New Surgical Intensive Care Unit Provides Optimum Patient Care

The first patient to occupy the new Surgical Intensive Care Unit was admitted November 1.

The patient, a thoracic surgery case, received the benefits of the training and preparation by the personnel of the Surgical Intensive Care Unit.

Located adjacent to the Recovery Room in the northeast end of 2 Steinberg, the Surgical Intensive Care Unit receives patients at the discretion of the attending surgeon.

The average patient, upon completion of surgery, spends from one to two hours in the recovery room. From this point, he may be sent to his regular room, or to the Surgical Intensive Care Unit. Average length of stay in the SICU is two to three days.

Candidates for admission to the Unit include surgical patients in general surgery, gynecology, ophthalmology, otolaryngology, orthopedics, vascular and cardiac surgery, and neurosurgery.

Miss Elsie Null, R.N., is head nurse for the Unit, and also supervises the Recovery Room. She and her staff of nine registered nurses, four licensed practical nurses, two orderlies, two aides and three unit secretaries are able to provide the utmost in patient care through special training and skilled use of highly advanced equipment.

Miss Null received four weeks of classroom instruction in intensive care nursing at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco, Calif.

Since then, she and members of the medical and nursing staff, have been holding classes for the personnel in the Surgical Intensive Care Unit.

An In-Service program will provide continuing classes to keep personnel up-to-date on new equipment and procedures as they develop.

The "Parametron" monitoring system, connected to four of the patient beds, will provide the staff with information concerning the heart rate, ECG, venous and arterial-systolic pressures.

The glassed-in walls on each side of the patient's bed permit better observation by personnel. Sleeping quarters for the assistant resident-on-call are provided in an area close to the Unit.

Visiting is permitted five minutes every hour on the hour, and is restricted to immediate family. Only one visitor may be in the patient's room at a time.

The renovated 2 Steinberg waiting room provides additional seating capacity for visitors to the Surgical Intensive Care Unit.

Hospital Hosts Medicine Exams

The Jewish Hospital of St. Louis was one of four St. Louis hospitals selected by the American Board of Internal Medicine to participate in their annual oral examinations of candidates who applied for certificates in the field of Internal Medicine. These examinations were held on Tuesday, October 10 and Wednesday, October 11.

Candidates performed physical examinations on both out-patients and in-hospital patients. These procedures are an important part of the candidates review by the American Board of Internal Medicine. The examinations were coordinated by the Department of Medicine. Members of the voluntary medical staff cooperated with the program, which involved the participation of patients as well as full time staff, House Staff and nursing personnel.

assistance of Hamilton R. Young, D.D.S.

Forty members of the class will be divided into groups of three to rotate on duty two evenings a week and Saturday and Sunday. The externs will observe all the duties of the dental interns as well as receive lectures from Doctors Grosby and Young.

At the completion of their one-week rotation through the Hospital, there will be a summary class for the students.

Hospital Employees Top United Fund Goal by 31%

Employees at Jewish Hospital topped the 1967 United Fund goal by more than 131% with a total gift of $14,380. This was the highest contribution ever made by Jewish Hospital employees. In addition, employees contributed $13,631 to the Jewish Federation Campaign and the Israeli Crisis. The substantial donations to both of these agencies, a total of $28,011, show a per capita gift to charity of $24.31 per employee, an outstanding record for St. Louis hospital employees.

Under the direction of Bo Axelrod, chairman of the campaign at the Hospital this year, a steering committee and team captains developed plans for soliciting funds.

Special executive "on loan" from the United Fund was Robert D. Sykes of the McDonnell Douglas Corporation. Mr. Sykes attended the meeting for all team captains at the Hospital and assisted personnel in carrying out details of the drive.

"The Hour Has Seven Days," this year's United Fund film was previewed by the team captains, and then shown to every employee during the two-week period of the campaign.

More than 80 team captains actively participated with the 15-member steering committee to personally speak with each employee about giving to the United Fund. Fair share gifts were conveniently expedited by the Hospital payroll deduction program.

A special theme within the Hospital was on display in the ground floor lobby during the duration of the campaign. Colorful reeds at the base of a large display board suggested an autumn marshland, and sitting ducks were attached in the marshes.

As each $1000 was accumulated, a flying duck was mounted on the board to show the progress of the drive. When the campaign ended, 14 ducks had ascended. The in-Hospital motto, "Fly United for the Fund" was as familiar as "Hope Is in Your Hands."

As one of its agencies, Jewish Hospital received more than $250,000 last year from United Fund to help care for indigent patients. The Hospital is also a Jewish Federation agency, and received $210,000 from the Federation for the same purpose. These funds are supplemented by the Hospital to provide more than $1.6 million of free medical care for persons of limited financial means.

J. G. Probstein Physician For St. Louis Blues Team

J. G. PROBSTEIN, M.D., physician for the St. Louis Blues Hockey team, (far right) and Jerome J. Gilden, M.D., orthopedist, (far left) check on the condition of patient Donald H. McKenney, who plays center ice position. Sidney Salomon, III, general manager of the team, also visited Mr. McKenney in the Hospital.

Dr. J. G. Probstein has always been interested in athletics.

When he was in high school, he played on Johnny Coulon's champion baseball team in Chicago. At that time, he also played half-back on the Carl Schurz High School football team against George Halas, presently the owner of the Chicago Bears.

When the St. Louis Browns were part of this city's national sport teams, Dr. Probstein was their physician.

And now, Dr. Probstein has been appointed physician-in-charge of the St. Louis Blues National Hockey Team, by Sidney Salomon, Jr., president, and his son, Sidney, III, general manager.

Part of Dr. Probstein's responsibility to the team includes availability during the training period.

The St. Louis Blues have a physician on call at each game. More than 30 home games are scheduled. Charts on each of the players are kept up-to-date by St. Louis Blues trainer Tom Woodcock.

Dr. Probstein has obtained the services of Dr. M. A. Cassel and Dr. Shale M. Rifkin for many of the injuries which may be incurred by the players. Jerome J. Gilden, M.D., Milton J. Lenobel, M.D., and Jerome S. Grosby, D.D.S., also provide services to the players.

Dr. Probstein has been associated with Jewish Hospital since shortly after his graduation from the Loyola School of Medicine in Chicago.

Marguerite Humes Retires After 43 Years Service

Miss Marguerite Humes wasn't planning to make a career of it when she started to work for Jewish Hospital on November 6, 1924, but that's the way it worked out.

Marguerite Humes

Miss Humes, a financial secretary, retired on November 10th, after 43 years of service at the Hospital. At the time Miss Humes was hired by administrator Mrs. Emma E. Zeinert, the Hospital was located on Delmar Boulevard. It wasn't until 1926 that it was moved to the present Kingshighway location.

Miss Humes split her time between helping the bookkeeper and the admitting clerk.

Later, she was promoted to assistant bookkeeper and subsequently to head bookkeeper.

During Dr. David Littauer's administration she was named controller.

The Hospital building and expansion program in 1956 increased the workload to the point that the controller's position was divided. Miss Humes elected to work with incoming patients as a financial interviewer.

Five Administrators

Miss Humes has worked for five administrators during her 43 years. Following Mrs. Zernert's administration, Mrs. E. Muriel Anscombe held the post from 1926 to 1938. Miss Florence King was administrator from 1938 to 1952; Dr. David Littauer served as executive director from 1952 to 1963, and David A. Gee was named executive director in 1963.

Reflecting about her retirement, Miss Humes said, "You can bet that I'm not going to sit around the house and stare at four walls all day long. I've always wanted to read . . . I love to travel . . . and I'm quite a baseball fan. Surely, all that will keep me busy."

Miss Humes has one handy bit of confidence to lean on if she does become bored with retirement. "I've had many friendly offers to 'Come and see us if you want to go back to work' from friends and acquaintances."

"I think they have the idea I'm not the retiring type. We'll see. Maybe I can prove them wrong."

Eye Clinic Equipment Determines Blind Spots in Field of Vision

DR. MORTON GREEN, ophthalmology resident, charts the field of vision of a patient in the Hospital Eye Clinic. The machine is the Goldmann Projection Perimeter.

The Jewish Hospital Eye Clinic has a new, sophisticated machine for testing peripheral and central fields of vision. "The Goldmann Projection Perimeter made by Haag-Streit, Berne, Switzerland, is the ideal piece of equipment for visual field testing because of its high reliability and accurate reproducibility," according to Morton R. Green, M.D., resident in Ophthalmology.

The projection perimeter was purchased because of the important part that interpretation of fields of vision plays in ophthalmic and neurologic examinations to aid diagnoses in all fields of medicine and surgery. The perimeter can indicate the site and extent of involvement of the visual pathway, and help in the early detection of glaucoma, brain tumors, vascular disorders, retrobulbar neuritis, detachment of the retina and tumor of the eye.

In order to test a patient's field of vision, the examiner must first be sure that the perimeter is exactly level by means of a leveling device built on the machine. The illumination within the hemisphere of the perimeter is extremely important and must remain constant; this intensity of light is controlled precisely by means of a light meter also built on the apparatus. The patient then sits on one side of the perimeter placing his head on the chin rest inside the hemisphere and looking at a specific fixation target in the center of the hemisphere.

Patient Responds

The examiner sitting on the other side of the perimeter can move the light target to any point on the patient's visual field. When the patient sees the light target in his peripheral field, he taps the table to let the examiner know. This is preferable to speaking, since the patient may change the position of his head, resulting in a decentering of the eye.

At the exact spot that the patient tapped, the examiner records directly on a sheet of paper on the back of the perimeter. He then moves to another point repeating the same procedure.

After using targets of various sizes and colors, the examiner has reproduced a highly reliable map of the patient's visual field, such as is shown in the diagram. Each line drawn on the map represents the limit of the area within which a specific light target can be seen. It is known as the isopter for that test target. The map of the visual field usually contains several concentric circles, each one an isopter for a target of specific size and intensity.

Besides locating the limits of peripheral vision, the perimeter is extremely exact in searching within the field itself for defective or depressed areas, known as scotomas. It is in this use that the perimeter assists in detecting glaucoma, which causes changes in the central visual field when the peripheral limits are normal and give no rise to suspicion.

School of Nursing: A Source of Vitality

Enthusiasm and energy . . . an apt description of the student nurses at Jewish Hospital.

Their personality is contagious to many, and is certainly noticed by all people in the Hospital . . . members of the Board of Directors . . . medical staff . . . patients . . . nursing personnel . . . house staff . . . Auxiliary . . . visitors . . . employees . . . everyone is familiar with the young lady wearing a starched white apron over a blue and white checked basic uniform, a perky white cap, and spotless rubber soled shoes.

The proud history of the School of Nursing includes the graduation of more than 2,000 nurses since the first class of seven graduated in 1905.

Accredited School

The School of Nursing is accredited by the Missouri State Board of Nursing and the National League of Nursing. Faculty members provide motivation and direction for the students, and their concern extends beyond the classroom. They are available for counseling sessions with any student who requests assistance.

During the first two semesters of the freshman year, the students' learning activities are scheduled mainly in the classroom. Classes, clinical conferences and practice are held concurrently during the junior and senior years at the School.

Through an arrangement with the Forest Park Community College, freshmen receive instruction in English and basic sciences. Other facilities in the education program are St. Louis State Hospital and St. Louis Children's Hospital.

Clinical facilities at Jewish Hospital are used for teaching courses in medical-surgical nursing, obstetrics and psychiatric nursing. One of the major functions of the Hospital is education, and the School of Nursing is its largest education project. In order to provide facilities for this, the Hospital contributes $2300 for each student each year.

Many patients have commented on the care provided during the students' clinical practice in the Hospital:

" . . . I wish to compliment and commend you on the care and service I received while in the Hospital . . . the doctors . . . registered nurses . . . student nurses and the entire staff could not possibly have been more gracious in their treatment."

" . . . I wish to thank the excellent student nurses for making my stay comfortable."

" . . . The student nurses were just wonderful. They made me relax and helped to make my delivery a wonderful experience."

Student Government

Part of the reason for maturity of the student nurses at the Hospital is the advantage of having a self-governing body called the Student Association.

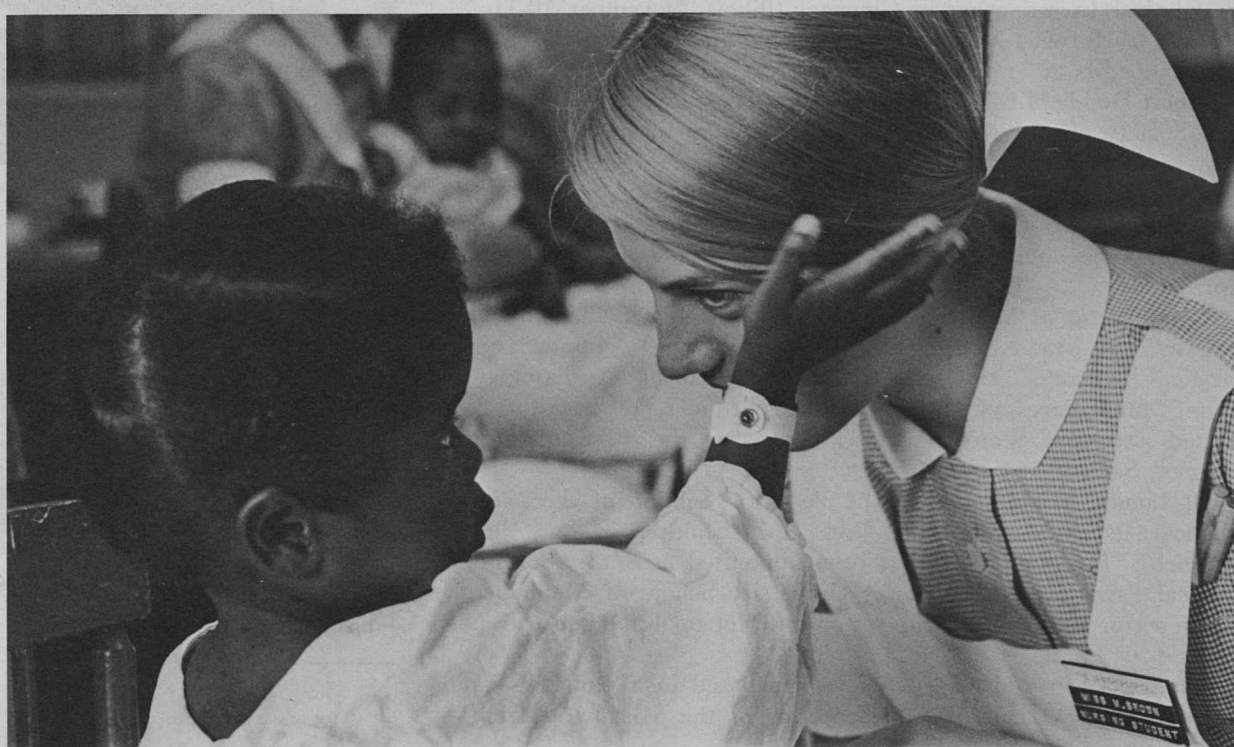

The group is led this year by Beverly Hoelscher, president; Janice Moelm, vice-president; Betty Honigfort, recording secretary; Mary Jo Briesacher, corresponding secretary; Kristy Henson, treasurer; and Terri Rogers, parliamentarian.

In the Association, the students are given an opportunity to draw up residence rules with the approval of the faculty. Then it is the responsibility for each student to follow the policy as well as for the students themselves to apply disciplinary measures when the rules are abused. The president and officers work closely with the cabinet, elected class representatives, a faculty advisor and student court. This is the governing group of the student body for the School of Nursing.

There is much community interest in the School of Nursing. A board appointed committee on nursing serves in an advisory capacity with assistance and planning of programs for recruitment in social activities.

The Women's Auxiliary sponsors dances throughout the year and holds coffee breaks for the students on the second Tuesday of each month. Funds from this group have been donated at many times throughout the past years for improvement of student nurse facilities.

Many scholarships, awards and grant-in-aids are provided for students in the School of Nursing. They are donated by individuals and organizations interested in the progress of the Jewish Hospital School of Nursing.

David A. Gee, executive director, presented the volunteer awards with the assistance of Mrs. Walter G. Stern and Mrs. Irwin M. Jarett.

Every volunteer was recognized and discs were presented to those who devoted more than 500 hours of service to the Hospital.

Mrs. Alfred Goldman, chairman of the Gift Gallery, received special mention for more than 23,100 hours of service to the Hospital. Other outstanding cumulative records include Mrs. Harry Spitzer, Mrs. Gordon Scherck, and Mrs. Ben Samuels.

Special mention for more than 1,000 hours accrued in the past year went to Mrs. Alfred Goldman, Mrs. Harry Spitzer, Miss Della Kurtz, Mrs. Martin Brand, Mrs. Ben Samuels, and Mrs. Harvey Nathanson. Mrs. Mordecai B. Brown, director of Auxiliary Services, expressed her appreciation to the group for their loyalty and support. Mrs. Donald Quicksilver, program chairman, introduced the principal speakers, Dr. William Masters, director, and Mrs. Virginia E. Johnson, research associate, of the Reproductive Biology Research Foundation.

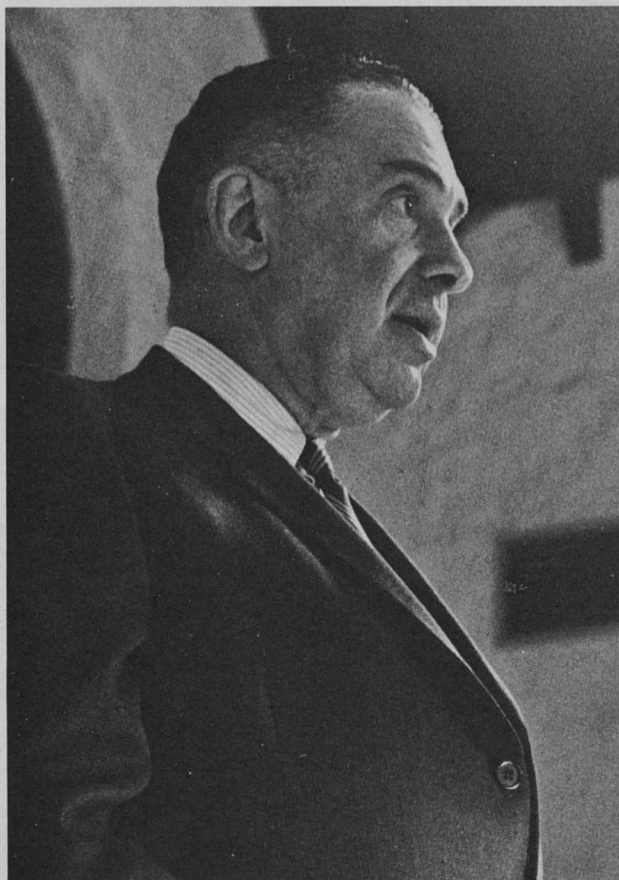

Dr. Masters and Mrs. Johnson presented a discussion on "Facts and Fallacies of Human Sexual Response." They explained that the necessity for research and objective studies in the field of human sexual response was brought about by the lack of accurate data in today's world.

Their work, since 1947, has been concerned with clinical application in three areas, "conceptive physiology, contraceptive physiology and human sexual physiology."

At the end of the program, Dr. Masters and Mrs. Johnson answered questions from the group.

TWENTY-FOUR VOLUNTEERS QUALIFIED for the gold disc award for more than 500 hours service. Pictured, left to right, Mrs. Ely Goldwasser, Mrs. John Abramson, Mrs. Bert Galst, Mrs. Harold Fishman, Mrs. Sydney Asher, Mrs. Robert Levinsohn, Mrs. Paul Blank, Mrs. Ben Poslosky, Mrs. Gustav Vittert, and Mrs. Wallace Lewis. Those not available for the photograph, include: Mrs. Sam Aronoff, Mrs. Frank Gollub, Mrs. Jerry Grodsky, Mrs. Lawrence M. Kotner, Mrs. Harry Less, Mrs. Robert Lesser, Mrs. Simon Packman, Miss Kay Preston, Mrs. Hyman Rabushka, Mrs. Ben Recht, Mrs. Roger Sachar, Mrs. Arthur Sherman, Miss Mamie Silverman, and Mrs. Jordon Yavitz.

VINCENT D. RICHTER, chief inhalation therapist, adjusts respirator to increase patient's ventilation. He observes the monitoring spirometer which measures expiratory air in cubic centimeters.

Inhalation Therapy: Where Breathing Gets a Hand

Twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, the girls in the white blouses and green culottes are on duty, treating patients with respiratory conditions. These technicians from the Inhalation Therapy Department are on routine and emergency call to assist the doctor, and to help patients with asthma, emphysema, pneumonia and coronary conditions.

Several methods and types of equipment are used, depending on the respiratory problem to be solved.

In the case of a coronary condition, the technician provides oxygen therapy to supply and maintain an atmosphere high in oxygen concentration. This can be accomplished using a mask, oxygen tent, catheter or cannula (nasal device).

The technicians make rounds of the patients using oxygen every four hours to check the equipment, making sure that the humidifier has the correct amount of water and that the gas flow is correct for the type of equipment being used. They also record the amount of oxygen left in the cylinder so the patient has an adequate supply.

When a Patient Stops Breathing

Positive-pressure breathing machines are used on patients in the case of respiratory arrest, or when the patient stops breathing. The positive-pressure breathing machine increases ventilation, delivers medication to the bronchial-tracheal tree, and helps blow off carbon dioxide. This type of equipment is used on patients post-operatively and patients with respiratory congestion, asthma, and emphysema. During 1966, there were 92 patients with respiratory arrests who were able to breathe with the assistance of the positive-pressure machine.

Department Started in 1965

The department of Inhalation Therapy was started in March, 1965. The first year (from March to December), the department gave 14,000 positive-pressure treatments; in 1966, it gave 23,000 such treatments. An estimated 23,000 positive-pressure treatments and 1,400 oxygen therapy set-ups are planned for 1967.

Vincent Richter, chief of Inhalation Therapy, trains his own technicians. One hour classes are given three times a week from September to May. The technicians study the use of the respiratory equipment, gas laws, and respiratory and circulatory systems. This knowledge is important in treating patients and assisting physicians.

Three of the six technicians will be eligible next year to join the American Association for Inhalation Therapy.

Beal Speaks To Surgeons

The Jewish Hospital Department of Surgery presented a distinguished guest lecture, October 28, 1967, with John M. Beal, M.D., speaker.

Dr. Beal spoke on "Gastric Ulcers." After his speech, he participated in a radiology-pathology-surgery conference with Dr. William Sheffield. They discussed breast lesions, multiple tumors of the terminal ileum, and carcinoma of the stomach. He had earlier reviewed a surgical movie, "Total Gastrectomy With Jejunal Interposition."

The lecture was held in the Moses Shoenberg Memorial School of Nursing Auditorium.

Dr. Beal is chairman, Department of Surgery, Northwestern University Medical School, Chicago, Illinois, and is attending physician in general surgery at the Cook County Hospital.

Medical Nursing Provides Special Challenge to Staff

To most visitors, the nursing stations at Jewish Hospital look much like nursing stations anywhere . . . busy, efficient centers where white-clothed personnel are working.

Most people fail to realize the amount of teamwork that binds the personnel of a particular nursing unit together.

The nursing personnel on the third floor seem particularly enthusiastic about their jobs.

The acutely ill patient is found on this floor; the patient whose illness is unscheduled. In fact, most are admitted on an emergency basis.

Several nurses on this floor were interviewed as to why they have so much enthusiasm. Miss Betty Turnbough, R.N., head nurse on 3 Steinberg, said, "These are the patients I really enjoy working with . . . the ones who need really good nursing care . . . the ones who'll respond when they get it."

Mrs. Willa Nelson, head nurse on 3 Center, echoed these remarks. She said, "I find this floor challenging. There's more to learn here. Personally, I get more satisfaction out of giving acutely ill patients really good care."

Never A Dull Moment

Miss Nelson continued, "You really have to enjoy nursing to like this floor. You have to be active because you're so busy. There is never a dull moment." Miss Turnbough said, "You certainly can't get into a rut. You never know from one minute to the next what emergency will occur."

Miss Linda Stahlman, R.N., assistant head nurse on 3 Steinberg, said "This is a fast moving floor. Why? Because, for example, you don't schedule cardiac arrests. We rarely have a routine admission. Most are emergency cases which cannot wait. Things have to be done now. I like action and we have it here."

Miss Jo Ann Johnson, R.N., head nurse on 3 South, has been on a medical floor since her graduation from the Jewish Hospital School of Nursing in 1964.

She explained why there seem to be so many emergency admissions.

"We get many patients who have waited until the last minute before seeing a doctor.

"This seems to occur more often in the rural areas of Missouri and Illinois. The patient will ignore warning pain or symptoms and not see a doctor until the pain is unbearable. Then the physician has to get him in here as soon as possible.

"Many times these patients have two or three illnesses, and as a result we have two or three sets of symptoms for which to watch.

Teaching Patients

Nearly all of the nurses interviewed mentioned patient instruction. Miss Stahlman said, "I like the opportunity for home care teaching. For example, if a diabetic patient doesn't follow dietary instructions, he'll be back in the hospital before long. The same thing is true with heart patients."

Another form of patient instruction involves explaining the tests that the patient may receive various kinds of X-rays and some clinical tests require special diets for several meals. The patient isn't very happy if he doesn't understand the examination.

Miss Johnson pretty well summed up the feelings about being a nurse on a medical floor, "It takes a special kind of person: one who likes a continuous learning process, and someone who really likes nursing."
