A new approach to the traditional Frosh Camp is being sought for the fall semester, according to Mike Rutz, director of the new Orientation Conference Committee.

Interviews for the seven committee posts will be today through March 11 from 3 to 5 p.m. daily in the ASB Per. sonnel Office in the College Union.

First, Frosh Camp will be called an Orientation Conference. The name change is to dispel the notion that the meeting is a camp only for freshmen.

Rutz indicated he is looking for older committee members and that a primary consideration in the fall program is the assumption that the maturity of new students is greater than has been assumed by Frosh Camp Committees in the past.

For the first time in SJS housing history, students will be able to evalu-ate their present and past housing, in a rating procedure proposed by ASB Vice President Bill Langan.

According to Langan, the idea for the evaluations came from past student council members Phil Whitten and Steve Larson. However, it was Langan who created the Student Housing Board.

This body will set up a hearing board for students living in approved centers to air their gripes, and resolve personality conflicts.

Langan is developing a plan to en-

March of 1966, with a commission under then ASB President John Hendricks

However, it was the ad hoc commission that wrote the basic revisions. Appointed to the commission by former ASB president Jerry Spolter were Roger Allan, Tim Fitzgerald, Larry Hoff, Glen Williams, and Barbara Barr.

Dr. Lowell Walters, adviser to student government, was an ex officio member.

This commission drew up the original draft and submitted it to council in February of 1967. Then Spolter, Vic Lee, former ASB president, and Gene Lokey added their revisions.

Working simultaneously with the ad hoc commission was Pres. Robert D. Clark's commission, made up of faculty and students.

Those on the commission included Dr. Warren Fraleigh, men's physical education professor; Dr. Robert Wilson, director of the social science program; Dr. Ruth Tiedeman, professor of psychology; and Dr. Royce James. Stu-dents included Kathy Schwent, Nella Henniger, Ray Grueveich, Bob Johnson, Bob Schaeffer, and Joe Rymear. The reasons for revising the present constitution are many. A major need is to streamline the government and the language of the constitution.

Praise for the proposed changes have been virtually unanimous. Bill Langan, ASB vice president, said, "A document that has the endorsement of all the past ASB governments, which have dif-fered philosophically and politically, should be considered to have merit for the student body."

Junior representative John Merz commented, "If the students don't get hung up on one or two issues instead of looking at the whole document and its effects, it should pass." He emphasized that "this document removes the pettiness from before."

Senate Resolution Asks Discipline for Campus Disorders

By 23-0 Vote

SACRAMENTO (AP) - The Senate voted yesterday to tell every public school official in California - from grade one to the university - to immediately discipline anyone involved in campus disorders.

It was the first action on the floor of either house aimed at curbing the current academic unrest, with more legislation expected to follow in the near future.

Senators reported heavy mail protesting the violence on University of California and state college campuses, and telegrams flowed into the governor's office on the same subject,

A 23-0 vote, with 16 senators not present or not voting, sent to the As-

Classes for Credit

Should credit be given to two Experimental College courses taught by two men who have been termed as "controversial" individuals?

Is it fair to deprive students of an opportunity to learn about what some term a "controversial" subject from certain individuals who purportedly know that subject best?

The courses and instructors in question are "Contemporary Soviet Civilization," taught by Dr. William Mandel. and "The New American Revolution," with Tom Hayden as its instructor.

Curriculum at the university level should be unlimited and unrestricted. The more varied and diversified courses a college can offer, the better that college will serve the student.

It should be up to the individual student to choose which courses he should take and which courses he should omit from his four-year program.

This is, perhaps, only a part of the problem involving these two particular classes. Offering the courses is only half of the difficulty - the real problem currently is whether credit should be given to students, whether the two instructors should be paid and whether these two classes are actually accredited classes within the college curriculum.

There will be some 250 students involved. Surely, if the students learn from such courses, they should receive some credit for them. Is it not the job of the university or college to provide educational facilities?

Secondly, if the instructor teaches the student a basic history or area of thought, should he not be paid for it? We think he should since he is imparting some of his knowledge ---learned from experiences - to the student.

Lastly, the courses should be included in the college curriculum. Is it not the duty of the college to present varied choices to the student --- and let the student decide what value or worth an individual course may have?

To prohibit any person from teaching in a field where he may be an expert is unjust. A college should strive and a student should choose from this unlimited field whichever courses he feels will best prepare him for the future. -B. H.

Editor's Notes

AFT strike repercussions continue to hit the SJS campus, although many come in the form of "according to informed sources." For instance, a professor in the School of Humanities and Arts apparently has refused to let those students who did not participate in the AFT strike to enroll in his class.

There were, according to informed sources, some 60 students on the class roll sheets. This professor, who very much believes in the ideology of the strike, passed out 28 class IBM cards to strikers and Blacks and then let the other 32 students who signed the roll fight for the remaining two cards. He also said he is refusing to follow the registration list.

One of the campus' most pressing problems is the over-crowded cafeteria. Trying to find a seat at prime coffee time is next to impossible. Perhaps with the completion of the 500-seat snack bar in the new way of services for bulk of SJS students who are non-dorm residents.

For a college of 24,000 students our cafeteria facilities are extremely inadequate. Perhaps the solution is for students to stop eating, but I seriously doubt whether this will occur. Then, obviously, the college administration should seek a solution. We hope they will. * * *

SJS President Robert Clark finally is getting around to investigating an Associated Press report of campus demonstrations at San Jose State last semester.

The AP story, which contained several errors of fact, began with the following lead: "A mob of about 250 striking students and teachers surged through buildings at San Jose State College Friday, smashing windows, setting off sprinkler systems and beating several students who got in the way."

I don't remember "surging mobs" that smashed windows" and "beat students. The AP release is simply another bit of sensational journalism that is becoming almost commonplace on many professional papers. But what also must be remembered is that the AP was on strike during this time, and that stories were not being written by regular reporters.

"And now, ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Garrison, with his bare hands . . . ! "

Grasp The Issues

Editor:

On countless occasions, I have heard speakers on campus who spoke in favor of the Delano grape strike. Almost always, the speakers said that a person can't grasp the issues unless he goes to Delano or talks with people who have been there and seen the conditions.

It is indeed interesting that a group of students from the New College (not the YAF mind you) went to Delano and brought back a description which does not support that given by the strike supporters.

In addition, it is tragic that a small group of students have taken it upon themselves to exercise thought-control over the campus in general and the New College in particular. I can almost visualize the next move, a denouncement of the New College as a tool of "Reaganistic Fascism" (shudder),

I'm sure that most of the people who support the grape strike would agree that people have a right to examine different sides of a question, including that of the grape strike. If so, then hopefully they will attempt to ward off any further harassment such as occurred in the New College on Friday afternoon. If such harassment continues, then the

Tuition Fee, Says ASB Editor:

What this campus needs is a tuition fee, ays ASB. Why not charge students a mandatory ASB fee and then use ASB money to pay Tom Hayden (SDS) $1500 to teach a class? Is this not at least a token endorsement of the tuition fee idea?

Thus, we could endorse the idea of a tuition fee while indoctrinating students so that the next ASB-supported strike, demonstration, and violence, will be more effective. After all, no one can expect to raise holy hell on a budget of only $900 (ASB's contribution to the AFT strike).

ASB provides adequate red tape and long answers when it comes to financial requests from the band or the intramural program; -oh! but this is different: this is a much more worthy activity. Anyway, if we hope to win the 1969 Campus Disruption Award, we must proceed with better planning and more

RIB TICKLER

Faculty Band Director Roge: Muzzy offered this rib tickler when it was announced that the Band was dis-banding due to insufficient support, financial and otherwise, from ASB government and the college administration.

Funny . . . seems as though the only memorable things about the TV tilt were (1) Walt Shockley's fantastic brokenfield-running tactics, a la O.J. Simpson, and (2) the giant peace symbol formed by the Stanford Marching Band.

Then too, who will really miss the Spartan Horn Tooters? Certainly not the students who sit in the classrooms in the Art and Health Buildings near the athletic field where the Band trumpets its seasonal mating calls, promising all an autumn filled with victory, while English professors profess at the top of their lungs about Frost and Milton in competition with the din outside.

LAUGHABLE

Then again there is something almost laughable about band members who hint a need for new uniforms when, education wise, most classes are filled with waiting lists a mile long.

The $10 to $20 thousand for band uniforms could easily buy the services of two good Humanities profs (preferably enlightened AFT members, although not a prerequisite) for as we all know, California profs come dirt cheap these days.

Let's face it fellas, unless the NCAA suddenly provides you with four quarters for marching and tooting and relegates football play to the 15-minute half-time period, you'll have to live with those ragged uniforms as well as (horrors) the grim thought that some day you, too, will join the ranks of the Dodo Bird, goldfish swallowing and Super-fratmen.

DR. WILLIAM DUSEL

And then there is Dr. William Dusel, SJS' executive vice president, enjoying his sabbatical leave in the European region, reportedly investigating the causes of student upheavals in those countries.

But did he have to travel to Europe for a first-hand look-see at student dissent? Of course, for where else would one find Heidelberg and the Schloss-beleitung? Amsterdam and the Kukenhoff? Paris and Gallery LaFavette?

Where else could one dip into the Red Ox Inn for a fat mug of beer, or the Lucky Star Bar for a wink from a Provo wench, or the Moulon Rouge for a bucket of bubbly and 100 dime-thin-dancing-nudies while the ghost of Toulouse LaTree lingers hauntingly near?

Belated congratulations to the SJS basketball team and head Coach Danny Glines. The Spartans pulled what has got to be one of the biggest upsets in basketball history at this school by beating the Santa Clara Broncos, who were ranked second in the nation behind fantastic UCLA. But it was an inspired SJS team, plus a rather cold Santa Clara team in Friday's contest. Nonetheless, the Spartans proved worthy of their 8-2 league record, and we commend them for their efforts. * * *

Soon to be released is an extensive report on the success of the Educational Opportunity Program (EOP) on this campus. Apparently, 71 per cent of the Black students participating in the EOP earned better than a 2.0. Also, there were reportedly two students who received straight A's. It is gratifying to know that this worthwhile program has been successful. Perhaps now more funds can be allocated to expand it. -B.H.

Long an advocate of a return to the "good old days" in education, Sen. Bradlev has attacked Pres. Robert D. Clark, the Experimental College, the New College, Tutorials, etc., during his lengthy senatorial career. Normally his outbursts have been met with a ho-hum at best or a laugh the pigeons have really got to go.

I further urge the students to get behind Sen. Bradley in supporting this bill. Let's show the senator that not all SJS students are destructive malcontents who want to overthrow the existing order.

Protect our pigeons, Sen. Bradley!

Freud Needed To Explain Radicals

By MICHAEL CRONK

Well it was inevitable!

Freudian psychology, the guiding light in the study of motivational behavior, is being called upon now to focus its analytic insight into discovering the reasons why radical dissident students do what they do.

The controversial concepts of the famed Viennese psychiatrist are being applied to explain the psyche of the radical student.

When one used to impulsively put his fist through a window, people were inclined to think he was crazy. Now, after Freud, we know that the individual was actually only releasing unconscious aggression and frustration (sexual in nature to Freud) against himself.

The first psychological explanation of student disorders has been put forth by a famous author, of whom I have never heard, in a book of whose title I am not certain. The book is a history of dissident student movements throughout the world

He makes the "verrrry" interesting contention in the book, however, that young radical students are committing "symbolic patricide" or as expressed by a well known television commentator, whose name also escapes me at the moment, "giving it to Dad in the groin with an icepick."

The author believes that psychological analysis is a solution to campus disorders. Radical students should be made to realize the root cause of their "problem," if indeed it is a problem. He also feels that through this therapy, campus dissenters will soul-search their way I guess, to the delights of establishments enlightenment. The acceptance of a psychological approach to the solution of radical student disruptions assuredly is vague and uncertain. If one is a devout follower of Freud he will see this approach as the right way and will advocate it. To a non-believer it may be so much hot air.

Whether the "couch approach" to student dissidents is adopted, however, the current establishment doesn't seem to be susceptible to logical reasoning when words like "communism" or "socialism" crop up, or when listening to cries to radically change the government.

On the other hand, the seeds for fruitful adoption of the couch approach are there. A great number of the establishment have thought for some time that the radicals must be "crazy."

Trustee-Student Meet Calm

By KENYON JORDAN Daily Assistant Editor

Anyone expecting sparks to fly when state college student leaders meet with trustees would have been disappointed Friday at Cal Poly Pomona's tree-shrouded Voorhis Campus.

On the contrary, it was mostly smiles and nodding heads at what might be called the first meeting of representatives of two generations in a one-day informal bull session to discuss the state college gap.

But while little frustration or ill-feeling was apparent, neither were there any new resolutions or statements of policy as a result of the day's conversations.

The latter, however, would have been too much to ask, according to Vic Lee, former SJS ASB president and now head of the California State College Student Presidents Association (CS CSPA), Lee, who helped plan the convocation, admitted nothing concrete was accomplished, "but arriving at conclusions to world problems was not the intention of this meeting."

The intention, as Lee defined it in a letter inviting attendance from each state college ASB president and newspaper editor, was to "provide an opportunity for communication that neither the trustees nor the students have had in the past months." "It was a great success," said Chancellor Glenn Dumke,. "We should have more meetings like this in the future. We're looking for every means of communication.

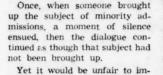

Trustee Paul Spencer, one of the five who attended, agreed. "It was the healthiest thing we could have - a bull session. I hope it continues." he said. And Lee himself called the day "personally satisfying experience for me.

Lee, like Dumke, proposed more future meetings along the same format. The next one, though as Trustee James F. Thatcher said while everyone nodded, would have to last longer perhaps a whole weekend. One day, it seems, is simply not enough time. But it was enough time for three and a half hours of smallgroup discussions spanning topics from financing to educational relevancy.

Ironically, however, in the interests of convivality, the trustees and students appeared to make a concerted effort to avoid those heated subjects which would require them to meet in the first place ply no toes were stepped on. At one point Trustee Dudley Swim said the solution to state college problems lies "in projecting what we want to accomplish, setting objectives, and working back from them."

Bill Thomas, Chico State ASB president, trying to get Swim to explain, happened to remark, "Someday, you know, we students might be on the trustees ourselves."

Grinning, Swim cut in: "I certainly hope so. You might be one of them."

"No, thank you," Thomas replied immediately. Embarrassing laughter followed, but it quickly turned to joviality as Swim pumped Thomas' hand good-naturedly. The trustees who attended, besides Spencer, Swim and Thatcher, included Mrs. Philip Conley and Karl Wendt. Also attending
