Times Are Better

Oh, how things are looking up! Last year at this same time a paltry 312 men were enrolled at State, compared to 1546 women. The ratio was about five to one.

Last quarter things weren't much better. Enrollment figures showed that 605 men were wandering around campus along with 1867 women, a ratio of about three to one.

But look at this, gals: There are now 1169 men on campus and 1789 women, an almost even ratio. Approximately 250 of these men are married. Things certainly are evening up, aren't they?

REVELRIES HEADS PURCHASE PROPS, LIGHT EQUIPMENT

Revelries Director Al Johnson and a group of his assistants made a trip to San Francisco Saturday to make selections of costumes and props for the student show now going into first rehearsals.

Assistant Directors Betty Doyle and Marian Samuels, Wardrobe Mistress Rosemarie Bertolucci and Costume Director Carol Johnson accompanied Johnson. Besides the above mentioned articles, lights and lighting equipment were also purchased.

EQUIPMENT TO STAY

Lighting equipment which is purchased will be a part of the permanent installations in the Morris Dailey auditorium. Included in the purchases will be ellipsoidal spots, dimmers, and other lighting equipment. Johnson has hopes of rebuilding the present switchboard for Revelries.

Chorus tryouts will take place in the auditorium tomorrow from 4 to 6 p.m. There are opportunities for 15 chorines, each of whom must be beautiful, have a nice figure, and be able to dance. All members of the chorus must be of the same size, according to Johnson.

SET BUILDING

Set construction under Production Chief Dale Bower will start this Saturday. All men who have had experience in set construction and would like to work, particularly on Saturdays, are urged to see him or the Speech department secretary.

The Emmet Lavery play will start at 8:30 p.m. and be presented in what is known as "pent-house" style. The style is a new one in which the audience sits on four sides of the acting area and there are no "bad" seats. No seats will be reserved.

Spartans Lose Pair

The much publicized University of Nevada basketball team proved all it was cracked up to be as it turned back the visiting Spartan five 46-40 and 59-40 in a pair of games played over the week-end.

In Friday night's encounter, the San Joseans were in the running right up to the final gun, but Coach Walt McPherson's boys were dogged by hard luck in the second game, losing Robinson and Moore early in the contest on injuries and finding Ed Maggetti on the sidelines on fouls before the second half was very far advanced.

Sharp shooting by Lindsey and Stevenson, guard and center respectively, who made an even dozen points apiece, kept the Saturday night game from being a complete rout of the tired and crippled Spartans.

POLITICAL STATE OF ARGENTINE TOLD AT MEETING

Emphasizing the part played by students in the Argentine revolution, Miss Phyllis Aden, SVM field secretary, told members of the Cosmopolitan club at a meeting Friday of the political situation in Argentina.

Miss Aden, who was born and reared in Argentina, was visiting the campus last week to address various student groups.

According to Miss Aden everyone in Argentina is against the government in a display of civil disobedience. A program of passive resistance has been adopted. Everyone is working together, regardless of class, in the present silent revolution.

The schools in Argentina are fine, but there are not enough of them. They are very difficult with no social life. More political responsibility is taken by them than by schools in the United States.

Doctors, lawyers and professors are the highest strata of society in Argentina. American doctors are not accepted for practice there, because their own standards are much higher.

Miss Aden concluded the program with a few South American songs, one of which she translated.

CONCERT TUESDAY

Phi Mu Alpha, national honorary music fraternity, announces a concert to be presented in the Little Theater Tuesday night, January 29. This will be the annual Founders' Day concert observed by each chapter of the fraternity all over the United States.

Invest In World Education

World Student Service Fund today opens its drive for student gifts from San Jose State, and continues throughout the week as individuals are contacted by a busy group of canvassers.

WSSF is a program of aid for those who are sick or starved or physically exhausted from long years of working with the underground, or homeless, or peniless. WSSF provides pencils, paper, books, oil for study lamps, canteen meals, rest camps, hostels, food and a night's shelter for those walking across China to return to the sites of the great universities which have been destroyed since students and faculty fled them years ago, vagabond colleges, footsore and hungry student bodies fired with the desire to study and learn.

All this and more the World Student Service Fund will do with the money given in sacrifice by American students for their suffering fellows over the world. Education can save the world, but without light, who can read; without books, who can study; without paper, who can write; without food, who can live; without rest, who can be rehabilitated? Without the students of the rest of the world, how can we hope to make a success of anything we attempt to construct out of the chaos that has been left in the wake of war? —Webster

JUST AMONG OURSELVES

By Dr. T. W. MacQUARRIE

Of course on these foggy mornings it's hard to see the parking lines, but a little thought for the one who comes after, will help. I've been talking so much about this parking business that I actually had to back out this morning and come in again. I was quite proud of my job, however, for I then had about the same space on either side of the car. (It isn't always the poor driver, either. The two bad cars I saw this morning were driven by young men who looked as if they might have been driving a long time.)

This going to college is a sacrifice for many of you—but I think you'll be glad some day. Anyway, our country will need all the brains it can muster if we are ever to make a success of democracy. A college trained man should be able to help. If he doesn't, the State has wasted its money.

"It's hard to get started," one young man told me the other day.

I doubt, however, if the beginning is really the hardest time. Usually it comes about the middle of the quarter. Been slipping a little all along and the midterms loom ominously. Hard work now will avert a crisis later. A consciousness of the future—that's intelligence; preparing for the future—that's character. They're a great combination.

Our Health Cottage is running over a hundred contacts a day. The Health Cottage is pretty well filled all the time. So many colds, some flu, and some more serious difficulties.

I saw a young man walking across the lawn this morning, through the wet and frost. He was evidently in a hurry to get to his class, but he sat there an hour or so with wet, cold feet. I suppose he's in the Health Office now.

These are simple things, folks. I don't know the answers to the big things, but I do want you to keep yourselves in good condition so you can make a real success of your college year.

GAMMA PHI DOWNS DSG IN INTER-FRAT LEAGUE OPENER

The 1946 fraternity basketball league got under way Thursday night when Gamma Phi Sigma downed Delta Sigma Gamma 23-22, and Beta Chi Sigma took the measure of Delta Theta Omega 18-14 in the first double-header of the season.

The Gamma Phi men, led by Stulman and Yamin, got off to a fast start against the DSG men and piled up a big lead before half time. About midway through the final half they led 23-7, when they substituted freely and were nearly overtaken by the onrushing DSG's.

Yamin led the victors with nine points to his credit. He was followed closely by Stulman, who gathered in a total of seven.

The second contest saw Beta Chi Sigma, defending champions, taking the measure of DTO in a very close tilt ending up with only four points separating the two clubs, 18-14.

The contest was close throughout the entire game, Beta Chi Sigma leading 8-7 at half time.

Halzhauer, Beta Chi guard, led the individual scorers with seven digits to his credit; he was followed closely by center Greenly, who got six. Gehman and Aguirre at forwards, and Campbell at the other guard spot, rounded out their starting combination.

Thursday night the second round of the current basketball circuit will be played. The games will look something like this: Alpha Pi Omega versus Gamma Phi Sigma in the first game, and Beta Chi Sigma will meet Delta Sigma Gamma.
