

17th Annual Institute for Law and Economic Policy Conference

Access to Justice

April 7, 2011

Earlier versions of the following papers were presented at a conference sponsored by the Institute for Law and Economic Policy (ILEP) on April 7–8, 2011. Law and Contemporary Problems would like to thank those who made the event possible, especially ILEP, which provided the driving vision and resources for this issue.

ILEP is a public-policy research and educational foundation—a think tank—established to preserve, study, and enhance access to the civil justice system by all consumers.

The goal of ILEP is to formulate policy positions on issues involving the administration of civil justice within the American legal system. These issues include existing legal protections of all consumers and protection of the public interest in maintaining a safe environment. In addition, ILEP has especially focused on issues of government regulation, preservation of competition, and free and fair markets.

ILEP is a not-for-profit corporation with tax deductible 501(c)(3) status.
