Ski excursion funds haven't been reported

By Marcene Fehrman A.S. still does not know how much money was made at the 1978 Winter Carnival, SJSU's annual ski excursion, even though it was held more than a month ago. A.S. is considering legal action to find out. Jerry Krantz, Winter Carnival chairman, had not brought records to the A.S. business office as of 4:30 p.m. yesterday, said A.S. Business Manager Jean Lenart.

A.S. Treasurer Maryanne Ryan planned to seek legal help late yesterday to determine what steps should be taken

According to Ryan, Krantz has repeatedly broken appointments for auditing financial records of the

The Winter Carnival group left Jan. 5 for Mt. Bachelor, Ore., and returned Jan. 11. Ryan said Krantz should have been to the A.S. business office within a week of his Krantz made one appointment with Lenart on Jan. 23, said Ryan, but cancelled it. He told Lenart he would be in later that afternoon or the next day, she explained. He never showed up.

Ryan went to Krantz's place of employment last Friday and gave him until 5 p.m. Monday to bring the auditing materials to the business

Krantz never showed up, Ryan

'Krantz said he would definitely be in," Ryan said. He allegedly told Ryan problems with the carnival committee had prevented his coming earlier.

Each year, explained Ryan, A.S. allots $3,000 for deposits on facilities and transportation of the ski trip.

This year ticket sales reimbursed the A.S. $2,800, a big improvement over last year's $900 loss when the trip was cancelled for lack The carnival money still unaccounted for is that made during the bingo night and T-shirt sales. Because Ryan had seen no receipts yet, she has no idea how much money was made during the carnival, nor exactly where the money is.

"Usually the Winter Carnival breaks even," Ryan said. "The object isn't to make money. But without the receipts I'll never know

Adding to the difficulties, Ryan discovered Monday that Krantz, last year's ski club president, is not an SJSU student and has not been since spring 1974.

It is required that any committee member be an SJSU student, Ryan explained.

'It must have been taken for granted," she said.

Next year, Ryan said, regulations should be tightened. She suggested all expenses and income

Results of the faculty poll due on presidential review idea

The final summary will be completed next week on the results of a faculty poll on presidential review taken last November.

The semifinal results are being examined this week and according to Roy Young, Political Science Department chairman, the direction they point is to review of all college

"Presently, most faculty members get reviewed every few years and the poll was to get the opinions of faculty members to see if they thought school presidents should be also," Young said.

Noah resigns

Director of University Relations James Noah has resigned his post as spokesman for the SJSU administration to return to a teaching post in the Department of Journalism and Advertising, according to SJSU President John Bunzel.

His resignation will be effective

An interview with Noah, who has held the position since 1965, will appear in tomorrow's Spartan presidents should be subject to periodic review by their faculties;

whether all presidents on CSUC campuses should be reviewed; and whether the president on this campus should be reviewed at an early date.

The questions were created by a committee set up by faculty organizations.

Participating organizations were the Congress of Faculty Associations, the American Association of University Professors, the California College and University Faculty Association, the California State Employees Association, United Professors of California and the Association of California State University

The poll also contained four estions concerning persons polled. Job status, length of time at SJSU, department of instruction and organization membership were requested.

Of the 544 responses to the poll, 88 had additional comments which will also be part of the total evaluation, Young said.

"Overall, the responses were pretty good," he noted. "There was a 40 or 50 percent return." Approximately 1,200 poll sheets were mailed out, he added.

Both full- and part-time in-structors in every department received a poll sheet.

"Personally, I feel that all college presidents should be reviewed, at least, every five years," Young said. "Full professors are not, but should be too.

"Every teacher needs evaluations, not only by students but by other faculty members.

"The poll was devised for in-put," he said. "Actually, the teachers have little power; it is the trustees who must determine if college presidents be reviewed," Young included.

He added that the poll shows input of equality.
For years, Young said, faculty members have argued that presidents be reviewed like "It's time they are," he said.

Campus radio diversifies daily programs

On-the-air experience gained at KSJS

"Damn!"

Dennis Teresi madly flipped switches and turned knobs while precious seconds raced against him. Slamming a 45 onto one turntable just as the last notes of Barry Manilow's "Daybreak" faded on the other, he flicked the "On The Air"

'This is KSJS, and I'm 'Denny Teri' playing only the hits for you..."
Such is the frenzy in store for the disc jockey who gets behind. But you can bet it won't happen often at SJSU radio station KSJS. It rarely happens to "Denny," and he's blind. The transmitter may broadcast from the library roof, but the crew members of KSJS operate as if they were beaming from Mount Sutro.

"We try to maintain as professional an atmosphere as possible," said Ron (Rockin' Ron Adams) Soergal, student station

'This is some of the best training a DJ can get - he has to work his own board, produce public affairs programs and essentially execute all the functions of a professional broadcaster.

The 21-year-old pointed out that Dr. Don Rose, the popular KFRC disc jockey, has a special engineer to do most everything but talk for him during his morning show.

Organized like a cross between San Francisco's K-101 and San Jose's KLOK, KSJS caters to the adult contemporary music listener from 7 a.m. to 1 a.m. Monday through Thursday, playing MOR (middle of the road) oldies and Top-40 hits from the Billboard and Gavin Report charts.

From Friday at 6 a.m. to 2 a.m. Sunday, the station features jazz, rock and soul, and the time slot from 6 a.m. to midnight Sunday is devoted to "Christian rock," religious programs and Latin music and cultural programming.

Short news spots are run at 2, 3 and 4 p.m. every weekday.

At 90.7 on the FM dial, the tiny 1,000-watt station (San Jose's KLOK puts out 50,000 watts) suffers from non-recognition.

"Most people don't know we exist," lamented Soergal. "There are even faculty members who've never heard of us, and that's pathetic - or rather, apathetic.

Hoping to improve on that record, this semester's KSJS is quite different station from last semester's

'The last couple of years the station was crap," Soergal said.
"There was no organization - the DJs would run in here, play whatever they felt like and split. We'd never see them until the next

'As a result, one shift we'd be playing country music, the next progressive rock and the next shift jazz. You could never tell what was

We're trying to be consistent this semester," said Carol Mosebar, program director. "If people know what they're going to hear when they tune us in, maybe more people

In addition to regular Seals and Crofts programming, KSJS will broadcast In addition City Council meetings live every Tuesday night this semester, and is hoping for an interview with Leif Garret, who recently recorded a rendition of the old Dion tune 'Runaround Sue.

The station's DJs are as diverse as the station's programming.

Twenty-three-year-old Mark Nelson, now in his first semester on the air, was a theatre arts major at SJSU until a motorcycle accident confined him to a wheelchair two years ago.

His handicap poses no problem, however, as all controls are easily within reach of his chair.

Although he plays Top-40 music at KSJS, Nelson prefers 'space jazz and strange things that most people have never heard of. Gentle Giant and Stomer Yamashta, progressive English bands like that.

'Denny," the blind DJ, has been broadcasting on KSJS for a year-and-a-half. The lively 23-year-old deftly works the controls as if he had eyes in his fingers.

He selects records by feeling for paper dots affixed to the hit sides, puts them on the turntable and spins them just long enough to hear the beginning. He needs to hear only the first one or two notes to recognize the song.

Time is kept with a braille watch, and he has the position of the controls memorized. Denny prefers to listen to Top-40 groups like Fleetwood Mac and

In addition to a music studio in the Theatre Arts Building, KSJS has news studio in the Journalism Building

Activity is brisk in the newsroom and, according to Soergal, who is news editor as well

tighten up before they slacken this

We have an unusually small staff - six people - and have to produce 25 minutes of news each weekday," he said. Since stories are from 30 seconds to three minutes

"However," added newsroom engineer Joe McMorrow hopefully. we had an excellent staff last semester. They really went out and got stories instead of sitting around rewriting wire service releases

Dennis Teresi is a blind disc jockey for KSJS, the SJSU on-campus radio station. This semester the radio station is changing its format to gain some recognition it has lost over the last couple of years. The station has music for all types of listeners, from classical to religious.

Transit advantages overshadow problems

By Cheryl Hahs

County Transit. Upon hearing these words, people tend to spit, swear, choke, snarl or otherwise show an intense disliking for Santa Clara County Transit District.

All of us know the system's bad points, which one hears every day at major bus stops and on the buses

The time has come, however, to be reminded of the advantages.

County Transit affords you the time for reading, studying and sleeping - things you should not do while driving a car, motorcycle or

Time can also be used to think something you can find difficult when worrying about parking or getting to class on time, which are now one and the same thing.

Cheryl Hahs is a Spartan Daily

However, transit is un-dependable. After two and a half years of undependability, imagine the patience I have learned, especially when I needed transit to get me from downtown to work in south San Jose in 20 minutes, with no bus in sight.

A hint on coping is to simply accept the system as it is - as long as you get to your destination safely, you should be thankful.

Acquaintances have been made on transit, both good and bad ones. Good ones are the ones encountered every day, ones who make life a little more pleasant after an irritating day with work, school and transportation.

Bad or undesirable meetings occur with persons who are annoying: drunks, chatterboxes and strangely dressed people. If you are forced to be near an undesirable person, reading does not show them you wish to be left alone.

An easy solution is placing an earphone from a portable radio into your ear, turning the volume up and yelling "What?" every time the annoyance speaks. This is lesson two

If you are talkative (but not too much), bus drivers can become a necessary and convenient acquaintance. Once the driver knows you, he may actually wait a minute or so if you are late.

And because transit rarely has stops near one's destination, one can relearn the fine art of walking.

Walking, according to someone, is good for one's circulatory system or something. By walking, I not only help whatever it is I am supposed to be helping, but I rid myself of any anger, frustration and annoyance I feel at having to walk a mile and a half or wait an hour before the next

County Transit lines are criticized about reaching their destinations in a round-about manner. You can interpret this negatively or positively. Roundrobin schedules are unnerving if you have to reach your destination at a certain time and a more direct route would be faster.

If, however, you are not in a rush, round-about bus runs can be fun and interesting. You learn where different San Jose "sites" are. I can tell you how to get to Winchester Mystery House, St. James Park, City Hall, IBM, Eastridge, Center for the Performing Arts and major apartment complexes, among

I can even tell you which bus stops have the most marriage proposals from drunks.

Buses also offer the cheapest form of transportation to those who do not have a driver's license. As a former non-driver (but still transit rider), I have experienced the inconvenience of relying upon someone to transport me. With the transit system, one regains some independence when the lines run. Instead of conforming to a friend's schedules and destinations, transit offers service to the county. I need only watch the clocks to make the necessary connections.

Santa Clara County Transit? It is all we have and it is irritating, sometimes, to say the least, but there is a lighter side, and one can develop an immunity to what are, after a while, minor annoyances.

Chapel policy discriminates against religious group use

By Hal Donaldson Religious groups should not be looked upon any differently than any other campus organization, but campus regulations are discriminating against them and depriving them of their rights.

Religious-oriented groups may no longer use the campus chapel (Spartan Memorial) for Bible studies because university officials and the local American Civil Liberties Union said such use was against the principles of separation of church and state.

Hal Donaldson is a Spartan Daily

The Santa Clara County chapter of the ACLU helped push religious groups out of the chapel and now is planning to go one step further by banning them from all campus

Its actions are based on the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and U.S. Supreme Court decisions: Everson vs. Board of Education (1947), dealing with the use of tax money by a religious group, and Sloan vs. Lemon (1971), concerning the question of entanglement.

A decision by California At-torney General Evelle Younger in March of 1976 prohibited the free use of high school property for religious activities.

The First Amendment says "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." The ACLU and some university officials interpret the use of the chapel by religious groups as respecting an establishment of religion. That interpretation is in-

When the amendment was passed in 1791, Congress was referring to two areas: financial aid and favoritism toward a particular

The use of the chapel by religious groups does not fall into either area. All religious-oriented groups had equal accessibility to the University officials have been gracious enough to allow religious groups to meet in other campus facilities as long as the majority of those attending are students. But the ACLU wants religious groups off could be taken away.

The Everson case, which dealt with the use of taxes by a religious group, should not apply because these groups are not using tax money, and the facility was built on

The Lemon case doesn't apply for the same reasons spoken of in the First Amendment.

Younger's opinion which dealt with high schools, is understandable, but a university should be looked at in a different manner because of its acceptance of a diversity of views.

A spokesman for a group which was forced out of the chapel said if an atheist group wanted to use the facility they probably could.

Maybe religious groups should call themselves "anti-atheists" they could use the facility.

The chapel was renamed the Spartan Memorial to take away its religious significance, but if that was the purpose then the pews and stained glass window must also be removed and the ceiling restruc-

Former SJSU President Thomas MacQuarrie, after the chapel was renovated in 1966, said "I am glad to accept a gift which represents the highest values in life at a time when many influences are at work to tear down the lives of young people.

The location of religious meetings on campus should not bother religious groups, but the chance that they may not be able to meet should concern not only them but every other group on campus.

The current ruling bans religious groups only. It doesn't apply to the Gay Student's Union or the Revolutionary Student Brigade because they aren't associated with

Bureaucratic policies, fees

Dorm students face hassles to pay our second installment fee by

By Kevin Fagan and Margo Kearns

When Hercules was expected to and did get the golden apples of the Hesperides, he had the god Atlas to help him.

Dorm students on financial aid are expected to pay their full resident fees to Auxiliary Enterprises one month before they get their second semester benefits. Unfortunately, they don't have Atlas to hold up the world for them.

Kevin Fagan and Margo Kearns are Spartan Daily reporters

INCIDENT: One student was expected to have paid her dorm fee in November, even though her out of state financial aid check did not arrive until February. She was charged an $11 late fee and lost one day of meals because she was not allowed a meal book until her fees were paid. Her fees were not adjusted to account for the lost meals

INCIDENT: We were expected

Jan. 1 although financial aid checks were not distributed until Jan. 31. We were charged an $11 late fee and did without meals for two days. Our fees were left unadjusted also.

In both of the above incidents, the students were told by the Financial Aid Office and Auxiliary Enterprises they had no choice in the matter and would be allowed no leeway on fee deadlines.

Last year the second dorm in-stallment was due in April, half way through the semester. By that time financial aid residents had their checks and could make the due date.

By moving up the due date, Auxiliary Enterprises is asking financial aid residents for money they don't have. If they had such amounts of cash handy they would not be on financial aid.

Financial aid dorm residents depend almost totally on their benefits to pay college expenses, of which housing is the major one. Legally, Auxiliary Enterprises has the right to collect all dorm fees before residents move in, but that does not make the policy right. Dorm students on financial aid are under special circumstancs and should be treated specially.

Auxiliary Enterprises' in-flexibilty with finanial aid residents is unnecessary antagonism and poor business practice.

Since the dorms are a non-profit organizaton during the school year, they should be specially geared to help the students. Instead, they treat financial aid students with suspicion, quoting blind bureaucratic policy in their faces as if the students were going to rip

The risk of waiting an extra few weeks for the financial aid resident's fee is not that great - financial aid checks are guaranteed to the students since the beginning of the school year. Checks can easily be confirmed through the Financial Aid

Auxiliary means assistance or supporting; aiding, according to Webster' Dictionary The Auxiliary Enterprice is not living up to its name.

Inaction main problem Farmlands vs. sprawl

By Kathy Beck

Environmentalist and Urbanite? People today are saying one thing and actually doing another. The majority are advocating a clean and natural environment while taking a back seat and watching cities grow to huge proportions.

For instance, San Jose is classified as one of the nation's fastest growing cities. But growth be beneficial to the atmosphere and not just to our pocket.

San Jose is growing in suburbs, blossoming in business buildings and sprouting shopping centers. But, are we paying close attention to the environment and the effects of urban expansion?

> Kathy Beck is a Spartan Daily reporter

The Association of Bay Area Governments (ABAG), of which San Jose is a member, is drawing up an environmental management plan to help the area with cleaner air, shorter commutes and less urban sprawl. This is a step in the right direction, if the project gets off the

The cost of the project is a major worry of ABAG and might be the only hindrance. "Everybody's for cleaning up the environment until they find out how much it costs," said task force adviser Dianne Feinstein of San Francisco

Money is certainly a primary concern, but so is breathng without gasping. We've spent a lot of money messing up the environment. So, of course it is going to take a lot of money to make things better, if it is

People apparently are not feeling the environmental squeeze as they say they are. A recent California poll by pollster Marvin Fields found that one out of four persons thinks there is plenty of land for both farms and people. But, a drive in the country seems to indicate that housing is in greater demand than alfalfa or corn.

When asked if it comes to a choice between using productive farmlands for farming or housing, 82 percent stated the land should go to farming. However, where are the farmlands going? More and more industry and urbanization are pushing the fields and farms farther

So, if you are an environmentalist or an urbanite or both, watch out for San Jose's pansion but at the same time look at the effort it is making through ABAG. Priorities are only where you

Mace license course at SJSU soon

Mace, a liquid tear gas, may soon be the valued companion of many SJSU women as they walk through lonely parking gargaes or deserted campus streets.

On Jan. 1, 1977, State Senate Bill 1943 added a section to the penal code allowing properly licensed citizens to carry Mace.

Through the joint efforts of Sgt. William Correll of University Police, officials of Cupertino's De Anza College and A.S. Attorney General Ron Stevenson, classes on the use of Mace will be offered soon this semester at De Anza and later at SJSU.

San Jose Community College will offer mace classes on Feb. 25 from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.. San Jose Police Officer Leroy Bettcher will teach the class. There is a $5 fee. Registration forms may be obtained from University Police headquarters on Coffee -- drinking yourself to death?

By Dan Weems
Will the cup of coffee that gets you going in the morning send you to an early grave?

Dr. Everett Lefforge of the SJSU Health Center

"Some of the effects of caffeine balance each other," Lefforge said. "It causes one system to speed up the heart, but causes another to slow it down."

He said caffeine is used stimulating respiration.

"You can study better and perform better after drinking coffee as long as you don't go so far that you get all 'hyped,' "he said.

'A year or so ago we had a student come in who had been up all night drinking strong coffee to study for a test. The next couldn't take the test.'

Those who should avoid drinking coffee, Lefforge said, are persons with active peptic ulcers or irregular heartbeats.

If drinking coffee upsets your stomach, Lefforge said, it often helps to take your coffee with meals or lots of cream. He said the other oils in coffee are more likely to cause discomfort than the caf-

In a recent study on the effects of caffeine on nine young people at Vanderbilt University, scientists found that on the average:

Blood pressure creased by about a tenth;

Adrenalin output increased by 207 percent and the output of a related hormone, norepinephrine, increased by 75 percent;

Heart rates dropped slightly at first, then increased after about an hour; Breathing rates increased by 20 percent.

'I don't think one or two cups of coffee a day is going to hurt most people," said Lefforge, adding that he drinks more than that amount himself.

Clearly a confirmed coffee drinker, Lefforge said asking him what he considers a moderate amount of coffee to drink is like "asking a cigarette addict what a moderate amount of cigarettes is."

Lefforge said it is important to remember that the overages obtained by the scientists at Vanderbilt will not hold true for everyone and that most people aren't average.

According to Spartan Food Services Manager Lorraine David, between 206 and 246 gallons of coffee are purchased in the campus cafeteria and bakery each day.

An additional 36 gallons are sold by vending machines and vendors on campus, according to vending manager Mike Dolan of Spartan Shops.

'You can't deny that caffeine is a stimulant. People drink coffee for the stimulant effect," Lefforge said. He said caffeine is not dangerous as other stimulants, such as amphetamines.

'To summarize in a nutshell, caffeine does things to some people but not to everybody," Lef-

SJSU journalism grad is Tahoe's 'paid flack'

By Nancy Smith Somehow the title "Publicity Director of Del Webb's Sahara Tahoe Hotel and Casino" and the young man in faded jeans and yellow T-shirt do not

But Jack Bulavsky is a 'jeans and T-shirt' kind of person - comfortable to be with, easy to talk to and friendly. And he is publicity director of Del Sahara Tahoe

Hotel and Casino.

Bulavsky, 33, came to the job in March 1976 with a background primarily in radio news. Several months after his 1971 graduation from SJSU with degree in radio-telvision journalism, he landed a job as news director at KTHO radio station in South Lake Tahoe. After a year he moved on to news director of KCBN in Reno. Three ears later he took a job at KOH, also in Reno.

Before coming to SJSU, Bulavsky was a journalist in the U.S. Army. While stationed in Thailand he became editor of the Supthai Sentinel, the only official military newspaper in the country. He later edited the Fort Huachuca (Ariz.) Scout.

So how did he come to be in publicity at a hotel and casino in Lake Tahoe?

"One day a friend of mine stopped me in Reno," Bulavsky said, "and told me he had heard that the publicity job at Sahara was opening up. He thought I ought to go down and see the public relations director about it. I did, got the job, and two weeks later here I was."

SJSU graduate Jack Bulavsky

Bulavsky's responsibilities range from organizing the children's Christmas party for employees to setting up press conferences for celebrities. He also edits the employee newsletter, Passline, and is assistant editor of Sahara Tahoe's "Scene magazine. "It was exciting, very exciting, when I first started -- especially especially meeting and working with the stars and their managers," Bulavsky said."But after six months, it became pretty much like any other job - except meeting the stars is still exciting Bulavsky said he attends the opening of every show in the High Sierra Room at the hotel.

"I'm getting tired of going to dinner shows," he tertainers he has particularly enjoyed meeting and talking with. Bulavsky thinks that "the fact a person is a star shouldn't mean we can't sit down and

The clean air, mountains and beautiful scenery of Lake Tahoe seem to have a good effect on the stars, according to Bulavsky. Maybe they are more relaxed in this at-mosphere," he said. "Most of them are from areas like Los Angeles where it is congested and smoggy. They like coming here, and it seems to affect their whole personality.'

Bulavsky agreed that there is a certain "unreal" quality about the world of the hotel and casino.

"I used to hang around here a lot at first," he said, 'but then I became accustomed to it and the job became just a job. Now I like to get away from the hotel when work is done, go up to my house and enjoy some privacy."

Bulavsky frequently swivels his chair as talks so he can look out the window. Occasionally, he walks over to the window to look out at an inviting view of the Sierra Nevada and the Heavenly Valley ski

"I think one reason I like this job is because I can look out this window at the mountains. I must spend a lot of time looking out the window," reflected.

'My friends in journalism asked why I was leaving 'real' journalism to become a 'paid flack'," Bulavsky said, referring to journalists' traditional disdain for public relations people. "Let me give you some facts," he declared, striking the desk for em-

'Reporters depend on my press releases, and they are usually printed verbatim. News people call me for stories, free passes to shows, and I am the one who sets up press con-ferences with the stars for reporters," Bulavsky said

Bulavsky said he has gained valuable experience and contacts in his job, and his previous perience, he thinks he is in a position to do almost anything in the field of journalism.

"I don't know what I want to do," he said. "I'll just wait and see what comes along."

UOP's home court an over-advantage

When a basketball team has to play on a court that, of all things, is not level, big enough, or maintained, that is ough of a disadvantage to the visitor.

But when the visitor also has to fight off officials who are intimidated by a loud home-town crowd, winning is near impossible, as SJSU found out in Stockton Saturday, losing to University of the Pacific, 74-73.

TUe Stockton Civic Auditorium is, as its name would indicate, an auditorium. It certainly isn't a basketball arena. The flooring was put in when the structure was erected in 1925, and through clowning of the Harlem Globetrotters and the circuses, the floor has never been

Not on the level

At one end of the floor, the basket is 10 feet above the floor. But if one sets a basketball down, as I did Saturday afternoon, it rolls away.

Ike Newton can tell people why the ball rolled away the floor is not level. It is not to make the storm runoff from the leaky roof better.

Believe it or not, the roof doesn't leak, or so Harvey Girsh, the maintenance man at the Civic for the past 28 years, claims.

The flooring has wharped underneath, and no one has bothered to repair it.

The floor is not waxed, so players do not get a grip on the floor with their footwear, adding to the danger of the omnipresent confines.

There are walls within 18 inches of the court in some places, and fans on one sideline have their feet inbounds.

Winning is, at times, secondary to survival.

The Civic holds 2,800 people when the fire marshall is keeping close watch, but standing room only crowds approach 3,000, Girsh said.

Players get hurt running into the crowd, tables, chairs, stage and basket standards surrounding the court.

The fans are right on top of the action, and from the spectator point of view, it is an excellent arena with the exception of about 500 seats, from which one end is ob-

I do not question the four-point play call which won the ballgame for University of the Pacific, I question the timing. In observing nearly 100 high school and college games this season, I had seen that call made once until 1:29 remained in the game Saturday.

The call allowed a rare four-point play to decide the

Costly non-call

An even more costly non-call with five seconds to go against cost the Spartans the game. Tracy Haynes tried to rebound Michael Mendez' missed shot. Haynes had inside position, got butchered...and nothing was called

Crowd intimidation is the only explanation I can think

Fortunately, there is an on-campus facility being built on the UOP campus, which should alleviate some of the hazards a visiting team faces invading Stockton. But two years from now when play starts in the new arena, there will be three SJSU juniors - Michael Mendez, Sid Williams and Doug Murrey - who are going to remember that "homer," and they'll want revenge.

There will be a lot of visiting teams laughing when

Professors get Brown's ear

A meeting he had with Governor Brown on Monday may lead to the end of a "decade of frustration" for faculty groups in the California State University and College system, according to Warren Kessler, president of United Professors of California.

UPC, and AFL-CIO affiliate, represents nearly 3,700 professional employees and faculty members in the 19campus system, and is California's largest professors'

Kessler said Monday's meeting was the first time a governor of the state has met with faculty groups.

We felt the governor was insulated and that his delegates weren't passing our thoughts on to him,'

Kessler said. To overcome this insulation, Kessler said Brown may appoint someone as his education adviser.

This education adviser would, according to Kessler pass on to Governor Brown any special problems which people involved in education in the state feel deserve Brown's attention.

There's no reason for someone with his (Brown's) sensitivities to alienate professors who share many of this own ideals, "Kessler said. 'Our union represents the kinds of people who would be responsive to his moves

On the other hand, with the basic formulas we're than under (former Governor Ronald) Reagan.

Under existing circumstances, Kessler said he can't ask members of his union to support Brown, but he expressed hope that Monday's meeting was just the student writing skills and the new Instructionally Related Activities fee with Brown, and that the governor in-structed his aides present at the meeting to look into the proposals raised.

IRA fee, according to Kessler, is nothing more than a

Kessler said he told the governor that as these fees climb higher in the next few years people will remember Brown as the governor who brought tuition to the CSUC system, a thought Kessler said didn't appear to bother

Profs form anti-rape fund-prompted by rash of assaults

The rash of rapes and assaults at SJSU last semester has prompted the formation of a $1,000 'emergency anti-rape fund" by United Professors of California to aid antirape programs.

"We were very much distressed by the incidents at SJSU and other campuses around the state." said Dr. Warren Kessler, UPC president.

UPC is the largest professors' union in California, representing some 3,700 professional employees of the California State University and

Carpool program falls short of quota

Santa Clara County's carpool program has come short of meeting the commuter enrollment quota set for itself at its inception last March according to program coordinator Fred Cronn.

Instead of the participation rate sought by then+ coordinator for the program, Walter Gedymin, of '70 to 80 percent hopefully, 40 percent realistically," the program has succeeded in enrolling only one percent of the county's working population.

Participation at San Jose State University was 'very poor," according to Sticsey Cutler, co-coordinator for the program.

The program uses a computer to match persons who live within one mile of one another and work or go to school within a similar area. Registration cards are available in the Student Union and are distributed to major companies, shopping centers and colleges in the

"We didn't expect it to be too good at first," said Cronn, but he added hopefully, "I'm sure the figures will be much higher in our next survey in March.'

Present figures are based on a survey conducted by the program in July.

Of the one percent who enrolled, 15 percent were

Cronn attributed the low successful matching rate to conflicting schedules on the parts of the riders.

Five percent of the (SJSU) student population responded to the program. Cutler could not give a figure for the number of responding students who actually got into a carpool, but she indicated the rate was 'disappointingly low

'The problem with students," she said, "is that the program is set up for commuters with regular Monday

today

5:30 p.m.

We have better luck with staffers at the University because they keep steadier hours that are easier to match with another rider

She attributed this to inadequate publicity and promotion by the university administration and unwillingness to participate on the parts of the employees.

"They (SJSU employees) just don't realize how much money they could save if they carpooled," she lamented. too easy for them to just keep going on as they are and not take the trouble to get into a carpool.

Cronn claimed one-and-a-half million vehicle miles and about $185,000 in gas money had been saved by the 600 carpoolers who have enrolled in the program so far.

Half of those savings have been in the last three months, he said, indicating that usage of the program is increasing rapidly

Gedymin predicted in March that after the program's initial cost through August 1977 of $100,000, shouldered by the California Department of Transportation and Santa Clara County Transportation Agency, the program's cost would be reduced to "virtually nothing.

Cronn claimed this is now true, predicting last Tuesday that the program will cost about an additional $15,000 by next July Transportation programs are always expensive," he said. 'Even a bus costs more than the entire carpooling program. They run about $90,000.'
