New Scholarships To Be Offered Senior Men; Committee To Select

MRS. CHARLES CROTHERS
GIVES $250 TO START
NEW STUDENT AID
DDOMICED

Loans To Be Repaid Within Two Following Years

A new senior men's scholarship of $250 has been started by Mrs. Charles F. Crothers, according to Appointment office Secretary Ed Haworth, and Ronald Linn, president of the alumni association.

Mrs. Crothers is the wife of the late Charles F. Crothers who was president of the board of trustees until 1921 and chairman of the advisory board from 1924 until 1936.

The recipient of the scholarship is to be selected by a committee from the alumni and approved by Mrs. Crothers.

The $250 is to be used to grant two $50 scholarships to senior men with the idea that they will be repaid within two years. There are not to be more than two loans a year; this system is to function for several years as an experiment.

Haworth and Linn are in temporary charge of the fund.

Spartan Senate To Debate On Air

First Meet Scheduled With Santa Clara

Beginning in the first week of February, Spartan Senate will hold a series of discussion debates over Station KQW.

The first debate will be held with the University of Santa Clara on the topic "Are we vic-tims of propaganda?" San Jose State college debaters will uphold the negative side of the question.

The second debate will be in the second week of February with the University of California on the Far Eastern situation. The specific question will be decided in the near future. These debates will continue during this quarter over Station KQW.

The group plans to attend the debate congress to be held in Berkeley during the latter part of February.

Just Among Ourselves

By Dr. T. W. MACQUARRIE

An example of fine community eration is going on right before your eyes these days in the local high school bond campaign. It is so well organized and so harmon-iously promoted that it is well worth the study of anyone looking forward to a career in school administration.

The schools are a powerful group in any community. Teachers, students, parents, alumni, and friends are all interested in their welfare, and all take an active, intelligent part in community activities. At the same time, strong as they are, they must not consider themselves ependent. They must not think of themselves as always recipients They must assume a responsibility in other interests of the community. It is not a one-sided arrangement.

The school people in San Jose are fully conscious of the cooperative nature of their work. Not only do they expect to help in other than p whole-heartedly and without solicitation. If you have noticed San Jose from year to year, you have found the school people active in the Community Chest, service clubs, churches, welfare organizations, chambers of commerce, holiday celebrations and parades. The San Jose school people believe in their community; they believe in becoming acquainted with all of the in-terests and activities which make up so large a part of the city life.

People who have little interest in the schools recognize that. They find themselves, in spite of what they may think are their own interests, friendly to the schools and the school people. It has interested me on several occasions to see commercial organizations ask school people to take an active part in the promotion of their own efforts. When the schools need help they get it.

It looks to me as if that high school bond issue will be a landslide. It will if the friends vote. A certain number of people will find themselves in opposition in any election. That is normal. The only chance, however, for a failure at this time is in our own carelessness, and one might even call it laziness.

From the college standpoint, we might be considered a little bit selfish. We need this whole square for our growing student body. We not too enthusiastic about that old high school plant, but we could use it right now, if it were avail-able. On the other hand, my own personal interest leads me to say that those high school people have long been entitled to better ac commodations. I hope they may get that new plant and speedily. It is a matter of self respect for the

It's A Lottery

Dear Mr. West:

We think you are kidding usmaking a lottery of registration. We, the undersigned students, have what we think is a much better suggestion. Why not make use of the rooms surrounding the quad for signing-up of classes? This would relieve the congestion in the lines that must form when the gym is used.

Booklets could be given out in the gym under the alphabet sys used now. Students could then come over to the main build-ing and sign up for classes in rooms set aside for each depart-ment. Signs over each door would inform the unknowing frosh just where to go. The upstairs rooms of the main building could also be used.

"Nothing Sacred" with Carole Lombard and Fredric March, Directed by William Wellman; screen play by Ben Hecht, Fox California Theater.

After you have read the government's report on the highest salaries of the past year, in which movie stars play a prominent part, it might be in order to attend movies regularly and see what it takes to earn a half million per annum. However, don't look at the screen but at the audience for your answer. In general it probably is all summed up in the twofold answer that people are trying to escape something and that people are searching for something and are willing to pay for either. Perhaps those somethings are closely akin to mental quiet ness and poise. Nevertheless, the features (and for once they both can be included) reviewed this week are capable of giving that (or those) something (s), as just about five minutes in the theater will prove. The proof does not lie in the standing crowds in front of the theater, but in the smiling faces coming out.

FACE VERSUS LEGS

"Nothing Sacred" excels in its script and in its directing. The cleverness and humor of the piece are almost entirely found in these two departments. This statement is made only to clear the two leads of any great responsibility in the matter. One is thankful that they do not mar the work of the other technicians. Lombard comes out much happier here than she did in her recent flop, "True Confession", perhaps because they give her face a chance against her legs — and many, I'm sure, would select the face winner March holds his own through his certain precision in timing un dramatically spoken linesility which nearly always makes him pleasant to listen to

BEGINNING BEST

For sheer comedy the first s quences in the picture are by far the best. The lazy station attendant, the woman in the grocery the doctor's housekeeper, the small boy playing dog, are all bits to be remembered after other pretentious sequences forgotten. In entertainment value they rate highest (watch the laughs) and in expertness of handling the dramatic technique they are unsurpassed throughout the rest of the picture.

The second feature, "Portia on Trial", would be rather unim-portant (and perhaps is) if it were not for a rather unusual plot (a new twist in the lawyer racket) and for Frieda Inescort. Miss Inescort has a certain cold deftness of acting which will never endear her to a movie public, but which excites admiration from those who appreciate such technicalities. Her speech at the climax of the court trial was moving and thrilling. Her speech is expert, trained, beautiful and sharp. Her acting is often the same. If she sits a bit awkwardly at times and perhaps doesn't move with the grace of the more glamorous stars, she at least gives one the assurance of training and intellect in her acting.

Both features are worth seeing, but because "Nothing Sacred" is script and more pretentiously done, see that last. An unusually appealing Color Symphony accompanies the two features and the customary Newsless reel

'A Damsel In Distress" starring Fred Astaire with Burns and Al-len. Fox Mission Theater.

A great controversy arose at the announcement that Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers would split and make separate pictures, as to whether either one would get along well without the other. In "Stage Miss Rogers demonstrated her ability to do so, largely how-ever, through the general excel-lence of the screen play.

SCENARIO UNSPARKLING

In "A Damsel In Distress" As taire also proves his ability to get by, but with more difficulty than Ginger did because this scenario is not as sparkling as that of "Stage Door". True, P. G. Wodehouse has contributed interesting characters and situations to the scenario, and the plot is more meaty than in the past cycle of Astaire-Rogers musicals, somehow the picture drags times.

Burns and Allen surprise with two intricate dances, first with whisk brooms and later at the various concessions at an English Fair. They make up for Ginger's absence in the dancing department; unfortunately the same can-not be said of Joan Fontaine. She exhibits considerable pulchritude, but that is all. Reginald Gardiner, remembered for his performance of a policeman who yearned to be an orchestra leader in "Born to Dance", is effective this time as an English head-servant who is impelled irresistably to express himself in operatic arias. himself in operation

DRUM DANCE

Astaire has never been better, and his solo dance at the end of the film in which he beats drums with both hands and feet is one the most intricate and difficult has put on the screen. As usual, he displays his ease and personality on the screen.
