I am a vocalistic educator, researcher, transmitter, and consultant. I have explored the roles of different languages with my voice in performances. Someday, I discovered that the voice, as a personal human treasure, can deliver information from your mind, body, and soul. Someone might ignore their voice nature because the speech voice works every day as a tool of communication. Furthermore, I have spent two decades helping people of all ages find their own vocal talent and confidence.

Learning allows people to change their speech tone, speed, volume, and diction. Some communication strategies can also benefit people by allowing them to use networking skills. Even a voice without language can relax people. However, what sounds or songs do you choose when you want to express your sensitive emotions?

I would like to explore new methods, technologies, and tools to help people release their voices and talents. I believe that there is no wrong or right voice, only healthy and unhealthy.
