Drs. Bernard, Cole Report On New Study Of Antibiotics

A study showing that preoperative antibiotics can give protection against postoperative infection was reported to the Society of University Surgeons Feb. 14 in Los Angeles.

The 16-month double-blind study was conducted by Drs. Harvey Bernard and William Cole, of the Washington University School of Medicine faculty.

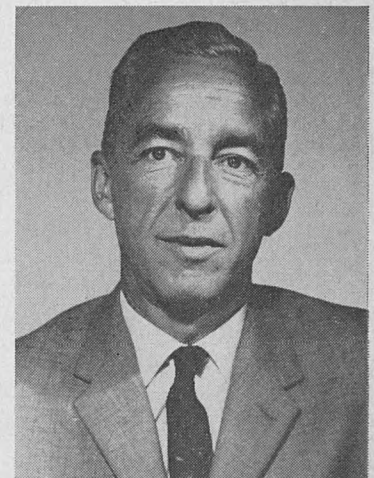

Of the 55 patients who received a combination of three antibiotic drugs (penicillin, methicillin, and chloramphenicol) only three developed postoperative wound infection (5%). Of 63 who received placebo injections, 16 cases of infection were seen, or a rate of 25%. All of the patients had operations involving the gastrointestinal tract, the pancreas or the biliary tract.

"Neither the operating surgeons, the patient or the investigator knew which were receiving the antibiotic drugs," Dr. Bernard said, "until after we had decided if infection was present.

The drugs were administered in three equal portions — one-third intramuscularly one to two hours prior to operation, one-third intravenously during the operation and one-third in-

Caldwell Wins Scout Honor For Community Service

St. Louis Area Boy Scout Council Awards Committee Chairman James L. Johnson presents the Silver Beaver Award for community service to Clyde Caldwell, Barnes Laundry Manager while Mrs. Caldwell looks on.

Clyde M. Caldwell, Barnes Laundry manager, was a recipient last month of a coveted Silver Beaver Award presented to him by the St. Louis Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

The award is presented annually by local Boy Scout councils across America to "a small handful of men who have given far more than their fair share to the program of Scouting, to the life of their community, their business and their nation," the council said.

Caldwell received his Silver Beaver Award for service to the community.

The citation read:

"Clyde M. Caldwell, leader of boys, is an able trainer of men. He has been Scoutmaster and unit committeeman and provided many years service as commissioner.

"On more than one occasion he has taken over active leadership of a unit to prevent it from dropping so that boys could continue to enjoy the fun and adventure in Scouting.

One of his most satisfying experiences in Scouting has been his work as a Charter Oak Campmaster. This has required a great amount of time through all the years but has given him the chance to work closely with new unit leaders and help them get started in the right manner.

"Beyond the field of Scouting, Clyde has been busy 'helping other people at all times.' His work in the American Red Cross has taken a lot of his spare time; he has taught over 100 first aid classes. He has also been active in the activities of the Children's Orphanage-Christian Home of Missouri.

"A busy Christian, Caldwell has been a church deacon, Sunday school teacher, director of a Christian Youth Fellowship group and also Sunday school superintendent of his church."

Barnes employes add their heartiest congratulations!

Remember This

If you work for a man, in Heaven's name, work for him. If he pays you wages which supply your bread and butter, work for him; speak well of him; stand by him and stand by the institution he represents.

If put to a pinch, an ounce of loyalty is worth a pound of cleverness.

If you must vilify, condemn and eternally disparage—resign your position, and when you are outside, damn to your heart's content, but so long as you are part of the institution do not condemn it.

If you do that, you are loosening the tendrils that are holding you to the institution, and at the first high wind that comes along, you will be uprooted and blown away, and probably will never know the reason why.

Chaplain's Corner

By George A. Bowles

There are times in the calendar year when our sense of patriotism receive an unusual lift, and we are inspired to new growth in this area of thinking.

The second month of every year is such a time, due to the fact that we celebrate the birthdays of two men who have helped so much to shape the destinies of our country. We would not be remembering the men without the activities which surrounded their lives.

As we think of this matter of patriotism, we should be very proud of the freedom that we have in giving expressions of appreciation for the things that people do and stand for.

We do not necessarily have to be members of the political party they represent, or agree with all of the policies which they advocate.

In our type of environment we have learned that our genius rests largely in a way of life that has taught us to even disagree, yet appreciate. Most of us are left rather cold with the patriotism that generates loyalty to a name only, but we find it very appealing to develop a responsiveness to a worthy act cause.

Those who have given of themselves for our country, or worthwhile causes in our environment, would much rather we remember what they have done than who they were. They are that big in their concepts of life.

A part of the definition of patriotism relates to loyal support. This is something that applies to more than country, of course, and should be a part of every person and every job he claims to do.

With it we can be happy, though at times it may not be easy.

Without it, we can be most lonely.

JOHNSON'S FRIENDS REMEMBER BARNES TRIBUTE FUND

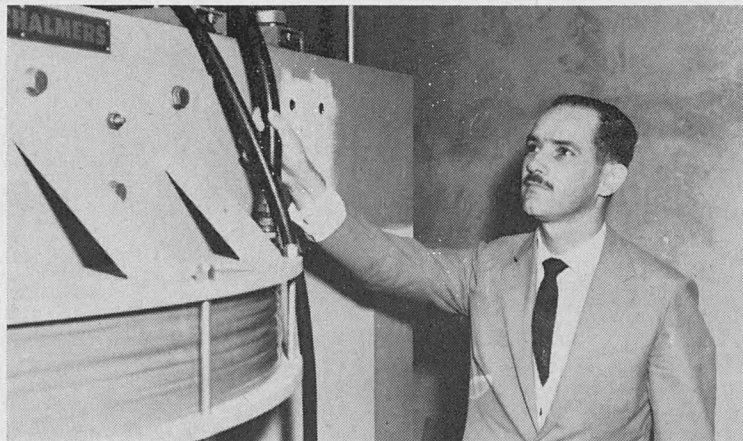

The largest contribution on record to the Barnes Hospital Tribute Fund has been made by friends of the late Andrew W. Johnson, a former trustee of Barnes Hospital.

Johnson, a director and former vice-president and treasurer of the International Shoe Company, died February 6 after illness of several months.

The Barnes Board of Trustees reported that approximately $8,000 has been received thus far.

The largest single donation was $5,000, made by the Mississippi Valley Barge Line Company, of which Johnson was a director.

Brazilian Social Security Official Studies Barnes Hospital Operation

Dr. Celso Carvalho, Brazilian Social Security Official, inspects the cyclotron under construction in the basement of Barnard Hospital.

Barnes Hospital last month was visited by Dr. Celso Souza Carvalho, director of the Hospital Division in the Brazilian Social Security Department.

Dr. Carvalho is in the United States on a one-year study of U. S. health institutions and agencies under a grant from the Ford Foundation International Fund.

At Barnes, Dr. Carvalho has conducted a study of each phase of the operation through talks with the various administrators.

In his post with the Brazilian government, Dr. Carvalho directly controls five hospitals and 58 clinics and has working contact with more than a thousand clinics and hospitals.

Dr. Carvalho arrived in the United States last August and spent a month at the University of Texas where he received orientation in language, religion, politics and other phases of American life.

Traveling with Dr. Carvalho is his wife, Niza, who was his former secretary. The couple was married last July, immediately prior to their departure for the U. S. Mrs. Carvalho still serves as the doctor's secretary.

Dr. Carvalho will spend about one month studying at various hospitals and health agencies. His itinerary after leaving St. Louis includes Chicago, Washington, New York and Ann Arbor, Michigan.

In a casual conversation, Dr. Carvalho disclosed that his country is undertaking a vast industrialization program with its accompanying inflation problem.

"I have received a 70 per cent pay increase over the last two years," he said.

"Unfortunately, the cost of living has risen 80 per cent during that period," he added reuefully.

For example, Dr. Carvalho said that 10 years ago the Brazilian unit of currency — the cruzeiro—had an exchange rate of 18 to one U. S. dollar. Six months ago inflation had changed the rate to 600 cruzeiros to one U. S. dollar and today the rate of exchange is travenously in the recovery room. The drugs were then discontinued to minimize toxic effect or overgrowth of antibiotic resistant bacteria.

"The antibiotics were given to a group of patients known by previous experience to suffer from frequent postoperative infections, Dr. Bernard told the surgeons. "The drugs were given in quantities designed to effect potent tissue levels at the time when the wound was in jeopardy of coming in contact with bacteria."

"These studies should not be interpreted as suggesting that preventive antibiotics be employed routinely in all operations or even in the types of operations studied," he said.

"Nevertheless, their use should be considered an adjunct to good surgical technique in those patients who are judged liable to serious infection because of circumstances which subject their tissue to significant contamination by virulent bacteria, especially those patients in whom the host resistance is diminished by the surgical illness or the operation performed.

Promotions

Two employes won promotion at Barnes during the month of February. Both promotions were in Nursing.

Promoted from head nurse to supervisor was Anna Ikeda.
