

Dedication: In Honor of Elvin R. Latty

Dean Emeritus and William R. Perkins Professor of Law Elvin R. Latty will retire at the end of the 1972-73 academic year. During his thirty-five year association with the Duke Law School, Dean Latty has distinguished himself as a teacher, legal scholar, legislative draftsman, and administrator, and it is perhaps in these capacities that he will most likely be remembered in American legal circles. But it is his remarkable enthusiasm and energy in the classroom, his deep concern for the Law School, and his unparalleled rapport with students that will be missed most when Dean Latty retires. In appreciation for his immeasurable contributions to the Law School community, the editors and staff of the Duke Law Journal are proud to devote the December and February issues to a treatment of corporate and securities law as a tribute to Dean Elvin R. Latty.
