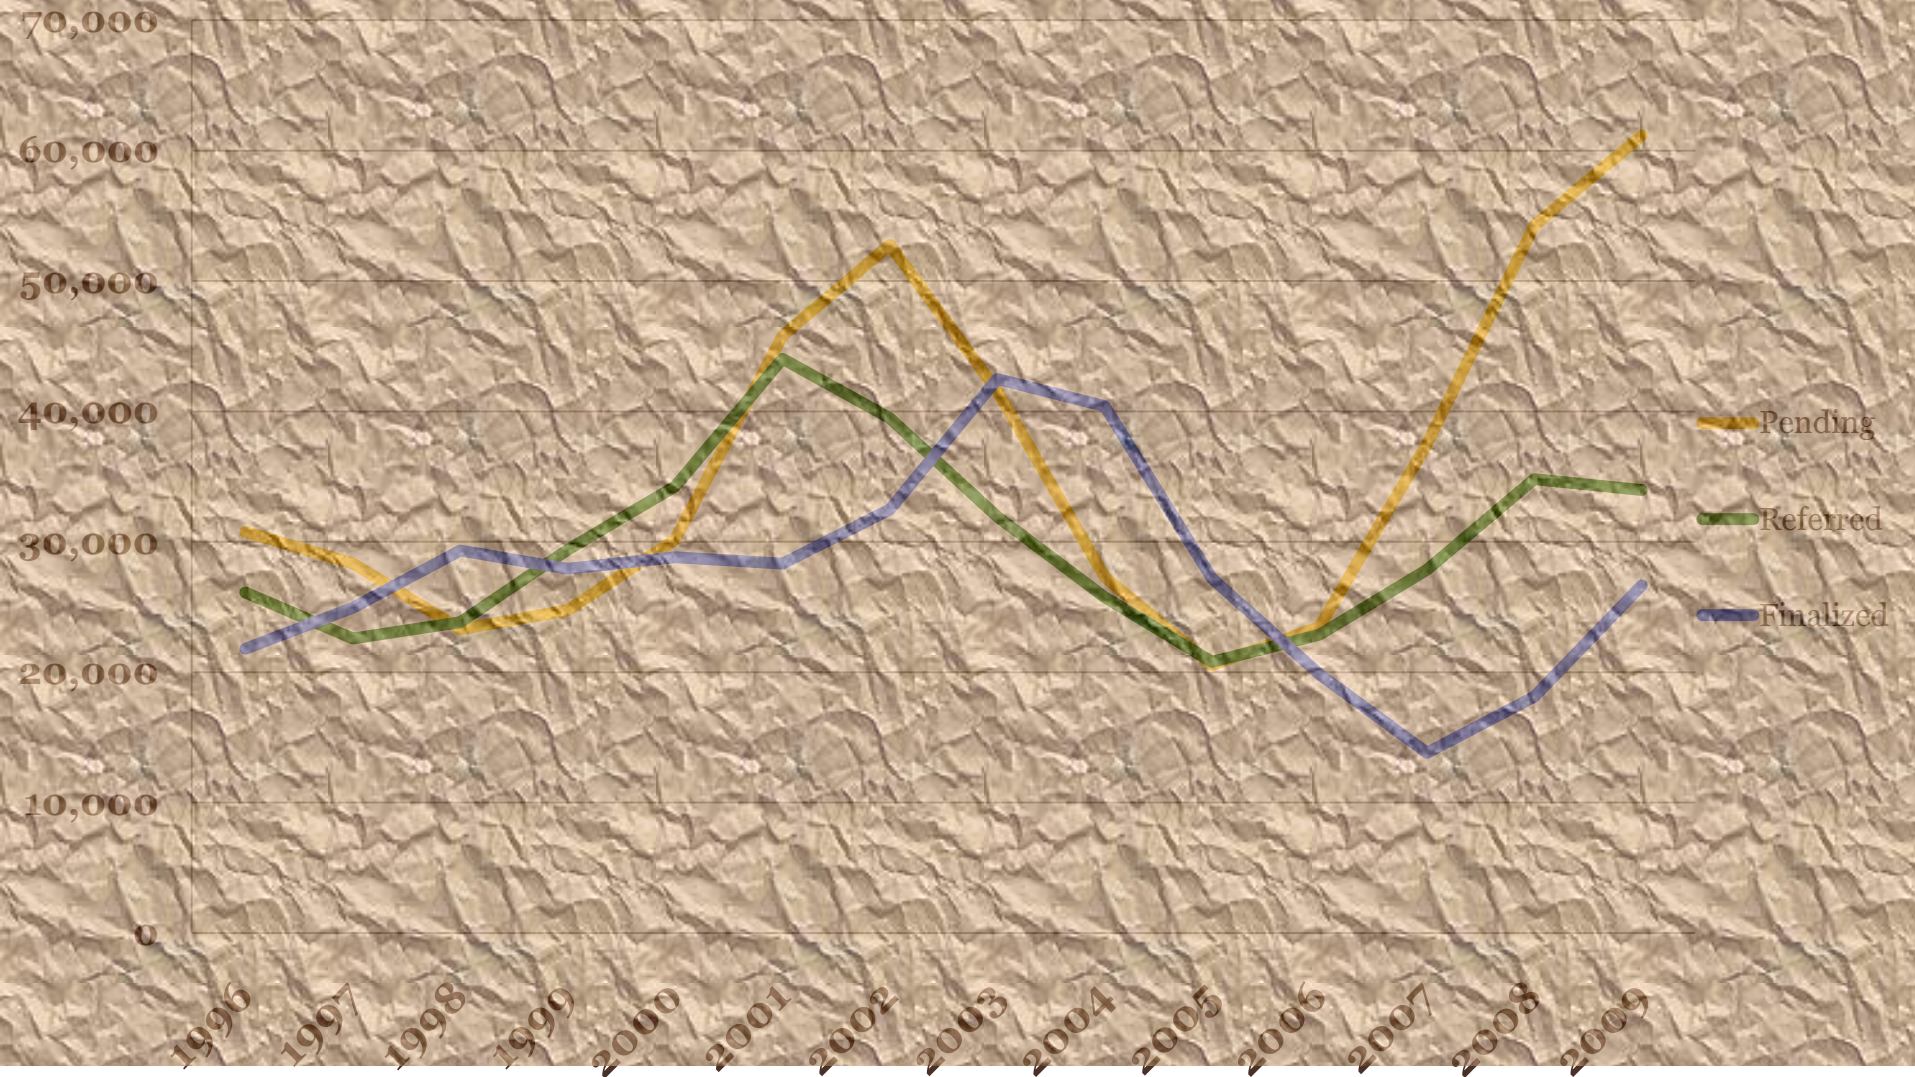

The 2010 numbers, outlined in Immigration Minister Jason Kenney's annual report to Parliament, show the government's target for accepting people who apply for asylum after they land in Canada is more than 3,000 less this year.

The maximum 2010 target number for spouses, children, parents and grandparents of immigrants is 8,000 fewer than this year's, the report says.

Kenney set the total immigration figure for next year at 240,000 to 265,000, about the same as in recent years.

The figures show the bulk of them, as many as 166,800, will be accepted under the economy class, which includes people willing to start a new business, skilled workers and live-in caregivers.

Conclusions

- The Canadian refugee system is not a “neutral” process
 - Human errors, misconceptions, and prejudice work to reinforce and institutionalize ethnicity-based discrimination
 - Influence by international relations and contexts
- Research is needed (from all angles)
 - Understanding lived experiences of refugee claimants and refugee communities in Canada
 - Reform is vital (Rousseau et al. 2002, Showler 2008)
 - Better training for Board Members, more accurate reports
 - Implementation of appeal process
 - Reduce backlog
