On Seeing Chuck Marten perform again***

I gave up my past for this shit, sitting day after day at desks and waiting for a diploma that will never come.

My hands have fallen into the slashing rhythm of a pencil on paper. I have no more new things to say. Stick a fork in me I'm done.

...but there were nights two years ago when I was up on stage (or whatever we had that passed for a stage), and I was alive, not just from adrenaline but potential.

Those nights have buried themselves alive in my mind And now I fear I will never be there again I will never be there again I will never be Never be Never be
