Econ student stays at meeting as cops stand by in hallway

By Doug Ernst

Campus security officers were called to an Economics Department curriculum committee meeting Friday, when economics student Mark Stan ford, refused to obey orders to leave the meeting

Security officers did not enter the meeting to evict Stanford, but stayed outside the room to be on hand if they were needed, said Dr. James Sawery, dean of the School of Social Sciences. Stanford was allowed to remain for the duration of the meeting.

The Economics Department has made plans to include some form of student representation on curriculum committee, but the plans have not yet been implemented.

Stanford, economics major, was told by committee chairwoman Betty Chu to either stop talking during Friday's committee discussions, or leave the meeting, according to some of those in attendance.

When Stanford refused, Chu left the meeting to call Sawrey.

The policy was signed in 1968 by then-President Robert Clark, and amended changes were later signed in 1970 by SJSU President John Bunzel.

The incident Friday has prompted Sawrey to ask acting department head Donald Anthrop to bring the matter of student representation on curriculum committees before the department's personnel committee.

The department faculty voted Nov. 11 that students should be allowed to participate in curricular matters, but the method of selecting the student representatives has not been decided. There is no justification for that

$5 million cut made in state college request

More than $5 million has been cut from the California State University and Colleges budget request for the 1976-77 fiscal year, said Boyd Horne, assistant chief of budget for the board of trustees.

The cut from the chancellor's office proposed budget of $582 million to $576 million was made by the chancellor's office at the request of the board of Major cuts were made in the affirmative action program instructionally related activities (IRA), the Tyan Act and other instructionally related programs.

From the board of trustees, the budget goes to the state department on finance, which makes further recommendations before the budget goes to the state legislature.

From the legislature the budget goes to the governor, who has individual item veto power on fiscal matters.

Yesterday, the board of trustees committee on finance heard information on the budget presented by the California University and Colleges Student Presidents Association. The student presidents association expressed a need to set priorities by the board of trustees, Horne said.

However, no action was taken by the committee yesterday.

The largest cut fell upon the Ryan Act. It was cut by more than $1.6 million to $299,000. This large a cut would affect reedential courses and inservice training for teachers already in the field, said Dr. Denny Auchard, assistant dean of the School of Education.

(IRA) fund requests were cut by $824,000 to $424,000. Last year, IRA funds were cut drastically by the legislature and almost axed completely by Gov. Brown. Later, however, Brown reinstated some of those funds

The affirmative action request was cut by $164,000 to $295,000.

Other cuts included computing support, instructional administration and technical support for instruction.

Horne said it was not anticipated that the budget cuts would be altered by the finance committee. However, he said the budget may be revised because next fall's enrollment projections are considered to be low.

This is because many of the 19 state university and colleges including SJSU experienced increased enrollment this year, where it was thought that enrollment would be decreasing.

If the board of trustees finds that revised projected enrollment figures show an increase, then the budget would also be increased. Horne added The student presidents association cellor's office while the budget was being drawn up. Only five were included in the budget. Of the five asked for in the budget, three were cut. They were affirmative action, the Ryan Act (which sets credentialing requirements for teachers in California) and IRA (music and art programs, KSJS and the Spartan Daily, among others).

John Rico, A.S. president and vicechairman of the student presidents association, was at the board of trustees meeting in Los Anglels yesterday and today to ask why these cuts were made.

Geoff Ely, Rico's administrative assistant, said the student presidents association was upset with the way cuts were made in the budget requests.

'The cuts were executive action cuts," Ely said, "made by Chancellor (Glenn) Dumke without consulting students or faculty.

(student association wants its requests to remain and have any cuts made in open meetings instead of behind the chancellor's door as it seems," Elv said.

A.S. asks for 10% budget cut

Campus groups and programs that are funded on a yearly basis by the A.S. have been asked to cut their budget requests for next year by 10 per cent. The request apparently came from Colleen Culligan, A.S. treasurer, but she was unavailable yesterday for comment.

However, Geoff Ely, administrative assistant to A.S. President John Rico, confirmed the cutback request.

He said cutbacks were necessary if new programs are to be implemented. Ely also cited unpredictable enrollment figures as another reason for the cut-

'If programs don't make cutbacks," Ely said, "then A.S. won't have any money for funding new programs that might come up.'

In a letter appearing in today's Spartan Daily, Women's Center cooridnator Saelon Renkes said the requested cutbacks were asked because A.S. President John Rico wants more money for intercollegiate athletics.

'No comment' order covers Finney case

A cloak of secrecy has blanketed the sexual misconduct case of a SJSU psychology professor, Dr. Ben Finney According to Dr. David Stoker Counseling Department chairman, the SJSU administration has handed down instructions to make no comment concerning the case.

Finney, 56, admitted during a hearing in early October of having sex with 12 female patients in his Palo Alto clinic.

A.S. Judiciary gives gay group $150 for council's adding error

By Jim Barrett

Gay Pride Day representatives won a $150 settlement from the A.S. Council Thursday after the A.S. Judiciary found that the intent of the council was to allot $499 for Gay Pride Day rather than

The suit arose after a Councilman Michael Switzer erred in adding a list of figures, causing the council to vote Gay Pride Day representatives a total of $349 rather than the $499 they thought they were voting for.

The judiciary's finding could be appealed under certain conditions, Bill Hake, acting chief justice said after the Greg Soulds, business director, told the Spartan Daily the council would have to send him an order in its minutes before he can put the $150 into the Gay Pride Day account.

Hake said the judiciary had the authority to enforce its finding should the council fail to authorize the funds. However, said Hake, he can find no precedent for a method of enforcement and that the matter would be discussed at a judiciary meeting this week. In a telephone interview with A.S. Attorney General Perry Litchfield, the Spartan Daily was told that should the council fail to approve the allocation, the judiciary has no means to enforce its decision.

Veto possible Further, Litchfield said, even if the council approved the funding the A.S. President could veto the allotment.

Litchfield said that a suit against the council apparently had not been forseen by the writers of the constitution and that the constitution needed rewriting.

The issue began when an itemized list was incorrectly totaled showing $150 more than its actual total at a meeting of the special allocations committee. which makes fiscal recommendations to the council

The council's finance officer, Michael Switzer, who sits on the committee, said in a written statement that he had incorrectly totaled the "line items" but that he meant only to fund those items. Switzer's motion was for $499 rather than the actual total of $349.

A.S. Treasurer Colleen Culligan, who chaired the allocations meeting, said she thought she was voting for a $499 recommendation.

Culligan said she had erred in not checking Switzer's fugures before the vote and again after the meeting.

Culligan said she differed with Switzer in that she thought the council should have the right to decide whether the event should receive another $150.

Spencer Nutting, representing Gay Pride Day, said he had been at the committee meeting and at a special council meeting called to hear the request and that he thought the $499 figure was voted on both times.

But, at the business office, said

Nutting, representives learned that only $349 had been put into their ac-

Nutting said persons associated with Gay Pride Day paid the bills out of their pockets prior to the event because of the reduced funding

The event produced about $200 income over expenses, which was unexpected, said Nutting.

Nutting said there was no way to get money out of the account ot repay those who paid bills because they didn't keep However, Nutting said the $150 could be used for other purposes this year.

Switzer, who was not present at the trial, said in a statement the total of the line items "was not of overriding concern to me and I never set out to purposely fool anyone.

After the trial, Switzer explained that charges were made by some council members that he had deliberately deceived the council about the amount to be alloted. The judiciary wrote in its decision that the intention of the allocations committee and the council "was clearly to allocate $499" for Gay Pride Day. Hake said he could not elaborate on

Ex-con strives to write about social ills

By Chris Smith

A throbbing contempt for America's social-political system and a scarcity of means through which to vent that hostility drove James Maynard to, in 1971, begin silently sketching a novel. Two years later, 960 hand-written pages venomously reflected Maynard's thoughts on blacks and whites, capitalists and politicians. The autobiography's preface condemned the corrections system. So when prison guards came upon society, the manuscript was destroyed. Maynard, 31, came to SJSU in June after spending more than half his life in such institutions as San Quentin, Tracy and Soledad prisons. A freshman in journalism, Maynard said he wants to learn more about writing techniques and proper grammar

The tall, friendly man, known to his friends as "J.C." said he'd like to get some experience in radio and television journalism. But his major goal is to try again-now that there aren't any guards to intimidate him-to write a novel. "When I was in prison," Maynard recalled, "I loved to write."

Encouraged by fellow inmates who told him he had a flare for writing, Maynard said he composed articles on prison conditions, race relations and 'this whole social system," and sent them to the Los Angeles Free Press,

Berkeley Barb and Fortune News in

New York City. "I used to have to sneak them out" through visitors and contacts, Maynard said.

They (prison personnel) found a few of my articles and they tore them all up," he said.

Maynard said he's been in various types of detention facilities since, at age 13, he left his home in a Chicago ghetto for a life in the streets of Los

He said that, beside his childhood, his longest period of freedom ran from May, 1967 through October, 1971. 'Before then," he said, "I don't think I had a good six months on the street at one time.' He married at ages 17, 19, and 23, all three of the marriages ending in divorce.

Maynard said his occupations have included oilfield worker as well as "pimp, robber, thief and lum-

From 1968 to 1970, he said, he smuggled weapons from Mexico into California as a "gun runner" for the Black Panthers.

But his main sources of income in the past, Maynard said, were robberies of illegal gambling houses and drug dealers or "connections." He said he had made from $500 to $15,000 a month because the gambling businesses might take in $8,000 to $10,000 a weekend and the connections generally had to maintain huge supplies of cash.

You don't write checks" for illegal drugs, he said.

Maynard said there had been both fat and lean months as a robber, depending on how much money the gambling houses and pushers were collecting

"Sometimes," he said, "I'd knock off a place and we wouldn't have to work for six months." Maynard said he's been in prison on such convictions as armed robbery, burglary and assault on an officer. His most recent arrest, he said, came in October, 1971, on charges of robbery, kidnap, assault, attempted murder, possession of narcotics and being an ex-felon in possession of a firearm. 'You buy your way out" of serious convictions and long prison sentences, Maynard said, so he always kept an attorney "on the payroll." He said he and two others paid $18,000 in legal fees and out of all the charges piled against him in the October, 1971 arrest, he was convicted in January, 1972, of grand theft.

A.S. treasurer calls for cutbacks. apparently to give more to sports

While John Rico is so generously making plans for guaranteeing a nice fat chunck of funds for intercollegiate athletics, Colleen Culligan, A.S. treasurer, is requesting groups and organizations tighten their belts.

In a memo to "All A.S.-funded accounts, and prospective new accounts," she has stated "...it is important that every group or organization take a hard look at their budget request for the 1976-77 year. We are asking that you look for places to cutback, or place an arbitrary 10 per cent cut on your request, and begin to think in terms of priorities for your account.'

However, there are some inaccuracies in her reply to our letter of Nov. 20, regarding questionnaires sent along with CAR registration forms.

Dr. Wade states in her letter that the envelope does not read that completed questionnaires must be returned. We agree that this is true. The envelope states as quoted in our first letter and now again, "Questionnaire must be returned by Dec. 2, 1975, or class request forms will not be processed."

The word "completed" is indeed not in the statement. If the questionnaire did not have to be completed, just returned, then of what use could 1,500 uncompleted, returned questionnaires be to the study'

Considering the cost of the prepaid return envelopes and the paper used in printing the questionnaires the return of these would be an expensive waste

Once again, we can understand why Dr. Wade would like a 100 per cent return. It should be noted that the average return of a "good' question-naire is between 10 to 15 percent.

If 374 students out of 1,509 returned the questionnaires last year, the rate of return was 23.1 percent. At least the return is higher than could be expected for a questionnaire of this type.

Mercury editorial skirts issue downtown has lost its vibrancy share part of your keen sense of fun with such a "somber and humorless"

By Jeff Mapes
"Who says 'downtown' is dying?" said the lead sentence of an editorial in yesterday's San Jose Mercury praising the ground breaking for a new convention center and 12-story office building.

These projects "continue to enhance downtown San Jose's new- and vibrant image," the editorial continued.

It is, to be sure, an excellent example of revisionist history. Here is the Mercury praising a new cement and steel downtown for being "vibrant."

What history should record is the Mercury's role in destroying the vibrancy of the downtown area. yesterday's editorial notwithstanding. What made the downtown area so vibrant at one time was all the people and street life. It was a shopping and commerce area for the entire valley. City Hall was downtown, and so were the offices of the Mercury. But, along with rampant growth that leapfrogged out into the countryside, the large retail stores moved out to the new suburbs, something warmly welcomed by the Mercury. The Mercury management was so flushed with the increase in circulation and profits that it decided to contribute to the "vibrancy" of the downtown by picking up and moving to the outskirts

Ditto for city government, and for all the county offices.

What was left was a downtown with little reason for being.

Enter another boondoggle project financed by the federal government and received enthusaistically by the Mercury-urban renewal. In San Jose urban renewal meant clear out what few people were leftmost of them poor anyway-along with a lot of small businesses and old buildings.

It meant replacing them with sterile plazas and high-rise office buildings. But urban renewal, all vibrancy aside, did give corporations and developers a nice subsidy for locating office buildings downtown. And the

No, the Mercury is not to blame for

But for the Mercury to suggest that there is a new and vibrant image downtown is just not telling it like it is. More than anything else the Mercury has pushed "what is good for it, is good for the rest of the citizens here.'

When abandoning the downtown meant the Mercury could get rich off of advertising the housing tracts and selling papers to the newcomers, then the Mercury did not worry about "vibrancy" of downtown.

When the corporate buddies of the Mercury mangers get rich from building offices and convention centers with a government subsidy, then it became fashionable to "enhance" the downtown.

Yes, the Mercury editorials are very interesting and informative to read-as long as you do it between the lines.

Westerners have long called Lebanon the "Switzerland of the Mideast," because, as in Switzerland, money rather than ideology decides the country's goals.

But Khouri said the image of wealth and stability implied in the Switzerland comparison is false for most of the people in Lebanon.

"The economic system is almost a feudal system," he said, with most people living in poverty.

Since there is no industrial base to raise the standard of living, Lebanon is dependent on foreign trade and finance, Khouri, an economics sophomore, explained.

'This created a certain elite," he explained, that the Western press reports, could make money providing services to the swarms of foreigners who have traditionally passed through Beirut, the major city of Lebanon, on their way to the riches of the Arab world.

Religion not question While the political system is based on religion, "people understood it wasn't a question of Christians against Moslems," he said.

'It was poor against rich.' Yet, while Khouri pushed the idea that the strife there is based on class, not religion, when pressed he admitted this belief is most obvious in the students movement.

'Among the uneducated eople there is still a strong loyalty to traditional leaders," he said.

What finally caused the outbreak of open street fighting, that began about three months ago, is that the right-wing party, the Phalangists, decided to strike against a growing leftwing movement in Lebanon, Khouri said.

The left-wing movement,

has grown stronger since the Palestinians were kicked out of Jordan in 1971 during a civil war there.

Most of those Palestinians came to Lebanon, joining leftist movements, com posed of Christians and Moslems, there, he said.

The Phalangists want to that movement crush because the Palestinian presence has attracted Israeli attacks over the border, Khouri said.

The Phalangists have been receiving arms from the United States and Egypt, who want to crush the left, which supports Palestinians-the obstacle to accord between Egypt and Israel, Khouri

Calling the Phalangist militia, which wears black, "storm troopers," Khouri said, "Of course it is" frightening to see them on the streets.

"If we didn't have them wouldn't have this problem."

And he blamed the strength of the Phalangists in large part on the success of U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's peace plan that converted Sadat to a moderate stance.

Even Sadat is now calling the Phalangist leader, Pierre Gemayel, a "true Arab nationalist," which encourages the Phalangist attacks.

Stricter housing codes requested

By Keith Muraoka

The fact that students are paying high prices for delapidated housing concerns Val Brazelton, chief housing inspector of San Jose and a member of the housing task force.

Brazelton urged stricter property codes and enforcement at the housing task force meeting on Friday.

The task force, a subcommittee under the joint community and SJSU steering committee, hopes to make its recommendations at a Dec. 11 meeting with the City Council.

Brazelton recommended that the definition of a singlefamily dwelling be changed so that more of them will be classified as lodging houses.

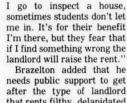

This would give him an opportunity to regularly inspect them and insure 'decent,

People feel fragmented, women's counselor says

By Ellen Linscott Lieberman

Women's survival counseling is not concerned with taking blindfolded participants to the woods, giving them two sticks and teaching them how to get home.

But for some, it is a way out of the woods, according to Marilyn Reeves, 26, women's survival counselor.

"Our system is not set up to make it easy for us to live," she said.

Filmmaker-prof Swigart completes Irish movie

Documentary film making is a profession that has taken Dr. Rob Swigart a variety of places-from his wife's hospital delivery room to small Irish villages.

Swigart, who is an assistant professor of English at SJSU, has just finished production of a onehour, color documentary called "Inishmaan"—a film about one aspect of Irish life

Inishmaan is one of the three tiny islands clustered together off the west coast of Ireland, commonly called the Aran Islands, Swigart

According to Swigart, "Inishmaan" focuses on the traditional way of life in the Aran Islands and attempts to capture the dying culture.

The dramatic structure of the film exposes the decline of that culture,' explained Swigart. "It shows how other people live and how to "feel" that way of Spartan Daily Inishmaan consists of two square miles and stands for middle island" in the Irish language, Swigart said.

In 1934 a "Man of Aran" film was produced which featured the fishing and cultural way of life on the islands," Swigart said.

'I decided to make another "comeback" film, to show how the island has changed in 40 years time," he added.

As a result, Steve Marley, a former student of Swigart and now a photographer for magazine, was sent to Ireland a year ago to study the Aran Islands for

In late May, Swigart, ccompanied by his wife daughter, Marley and production crew, flew to Ireland where film plans were underway.

As guests in Inishmaan, they were supported by the Irish Tourish Board who provided for their living expenses.

The documentary film is about the rustic life of Aran fisherman, Rory O'Concannon, who lived on the island with his wife and five children, Swigart said.

Symphony concert, Cage draw mixed reactions

Guest composer John Cage and pianist Michel Block joined the San Jose Symphony Orchestra Saturday night drawing a near full

Cage began the concert conducting the orchestra to his unique composition 'Atlas Ecliptacalis and Winter Music

His composition, similar to many of his recent works, consisted of 86 musicians each playing short blasts on instruments in a random fashion. The piece was composed by plotting the notes through a tran-sparent chart of star locations, resulting in what he calls "chance" music.

One of the most controversial American composers known for his unique and startling pieces, Cage drew mixed reactions Saturday night receiving frequent cat-calls like "throw the burn out," typical of an 1800's saloon.

"My last works that attempted to say something instead of letting sounds be sounds were written before 1950," Cage explained in the program and at a recent SJSU lecture-concert.

Cage, who appeared in a blue leisure suit and white shoes, rather than the customary tux, faced the orchestra alternating his arms which he held up and slowly drew to his side, another unique style.

He received a combination of enthusiastic cheers and angry "boos and hisses" at the end of the forty-five minute composition.

The difficult and dramatic piece was played beautifully and Block was definitely the favorite that evening.

The composition, played entirely with the left hand, was written for Paul Wittenstein, a close friend of Ravel who lost his right arm in World War I.

The bold single movement was fascinating both to listen to as well as watch. Block was forced to slide back and forth on his piano seat to reach the entire keyboard.

The second half of the concert was devoted to Johannes Brahms "Symphony No. 4 in E minor, Op. performed by the orchestra and conducted by George Cleve, symphony

This love of which I speak is slow to lose patience-it looks for a way of being constructive. It is not possessive: it is neither anxious to impress nor does it cherish inflated ideas of its own importance.

Love has good manners and does not pursue selfish advantage. It is not touchy. It does not keep account of evil or gloat over the wickedness of other people. On the contrary, it is glad with all good men when truth prevails. Love knows no limit to its endurance, no end to its trust, no fading of its hope: it can outlast anything. It is, in fact, the one thing that still stands when all else has fallen. 1 Corinthians 13:4-8

Nikolais Dance Theatre stages assualt on senses

The only thing Alwin Nikolais doesn't do is dance.

Nikolais, best described as a grand wizard of modern dance, brought his troup of 10 dancers to Flint Center last week for one performance that was nothing short of an assault on the

> Or our prawns, or clams, or corn dogs, or chicken.

Then again there's our famous cole slaw, soft drinks and our coffee is still 10d

The impeccable Nikolais stagecraft includes composing the music, costume design, developing the lighting scheme-and of course he is responsible for the choreography

What Nikolais and his New York based group present is high voltage entertainment that goes beyond dance. It is total environment theatre. It's origins lie somewhere around the year 2001.

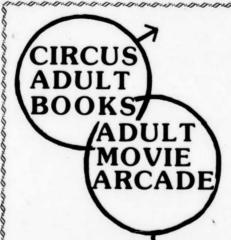

The dancers, five men and five women, are masters of technique. It is clear they are like pawns in a game only Nikolais can play as they are manipulated by his choreography.

At times their leotards, dappled with images, are used as screens for the projections that turn the stage into a theatre of surrealism. The electronic music sounds like someone twisting a dial across a radio band. The lighting is a kaleidoscope of pulsing color and the entire effect leaves the audience feeling as if their senses are being twisted to a breaking point.

In their first dance, titled Sanctum, the dancers were encased in stretchable fabric body bags. The projections resemble nerve ends. The effect is a cellular environment as the dancers vibratory movements give way to stilted staccato movements.

The electronic music grows louder and the tempo and beat grow stronger until it is hard to tell if one's head is pounding with a heartbeat

The SJSU football squad's hopes for a Tangerine Bowl bid went sour yesterday.

The bowl selection committee chose the University of South Carolina to oppose previously selected Miami University of Ohio in the Dec. 20 game to be held in Orlando, Fla.

Drinking prohibited

Administrative Officer Larry James of University Police said drinking is prohibited during any Spartan Stadium event and at varsity basketball games.

"We're concerned about people getting hurt. Many times people will drink, get rowdy and start throwing things.

"It's something we want to prevent before it happens,' said James.

The incident in which a student staff member emptied out a bottle of wine at a Spartan Stadium football game last month was not within the department guidelines, James said.

"The person has the choice of not bringing the alcohol in, not coming in, or disposing of the alcohol at the gate. Those options should be known to

The featured speaker was to be Karen Galloway, at-torney for Joan Little who was recently found not guilty of murdering a jailkeeper who allegedly raped her. Galloway will not appear however, because of previous legal responsibilities, according to Dean Peoples, SCAR spokesman.

Galloway planned to address the issues of desegregation, affirmative action and recent outbreaks of racist violence such as anti-busing rallies, according to posters distributed on campus.

Other speakers will be Rashaad Ali, Bay Area coordinator for the National Student Coalition Against Racism; Froben Lozada, chairman of the Chicano Studies Department at Oakland's Merritt College; and Omari Musa,, Socialist Worders Party candidate for the U.S. Senate.

Henry Gage, president of the San Jose chapter of the NAACP will speak on local desegregation issues.
