Foosball revenue borrowed for team trips

Bowling coach mishandles games area funds

By Carol Sarasohn

S.U. Games Area Manager Terry Gregory has been misusing foosball machine income to finance SJSU bowling team excursions, a two-week investigation has revealed.

Gregory, who is also the women's bowling coach, has admitted using foosball money as a petty cash fund for a variety of expenditures, according to Robert Martin, dean of student services.

SJSU President John Bunzel directed Martin and Glen Guttormsen, director of business affairs, to conduct the investigation after the Spartan Daily informed Bunzel of the rumored misuse of funds.

As a result of the preliminary investigation, Bunzel has ordered Guttormsen to hire an off-campus auditing team to thoroughly review management practices in the games area.

The auditing firm should be selected by today, Martin indicated.

A statement issued by Bunzel Thursday said, "The precise amount of this kind of expenditure out of this fund is not yet known. But what is clear is that this is not an approved procedure or budgeted use of this money."

While the precise amount of money involved or the length of time over which this has occurred has not yet been determined, Martin said, "It probably involves several hundred dollars during this school year."

No allegations of criminal activity — such as Gregory using the money for his own personal use — have been made, according to Martin.

The foosball machines — miniature soccer games for two or more players — are the only non-metered games in the Student Union.

Quarters dropped into foosball machines fall into a box and are then collected by Gregory or his assistant manager, Jerry Nunes, who also serves as the men's bowling coach.

Either Gregory or Pat Rossler, an alternate member of the women's bowling team, then counts and deposits the money in the bank weekly.

When Gregory needs money for machine repairs, machine transportation or for bowling team trips, he must fill out a requisition form.

The requisition form is then sent either to the A.S. Business Office or the San Jose Foundation for approval. The procedure can take as long as two weeks if it goes through the foundation or one to three days if approval is requested from the business office, according to Ron Barrett, S.U. director, and Gregory's immediate superior.

However, in order to avoid the red tape of filling out forms, Gregory has been borrowing money from the foosball machines, logging an I.O.U. into the books, spending the money and then asking for reimbursement, Martin said.

Barrett, who described Gregory as an "excellent manager who has worked for me for seven years" said he believes Gregory adopted the unorthodox procedure for handling money as a "convenience when he needed money immediately for repairs or other expenditures."

Barrett admitted, "there is always a chance — if anyone has an intention to defraud, it can be done."

Ironically, it was Gregory's innovative efforts to make more money for the games area and the success of the bowling teams this year which have resulted in his present plight.

Gregory said that, up until about a year ago, an outside company provided the pinball machines and pool tables for the games area. The company kept 50 percent of the income in exchange for maintenance and repairs.

Gregory said he decided to lease machines instead and hire his own mechanics to repair the machines, thereby allowing the games area income to be kept solely by the Student Union.

Whenever a machine breaks down, the games area loses money. Rather than wait for three days to two weeks to receive money for parts from a requisition, Gregory borrowed from the foosball machines.

The unprecedented success of the bowling teams has also contributed to Gregory's headaches.

The women's bowling team has reached the national competition for four years in a row. However, the men's bowling team has just this year won enough sectional tournaments to qualify for national competition.

The teams have competed this year in Las Vegas, Nevada, St. Louis, Mo., and Miami, Fla. At the end of this month, they will compete for the national championship in Milwaukee, Wis.

Funds from three sources are available for the teams:

1. A travel budget for Gregory paid for from games area money — $2,400.

2. Fund-raising bowling tournaments sponsored by the teams have raised $1,600 this year.

3. Money requested from the A.S. Council — $1,760.

The majority of the tournaments the teams participate in are in California — close enough to allow carpooling and sharing of gas expenditures by team members. Ordinarily, the money Gregory receives would be sufficient to handle expenses.

But this year, the men's team qualified for the semi-finals in Las Vegas and the team flew to the tournament and stayed overnight, four to a room, and then flew back.

The finals this year are being paid for by the Pabst Brewing Co., the sponsors for the Milwaukee competition. Five team members and a coach are paid for, but an alternate member for each team must pay his or her own way. The cost for the flight, excluding lodging and meals is $600 for the two.

Gregory said he has spent all the money allocated by the A.S. Council and all but $166 from the fund-raising efforts. In order to pay for the alternate members, he will have to write a check against his travel allowance which will then show a deficit.

Barrett said this is an acceptable manner to sponsor the alternates. He said Gregory has surplus funds in other accounts such as maintenance and repairs. The money will be transferred from one of these accounts to pay for the flight tickets.

At the beginning of the investigation Martin said that if Gregory had been using foosball income as a petty cash fund it would "not be illegal or criminal. It is just a matter of Gregory exceeding his authority."

At the conclusion of the preliminary investigation Martin said it was "clear a thorough auditing is needed."

Terry Gregory

On Tuesday morning, April 11, Martin and Barrett met with two A.S. Councilmembers, both of whom worked in the games area. One is also on the bowling team.

Both of the councilmembers, who would not comment on the record, told Martin and Barrett of the rumors they had heard about misuse of the foosball funds.

At first (April 11) Barrett denied any allegations had been made, but two days later, he said Gregory was being investigated. Barrett said Gregory had assured him the money was not being used as a petty cash fund.

Barrett said there was "no need for Gregory to take money from foosball machines, since alternate sources of funding are available."

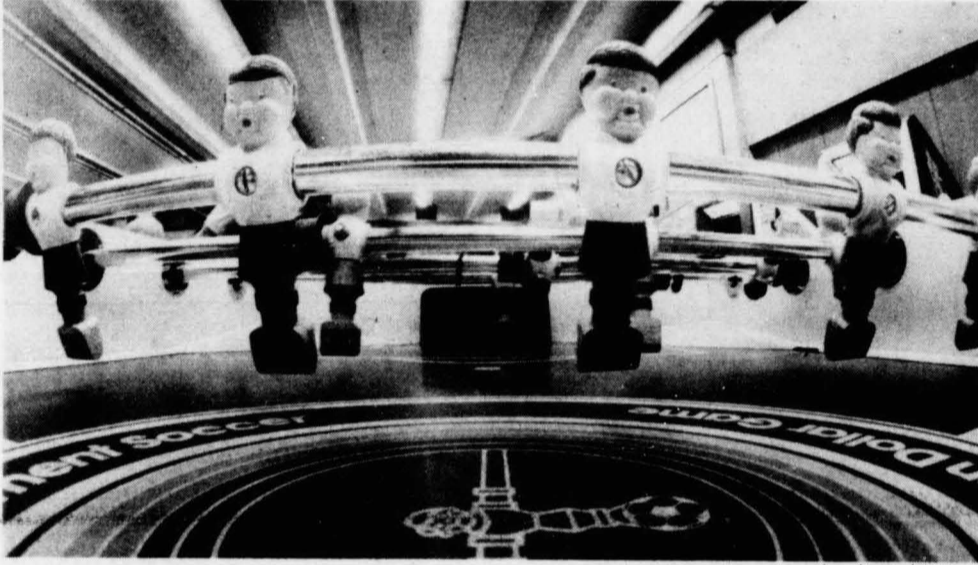

Contact that same day, Gregory said he had used money from the foosball machines to pay for hauling equipment from San Francisco.

However, when asked about using the funds to send bowling teams on trips, Gregory said, "If there was some way I could take money from one source and spend it on another, I wouldn't have worked my butt off for 70 hours on fund-raising tournaments."

Gregory said he had nothing to hide.

"I will match my ethics against anyone's," he said.

Gregory has been unavailable for comment since that time.

The above foosball machine is an unwitting benefactor for the SJSU bowling teams.

Measure D constitutionality questioned

The A.S. Judiciary Committee is looking into the constitutionality of Measure D, which, if passed in this week's A.S. election, would channel a portion of student fees to production of the Spartan Daily.

The committee has been reviewing the matter since Wednesday and will announce a hearing date today.

However, John Raess, author of the initiative and a Spartan Daily reporter, claims the judiciary should not rule on the issue because of what he calls a "complete conflict of interest."

Raess said members of the judiciary committee have "an intimate connection" with A.S. because they are selected by a committee composed of a majority of representatives and require approval by two-thirds of the A.S. Council.

The five-member judiciary selection committee includes the vice chairperson of the A.S. Council, the A.S. adviser, the A.S. personnel officer, and two past justices.

According to Chief Justice Dave Bonnar, the judiciary committee is "not accountable to student council, but to the students at SJSU."

"We're not lap dogs of student council, and not in any way obligated to do what they think," Bonnar said. "We'll stick up for what we think is right."

Judiciary consideration began following the request of Councilman Joe Trippi that the judiciary determine how the measure relates to article 3, section 4, paragraph 9 of the A.S. Constitution, which gives the council power "to exercise control over the finances of the Association."

Trippi who introduced Measure D to council originally, said he made the motion Wednesday because he didn't want the A.S. Council "to look ridiculous if Measure D passes and is later determined to be unconstitutional."

After voting 14-0 in favor of Trippi's motion, the council voted to oppose Measure D on the ballot. Michael Sonntag abstained.

The council voted April 12 to place the measure—which would allocate 50 cents of the $10-per-semester student association fee—on the ballot for this week's election, which begins tomorrow and ends Thursday.

Grad candidates aim for involvement

By Jean Nunes

Being available to all students, representing them as well as possible and getting students involved are the main goals of the six candidates running for five graduate positions on the A.S. Council.

The candidates and their party affiliations in alphabetical order are: Geraldine Banks, Student Independent Party; James Delgado, SIP; Rick Howe, SIP; Jeff Norment, SIP; Temmy Shmull, SIP; and Michael Sonntag, independent.

The SIP candidates support their party platform but also have goals of their own.

SIP candidate Jeff Norment is running on the "old-fashioned notion" that if elected he will be able to get more students involved in campus activities.

As campus environmental coordinator on the Campus Planning Commission, Norment would like to increase participation in the campus planning process through the commission.

"I would like to get everyone aware of their environment," Norment said.

Norment has been involved in campus activities since fall 1976. He is a former director of the Spartan Gardens program and a member of the Environmental Information Center and the disabled students group.

"I'm interested in cutting down the barriers for disabled students," Norment said.

"I hope to make myself visible enough so students will come to me when they have concerns," Norment said.

"I want to actively visit campus groups. I'm going to be representing everybody, not just graduate students."

Geraldine Banks' main concern is getting representation on the council for older students. Banks is running on the SIP ticket.

"As an older student I can see that the curriculum and scheduling is geared to the needs of the younger students straight out of high school," Banks said.

"If there were more older student participation," she said, "some of the situations would not become problems — such as day care."

"I hope that eventually older students can see their way to get involved," Banks said. "The only way to get to the power structure is through government."

Appointed in February to the A.S. Council, Banks said she is "enjoying every minute of it."

If elected, Banks is looking forward to serving on other committees involving services for older students.

Temmy Shmull

Rick Howe, a lighting design graduate student at New College, was appointed to council at the beginning of the year by A.S. President Steve Wright.

Howe is active in the Intercultural Steering, Mission and Goals, and Special Allocations committees, Communications Board, S.U. Board of Governors and was an organizer of the rape awareness program.

Howe said he is interested in increasing student input.

"This university is for the students and I'm trying to bring it back to them," Howe said.

James Delgado, an SIP candidate, believes it is important for Chicano groups on campus to be aware of the student council.

"I want to keep Chicano students aware of what's happening locally," Delgado said.

"I will try to represent everybody. It is necessary for the students to be in contact with the student government."

A member of MEChA and chairman of the Education Committee, Delgado also said, "(A.S. Councilman) Joe Trippi managed to get a lot of groups represented on the SIP ticket and we all agreed on the issues of the SIP platform."

SIP candidate Temmy Shmull, a student from Palao in the South Pacific, believes the council's responsibility is to identify and find solutions for problems on campus concerning students.

"Foreign students are not aware of what the university can provide," Shmull said. "I would like to make the foreign students aware of these services."

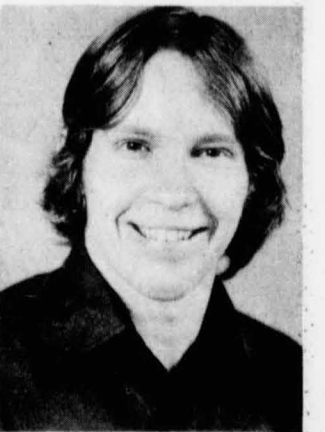

According to Schmull, 1,500 foreign students are enrolled at SJSU and they are paying an average of $2,000 per semester.

"Since we are paying that much money, we have to have some direct feedback as to how we can benefit from this university."

Funding for the Daily: Measure D

The case for

By John Raess

The passage of Measure D is necessary if the Spartan Daily is to continue serving students without fear of political manipulation or reduced capability.

The measure is written so that students' fees will not be increased as a result of its enactment.

John Raess is chairman of the Yes on D Committee.

What will be affected is the A.S. Council's ability to withhold production money from the Daily.

One year ago, the council cut all funding from the Daily. At the time, the paper was receiving about $40,000 a year in A.S. funds. Measure D would give the Daily about $27,000 yearly.

Whatever the reason for the council's action, it dramatizes one point: the Daily needs a steady and dependable source of funds, free of political control.

As a laboratory class, the Spartan Daily is eligible for funding by Instructionally Related Activity (IRA) funds. Unfortunately, there are flaws in financing the paper through IRA money.

Perhaps the greatest problem with IRA funding is its lack of continuity.

IRA funds are awarded annually, by the vote of a committee, on the basis of proposals received from hopeful recipients.

Receiving $30,000 in IRA funds one year, therefore, is no guarantee there will be any money available the next time around.

After last year's loss of funding through political decision, it's become obvious a dependable, steady source of income is a necessity if the Daily is to function smoothly.

This is precisely what Measure D is designed to ensure.

The Spartan Daily is a laboratory class required by the university for a degree in journalism. However, the university's class requirements could be fulfilled if the paper didn't print any copies for distribution.

Publication of the Daily, then, is basically a large-scale service provided for the students.

As such, it is perhaps the most tangible service students receive at SJSU.

Studies have shown a majority of SJSU students and faculty read the newspaper on a daily basis.

Students have been quick to show support for the initiative. More than 760 signatures were collected within 48 hours to place Measure D on the ballot.

What Measure D requests is that students pay a small price for the production of a campus newspaper.

As the measure states, the funds provided by Measure D will not pay for such things as salaries, only for production of the paper.

That price, less than a penny per copy, would not be reflected in higher student fees.

The Daily will not be able to continue forever merely on its own advertising revenue. Supplementary income will probably be a necessity for the Daily within a year if it is to be assured of publishing five days a week.

Funding by the student council or from IRA is a possibility, but not an appealing one, for the newspaper.

Whoever controls the funding for a newspaper also has the opportunity to control what the paper reports. It is for this reason that Measure D was written to eliminate control by the A.S. Council of funds for the Daily.

By the same reasoning, an unalterable method of income would mean not only the end of the Daily's financial woes, but the freedom to print critical articles without fear of reprisal.

Having the students pay is, after all, only fair. For no other service on campus would they get more for their money.

The case against

By Robert Crawford-Drobot

There are a number of good reasons we should vote no on Measure D. They are as follows:

1) You are already being taxed by the state of California to provide for the educational needs of San Jose State University. However, you will be charged a NEW FEE in the fall of 1978 for "instructionally related" endeavors provided by the university. The Spartan Daily is considered an "instructionally related" activity. WHY GIVE MORE!?!?

Robert Crawford-Drobot is chairman of the No on D Committee.

Your new fee may be as high as $10 per academic year! Isn't it time we put a stop to these give-away proposals. The Associated Students went to court four years ago to stop the university from forcing you to pay for grants-in-aid for services the university should be providing. The Spartan Daily is only one of many activities on our campus that deserve university support.

2) Your Associated Students fee is used to benefit ALL students at SJSU. Measure D would give preference to the journalism discipline.

This is not only inappropriate and unfair, but it challenges the equal treatment of all students attending the university.

3) The Spartan Daily is only one tool of the journalism discipline instructional process, and is therefore equal to instructional tools utilized by the physical education, chemistry, aeronautics, drama and all other disciplines.

Are you prepared to directly finance these disciplines as well? Measure D is, for this reason, a very dangerous suggestion.

4) Measure D does not detail who, what, when, where and how your money is to be spent. It's a blank check to no person in particular.

Reference is made to an entity called "Spartan Daily" as recipient of as much as $26,500, but Measure D doesn't say if the instructors, students, administration or your next-door neighbor, why may be a Daily reporter, will be entrusted with our money.

Further, no detail is given to "...production..." costs. Typically such costs not only include printing/manufacturing, but include salaries as well.

Measure D states the monies must be turned over to an unspecified person/persons without "...amendment..." or stipulation. Measure D is in effect an unbound book - just too many loose ends.

This proposal can be most appropriately paralleled to a recent film titled "The Sting." We can't afford to bite.

The proponents of Measure D suggest they fear manipulation of the Spartan Daily and for this reason have put forward this proposal, but who is really being manipulated? Vote "NO" on Measure D.

Measure C: human rights

Editor's Note: This statement advocating the passage of Measure C in the A.S. election was the only statement submitted for the ballot. No statement opposing the initiative was received.

By Paul Boneberg

Most legislative bodies which attempt to be representative of their constituencies include human rights declarations in their constitutions.

Paul Boneberg is a candidate for A.S. Council

It is, in my opinion, most unfortunate that the Associated Students of SJSU does not guarantee basic rights to all its members within its constitution. This situation should be immediately corrected by the passage of the proposed human rights initiative.

A vote for inserting the human rights clause into the SJSU constitution is a vote for equal rights for all the students on this campus.

It is a vote to end the second-class citizenship which all the listed groups alluded to in the initiative have suffered in the recent past and are still suffering.

It is a vote for an inclusive human rights resolution which would surpass in completeness any existing protective legislation on a local, state or national level.

The struggle for human integrity has been long, but it is by no means completed.

The Bakke decision and the Briggs Initiative epitomize current efforts to rescind human rights legislation in a way which would directly affect students at SJSU.

In the fact of such efforts, and considering the past and possible future attempts to oppress segments of the population, it is essential that we formalize our belief that human rights are absolute by amending our constitution to include the proposed initiative.

Apathy

Editor:

When I was an undergraduate at Penn State in the mid-1960's, a student named Leonard Berkowitz ran for president of the student government on an Apathy ticket.

Berkowitz reasoned that disinterest in student government ought to be acknowledged and legitimized.

He therefore promised that, if elected, he would disband the governing council simply by refusing to call a meeting.

In a hotly contested election, Berkowitz lost by a handful of votes. Nevertheless, he declared a moral victory, since the voter turnout was the lowest on record - about 18 percent.

Now I read in the Spartan Daily that only seven percent of SJSU students voted in last year's A.S. elections. Maybe Berkowitz had an idea whose time has come.

Defeat D

Editor:

The proposal to finance the Spartan Daily with student funds must be defeated. In order to understand why, however, it is necessary to review a bit of recent history.

In December 1977, the SJSU administration ended a 43-year tradition of appointing a student-selected editor to the Spartan Daily. At that time, the Department of Journalism and Advertising bypassed the winner (by an ample majority) of a preferential vote held by the Spartan Daily staff that had in the past determined who would become editor. Though admitting the candidate was well qualified for the position, the department appointed its own (and current) editor, though the reasons for doing this have never been made clear, other than to say the appointment was made on the recommendation of a faculty-dominated selection board. This action caused considerable protest from the students whose vote had been ignored, and this protest was stifled, only after the department threatened to cease future publications of the Spartan Daily.

The ultimate reason given for this despicable action was that the Spartan Daily is a laboratory paper and part of a class, that the university is the publisher and thus retains the right to appoint an editor of their choice. Now that same newspaper seeks student funding, though student control is a thing of the past.

If the university administration wants a laboratory paper, let the university administration fund it. If the university administration desires to control editor selection (and conceivably editorial content and policy), then let the university administration pay for "their" newspaper themselves.

To expect the Associated Students to finance a publication that is under the ultimate control of the administration is a sham that must not be tolerated. If the Department of Journalism and Advertising wants to have the final say over a "laboratory" newspaper, that's fine; they have a legal right to do so. But the administration hope that the students can be duped into paying for "their" newspaper as well is one that cannot be accommodated.

In brief, the issue is: no student control, no student funds. I urge my fellow students to reject this measure. If we must spend student funds, let's at least spend them wisely.

A.S. candidates express views, discuss goals

By Scott Knies
Fifteen candidates are vying for 10 upper-division A.S. Council seats in this year's election. Ten candidates from the Student Independent Party, four candidates from the Other 90 Percent party and one independent candidate are entered in the race.
The lone independent, Kiran Majithia, 22, an electrical engineering senior, believes he could better express himself as an independent.
"The council now spends a lot of time on budget and finance," Majithia said. "I think academic problems are more important."
Majithia said he would try to get library hours extended, especially on weekends, and would oppose any increase in general education requirements.

The Other 90 Percent candidates are campaigning on a platform of reform.
Paul Boneberg, 25, New College junior, said the Other 90 Percent will push for any reform that "would reinvolve the bulk of the student body."
Boneberg was distressed that his challenge for a debate with SIP candidates "got bogged down and cancelled."
"The whole election process is geared toward keeping people apathetic," he said.

Boneberg said he would speak for gay rights if elected.
Susan Howard, 27, a political science sophomore, said her focus with the Other 90 Percent was toward women.
"I would insure that women on campus are informed of grants, health care, job opportunities and job training - any concern for women that is available to them as a resource," Howard said.
Howard suggested utilizing classrooms more for informing students.
Mark Hogle, 20, administration of justice sophomore, said the objective of the Other 90 Percent is to get students involved.

"I would propose an initiative that the minutes and attendance of council meetings be published in the Spartan Daily," Hogle said.

Hogle said council members need to be more open and representative.

The fourth Other 90 Percent candidate, Mary Weber, was not available for comment.

Answer anticipated soon in affirmative action case

By Angela Blanchette
After a four-month delay, legal questions evolving from SJSU English Professor Sybil Weir's grievance case have been answered by the general counsel of the California State University and Colleges System.

Deliberations in the case are expected to end soon.
Weir filed a grievance last September claiming the university administration violated affirmative action procedures by failing to select her as New College provost.

Sybil Weir

Both sides in the dispute submitted legal questions to the general counsel in December and received a response last week.
"I am quite disturbed about the delay," Weir said. "Now it will be difficult for the (grievance) committee to remember specifics in the case."
According to Weir, representatives of the federal Health, Education and Welfare Department's Office of Civil Rights is investigating the case because of the excessive length of litigation.
The information asked from the counsel primarily focused on legal questions regarding burden of proof and due process laws, according to Weir's attorney, Mary Katherine Kelley.
Final written arguments are being prepared by both sides for presentation to the grievance committee, according to Vergil Hughes, elementary education professor and grievance committee chairman.
Hughes said he believes the committee will "have enough time" to complete its deliberations before the end of the semester.
The committee will submit its recommendations to SJSU President John Buznel for final approval after reaching a decision.
Weir was one of three candidates recommended for the position of New College provost last year. Buznel selected Larry Chenoweth for the post.
Weir said she did not feel more qualified for the position than Chenoweth, but equally qualified.
Dean of Faculty Robert Sasseen, who represented the university during the hearings, has called Weir's charges "frivolous" and "phony."

Price hike, unit requirement greet fall dormitory residents

By Margo L. Kearns
A raise in dorm rates and restrictions for incoming dorm students are two new policies being adopted for the fall semester, according to Housing Director Cordell Koland.
Dorm residents can expect a rent raise of about 17 percent for the 15-meal plan fee and about three to four percent for the 19-meal plan fee.

The raise in the dorm fee is attributed by the housing office to the cost of living.
"Everything is going up and we are right in there," Koland said.
The dorm system is paid for through room-and-board rents.
The exact amount of the dorm fee will be "known in a couple of weeks," Koland said.

The second new policy will make obtaining a dorm room harder for incoming students.
Students applying for dorm rooms for the first time must be accepted at SJSU and registered for a minimum of 12 units.
The new policy has not been fully worked out, according to the housing office.
"We are aiming to utilize information from the admissions office prior to accepting someone into the dorms," Koland said.
The current policy allows students to register and pay for a dorm room before being accepted to the university.
The new policy is expected to enable the housing of more students during the beginning of the semester by reducing the number of students who pay dorm fees and then decide not to use the residence or attend SJSU.

History scholars receive awards at luncheon today

The History Department will award seven scholarships and fellowships to SJSU history majors at the annual honors award luncheon at noon today in the S.U. Almaden Room.
Lizabeth Reilly will receive the $500 Ralph H. Lutz Memorial Fellowship, awarded to graduate students majoring in 20th century European history.
Paul Sampson will receive the $300 Donald L. Burdick Memorial Scholarship for his outstanding work as a graduating senior.
June Ahern will be awarded the $250 Barbara Buss Casaroli Memorial Scholarship for outstanding work in Asian affairs.
Glenna Ferrier will be granted the $150 Mary D. Condon Memorial Scholarship. This is awarded to an outstanding upper division or graduate student in British or Irish studies.
Jeff Smart will receive the $150 Leonard J. Hall Memorial Fellowship for his work in modern European history.
Mimi Negendank has earned the $150 James H. High Memorial Fellowship for work in the field of American history.

Duane Blocker will receive the $250 Dudley T. Moorhead Memorial Fellowship for demonstrating academic excellence and an interest in professional advancement.
Allen Wachold and Jane Bullis are winners of the Phi Alpha Theta and History Associates 1978 annual history paper contest.
Wachold will receive a $25 prize and Bullis $10. Both papers will be published in the history department publication "Passports."
Professor Joseph J. Lee from the University of Cork, Ireland, will be guest speaker at the luncheon.
Enforcement of the two policies will begin this fall.

Koland estimated 50 students or more register and then do not show up to use dorm rooms. The number is lower during the spring semester.
The new policy would also cut down on refunds of students who are not accepted and also those students who decide to live in other housing or attend a different college.
The 12-unit limitation is to "give priority to students who are regularly enrolled" and not to those students who are "coasting with three units," Koland said.
It will not include the physically disabled or other exceptional cases, according to Koland.

Cashier's office has new hours

Beginning May 1, the Cashier's Office will open one hour later. The new hours will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
The office is located in the Administration Building, Room 103 on the corner of Seventh and San Fernando streets.

Spartan catcher Rick Lane steals second base Friday night, sliding in ahead of the tag by St. Mary's shortstop Gregg Fisher. The Spartans won, 12-2.

Hitters take Gaels - first place

By Anne Brennan
It seemed as if the Spartan baseball team could do no wrong.

Showing its Dr. Jekyll side, the Spartans took over first place in the Northern California Baseball Assn. by sweeping a three-game league series against St. Mary's, 12-2, 7-5 and 5-1 last weekend.

In the first game of Saturday's doubleheader, Spartan hurler Russ Hayslip got off to a shaky start, allowing four runs to score, including a home, in the first inning.

Hayslip's first throw was a strike and he literally went down hill from there.

"I was a little psyched out because the mound was so steep," Hayslip said. "It was so steep I would drop down and lose control of my pitches."

The mound was so steep a class in beginning mountain climbing should have been a prerequisite for all pitchers.

Hayslip adjusted quickly and hung tough, closing the door on the Gaels. He held them to one run on three hits the rest of the way. The Gaels' last run came on a solo round tripper by third baseman Von Hayes.

With a 7-0 record, Hayslip has the best mark on the Spartan pitching squad.

The Gaels were at their peaks of frustration when Spartan designated hitter

Al Sever nubbed a slow roller up the third base line with the bases loaded. Hayes dropped the ball and after finding the handle overthrew home plate allowing Tony Biondi and shortstop Randy Johnson to score.

By that time Sever was halfway to second and Gael catcher Eddie Biggs threw to second, giving Spartan Rick Lane the go ahead to come home. Hayes, hoping to keep Lane from scoring, immediately fired the ball back toward home plate. It hit the backstop on two bounces. The Spartans took the lead, 6-5.

SJSU right fielder Rod Kemp hit a home run in the fourth inning to close the gap to 4-3. Kemp, who went from a .343 batting average in early April to .298 last week, picked a perfect time to come out of an apparent hitting slump, going 4-for-6 in Friday's game.

First baseman Steve Picone sprained his right ankle while stepping on third base after getting extra bases on a Gael error. Picone stepped on the sack wrong and turned his ankle.

Picone's injury exhausted SJSU's supply of first basemen, as regular first baseman Ron Pimentel broke his foot in practice two weeks ago.

Kemp, who was a shortstop in high school, took first base and Cary Riberdy filled in at outfield for Kemp.

In Saturday's second game Sever took the first bag. Sever hadn't played first base since he went to Bellarmine Preparatory School.

The Spartans were the first to score as Biondi came in on a Johnson line drive up the right center field power alley.

The Gaels fought back, scoring one run in the bottom of the first, but that was all Spartan hurler Dave Nobles (8-2) would allow, holding them to five hits.

The Spartans jumped off to a four-run lead in the first inning of Friday's game and never looked back.

SJSU pitcher Randy Raphael hurled a flawless game allowing only three hits and whiffing nine.

"I thought Randy Raphael threw well enough to pitch a shutout," Menges said.

The Spartans moved into first place over University of Nevada at Reno after the Wolf Pack dropped two of a three game series to University of the Pacific.

Nobles and Lane, Watkins, Mazmanian (7) and Colburn.

Booters dominate, 8-0; get Tigers by tail

The Tigers were easy prey for the SJSU soccer team as the Spartans dominated University of the Pacific 8-0 Saturday in Spartan Stadium.

Joe Silveira got the hat trick, scoring three of the Spartan's eight goals.

Defensesmen Derek Evans and Keith Greene did an excellent job in front of the penalty area holding the Tigers to one shot on goal.

"I think these two guys (Evans and Greene) are what held up the defense," SJSU soccer coach Julie Menendez said.

Freshman midfielder Nick Kupcov scored two goals for SJSU while Lou Kovacs, also a freshman, scored one.

John Bradley and Tom Ryan each scored a goal also.

The absence of Olympic squad members Easy Perez and Steve Ryan made no difference to the Spartans. Perez had to go out of town and Steve Ryan, who plays for a semi-professional team in the off-season, was resting a pulled groin muscle for a Sunday cup game.

"Our guys played real well," said Menges. "Their team (UOP) isn't as strong as most of the teams we play, though."

"This game is not indicative of the types of games we'll have to play," Menges said in regards to the up-coming fall schedule which he thinks is the toughest ever.

The Spartans will be back in action on Wednesday as they face University of Santa Clara on the practice field in front of Spartan Stadium. The last time the two teams met it was short of a physical war.

Spikers top Oregon for 'biggest' victory

By Sharon Kuthe
SJSU grabbed its biggest triumph of the track and field season Saturday in Eugene, thrashing the University of Oregon Ducks, 90-64, in a downpour.

The spikers seem to be making it a habit of outclassing opponents when the conditions are the worst. Last week they defeated a tough UC-Irvine team through the rain and this week pulled off their biggest win of the year, according to Coach Ernie Bullard.

"This was by far the best team effort by a San Jose State team since I've been coaching here. It caps off our dual meet season in grand style," Bullard said.

"The team effort stood out over any individual performance because each performance added to our team victory."

Before a crowd of 2,675, the Spartans crushed the Ducks' team. However, the crowd cheered the performances of the Spartans as well as their own. "They are known for their appreciation of outstanding efforts by track athletes."

In the distance events, the Spartans were expected to be shut out. However the impressive efforts by Jon Albrecht and Lupe Chavez in the 800 meter run seemed to turn the meet around.

Oregon boasts one of the best distance corps for a dual meet team. The performances of Albrecht and Chavez were totally unexpected by both teams.

On the back stretch, Albrecht took the lead from Oregon's Rudy Chapa and Chavez followed his teammate. Chapa took the lead back and won, Albrecht second and Chavez third.

Distance coach Don Riggs was extremely pleased with their performances because they were not expected to score any points because of the strength of the Ducks' distance corps.

"This win meant a lot to me because I coached here (Oregon). I asked for 100 percent from everybody and I got it. This is the finest group of young men that I've ever had the pleasure to coach," Riggs said.

"We competed against a very fine Oregon team in traditional weather and did the job that we needed to do."

The sprinting events, going into the meet, were expected to be pivotal. After the Spartans won the 400 meter relay, it was clear that Oregon was going to have a tough time.

Two of their top sprinters, Greg Walton and Donald Coleman, were coming off of injuries and were not quite ready for the meet.

Walton, Oregon's top quarter miler, did not compete because of a hamstring injury. Coleman did not run after competing in the sprint relay because he re-injured his hamstring.

In the 100 meter dash the Spartans were not able to defeat the Ducks' sprinter Andrew Banks, but were able to take second, third and fourth.

SJSU's Ron Whitaker grabbed second in 10.7, with teammates Mike Kirtman placing third and Marcus Washington fourth. Spartan Dedy Cooper won the 200 meter dash in 21.1 with Whitaker taking second, beating Banks at the tape.

"This was such a great team effort. We reached down when it counted, as in the case of 'Whit', even in the adverse conditions," sprint and hurdle coach Larry Livers said.

"Winning the sprint relay was the key for us because it got us off on the right foot."

In the high hurdles, Cooper took first place as expected. Kirtman grabbed second and Spartan Don Finley finished in third.

Finley was assigned to run the hurdles because the Ducks are weak in that event. Finley has never run the highs at the college level and has not run the high hurdles at all since high school. His performance was another example of the all-around effort put in by the Spartans.

The jumping events were dominated by the SJSU squad, as they took first and second places in the long, high and triple jumps. The Spartans swept the high jump with Keith Nelson, Ron Livers and Sly Pritchett taking all three spots. Livers won the triple jump after taking just one leap of 50 feet 8 1/2. Livers was bothered by an ankle injury suffered two weeks ago.

As well as having strength in the distances, Oregon is strong in the weight events. The Ducks won the discus, shot put and the hammer throw.

Frank DeJak won the javelin with a throw of 245 feet 8. DeJak, who had thrown in just two meets this year, showed the same style for the Spartans as he did last year when he set a PCAA record in the javelin.

Food is focus of earth days program today

Whales, food, bicycles and solar energy make up part of the smorgasbord of environmental issues to be presented during "A Dozen Days For Earth."

Today is Food Day, the third day of the program. Films, panel discussions, speakers and demonstrations will be featured all day in the Student Union.

The SJSU Environmental Information Center and A.S., sponsors of the program, began the activities with celebrations of Earth Day and Wilderness Day Saturday and Sunday.

The program will continue through May 3, Sun Day. Fifty countries will celebrate Sun Day as a day to focus on use of the sun as an energy source.

Remaining topics dedicated to further the awareness of the campus and community include: people, transportation, pollution, conservation, wildlife, health and recreation, jobs and economics, land and solar energy.

"There is something for everyone," according to Frank Schiavo, SJSU lecturer and advisor to the Environmental Information Center.

Environmental Studies sophomore Claire Heillbrun, 22, said there will be more than 100 free activities including speakers, exhibits, panel discussions, local nature trips and 25 films.

"We want to revive Earth Day," Heillbrun said. Heillbrun described the first Earth Day in 1970 as a "day to think about the earth, to celebrate the globe and ask, are we treating the earth in a manner that ensures our survival?"

Schiavo said, "Earth Day 1970 was a marginal success. It was a consciousness-raising day, but one day is not enough."

"Through the Dozen Days For Earth we hope to gather attention again and look at where we are going. Schiavo said Earth Day in the past has examined "the more subtle threats of environmental problems."

"There has always been conservationists and preservationists but environmentalists began to question the effect of pollution and other problems on people's lives and futures. This was a new focus in 1970," Schiavo said.

The focus continues in 1978 with an emphasis on solutions and alternatives he said.

"I am optimistic," Schiavo said. "Solar energy is booming, chemical-free food is available and large cities are investigating alternative methods of transportation."

Progress has been made but the air in San Jose is not fit for human consumption at least 65 days per year, according to Schiavo.

"The word must still be spread."

Programs for "A Dozen Days For Earth" are available at the S.U. and the Environmental Information Center in Building U, located at Fifth and San Carlos streets. For more information call 277-2852.

Anthropologist talks on chimps

Jane Goodall, renowned for her pioneering studies of wild chimpanzees, will speak on "The Shadow of Man" in Morris Dailey Auditorium Wednesday.

Goodall is director of the Gombe Stream Research Centre in Tanzania.

She conducted her ecological and behavioral study of chimpanzees on the large African game reserve at Gombe Stream.

Her lecture is illustrated with color slides and film based on her in-depth studies of the chimpanzees in their natural habitat.

Goodall is speaking at 8 p.m. Tickets are $2 for students, $3 general and at the door. Tickets are available at the Associated Student's Business Office, San Jose Box Office and all BASS outlets.

Goodall's lecture tour has been arranged through the L.S.B. Leakey Foundation, which also funds a portion of her research. The program is sponsored on campus by the A.S. Program Board.

Graduating seniors who want to enroll in graduate, credential or second baccalaureate programs for fall must file a new admission application with the Office of Admissions, according to Roy J. Delpier, associate director of admissions.

Graduate students who will earn degrees this spring or summer and plan to attend this fall must also file a new form, Delpier said.

Application forms and additional information can be obtained from the Office of Admissions, Fourth and San Fernando streets, or call 277-3266.

Judiciary member not told of possible conflict

A.S. Judiciary Committee member David Grey has charged he was not informed by A.S. Attorney General Ron Stevenson that the constitutionality of Measure D would be discussed at a special meeting of the committee.

Grey, a journalism professor, said Stevenson neglected to mention that the measure, designed to fund production of the Spartan Daily, would be discussed at the meeting originally called to determine the incumbency status of Academic Senate candidate Barbara Profit.

But both Stevenson and David Bonnar, chief justice of the committee, said they told Grey another issue in addition to Profit's A.S. ballot status would be discussed.

Measure D was not specified to Grey as the additional topic, they said.

"Monday, Ron Stevenson mentioned there might be something else coming up," Bonnar said, "I don't think Dave caught it."

Bonnar then said Stevenson mentioned the chance of an upcoming issue "as kind of an aside" to Bonnar.

"If Stevenson knew this was in the works Monday, he did not tell us about it," Grey said.

Grey was unable to attend the special Wednesday meeting.

A.S. Councilman Joe Trippi said he had mentioned to Stevenson Monday that Measure D might be sent by the council for a decision on its constitutionality.

Grey said he would have excused himself from the proceedings if the Spartan Daily initiative was to be decided.

As a journalism instructor, Grey said, he acknowledged a conflict of interest on issues involving the Daily.

Nonetheless, Grey said, "If he (Stevenson) knew something else was coming up, I think he was ethically bound to alert us."

The Monday meeting was put off until Wednesday because the committee did not have a quorum.

According to Grey, Stevenson said the special meeting had to be held Wednesday because it involved an election matter and ballots were to be sent to the printer.

The council session that sent Measure D to the committee for a review of its constitutionality was held the Wednesday afternoon immediately prior to the scheduled judiciary committee meeting.

Daily and A.S. adviser Barozzi clash on 'D'

The A.S. Council placed Measure D on the ballot after an initiative movement to present the measure to the electorate was undertaken by Raess.

"There is no question as to the constitutionality of Measure D," Raess said.

'Louie Barozzi (A.S. adviser and judiciary member) assured me the measure was constitutional when I wrote it," Raess said.

"I assumed he knew what he was saying, since he's been A.S. adviser for nine years."

Raess was referring to a clause stating that funds derived from the A.S. fee "be passed directly by the A.S. Council, without amendment," to the Spartan Daily.

According to Barozzi, "I gave him (Raess) the best advice I could give him with what I knew at the time.

"Even if I were to have said that it (Measure D) was constitutional, that doesn't mean anything - I may have opinions, but I am not the authority," Barozzi said.

"We have a judiciary to determine matters of constitutionality," he said.

15 students vie for 10 upper division seats

Pam Wagner, 21, a political science junior, is a two-year A.S. Council incumbent for SIP and she wants to serve another year in a leadership role.

"I found out that your first year is ineffective because you are so overwhelmed," Wagner said.

"I knew what I could and couldn't do from the start," Wagner said about her current year on council. "I was more assertive."

If elected for a third year, Wagner said she would like to assume a leadership role by getting involved in "political issues like affirmative action, housing and parking."

Ed Vasquez, 20, a radio-television junior, is another SIP incumbent.

Vasquez said he would push for better health and co-recreational facilities and services. He said a sports/concert arena that seats about 5,000 was lacking at SJSU.

Mohinder S. Mann, 21, political science senior, is an SIP incumbent also, appointed by A.S. President Steve Wright at the beginning of the semester.

"I am running with SIP because they are a group of people that can work together and accomplish something," Mann said.

Mann is a member of the A.S. Budget and Intercultural Steering committees, president of the Indian Student Association and secretary for IUE, local 1507.

Mann said if he was elected he would work strongly to implement the SIP platform.

Marty Schram, 26, meteorology junior, is a member of Theta Chi fraternity and captain of the SJSU varsity bowling team.

"I'd work for the Greek system," Schram said.

He is against any increase in general education requirements because he said "we have too much general ed already."

Lisa Goyeau, 19, an English sophomore, said students need to be informed of all student resources available.

"Students need to be aware of all the services available to them on campus - like the student grievance committee," Goyeau said.

Michael Zwick, 21, microbiology junior, is the current president of Theta Chi fraternity. Zwick said diplomacy was the main factor in opening communication between students and student government.

Marlene Ogawa, 21, advertising junior, has been a dorm student for three years. Ogawa said she would voice dorm students' opinions on council because she believes they are a major part of the campus community.

Chris Ota, 22, a business administration senior, is an A.S. academic senator and a member of the Student Grievance Committee.

"No one council member can make a change," Ota said. "With my experience in working with the administration, faculty and students it gives me knowledge to achieve a unified effort to solve problems."

Ota believes the instructionally related activity fee is needed, especially now with the possibility of Jarvis-Gahn passing," he said.

Celio Lucero, 31, a business administration junior, was appointed to the council two months ago by Wright.

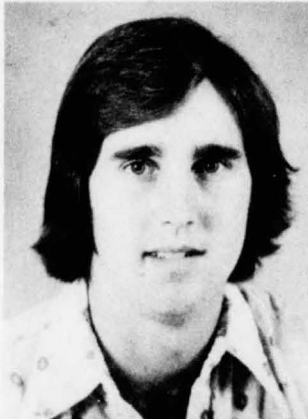

"I would increase the accountability of council to the individual student organizations," Lucero said.

Lucero said he would increase accountability by making himself available to the organizations for input.

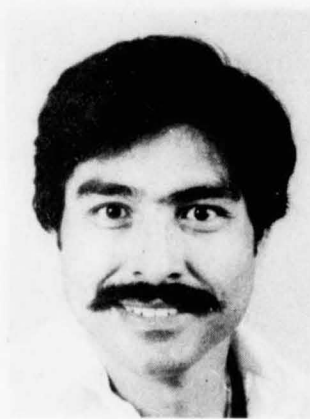

Kevin Johnson, the tenth SIP candidate, was not available for comment.

Student council candidates present views, platforms

Shmull's past experience has been as a member of the student council and president of the foreign student association at Lassen Junior College.

Michael Sonntag is running as an independent incumbent. He was appointed to the council March 29.

"I refuse to commit myself to a platform," Sonntag said. Their (SIP and the Other 90 Percent parties) ideals are impractical and do not represent the 'real world.'

"I don't represent a platform," Sonntag said. "I don't have any affiliation except myself. It allows me to do what I want."

"I can give an objective and realistic representation of the campus," Sonntag said. "I will be open to any thoughts from my constituents." Formerly a chief justice of Moulder Hall, Sonntag was vocal on the several propositions on the ballot which are supported by the SIP party.

Sonntag opposes Measures A and B. Measure A is a proposal to reduce the number of council seats from 20 to 14.

Measure B would have all members elected at large, eliminating the graduate, upper and lower divisions on council.

"Twenty seats are barely sufficient to represent 27,000 people," Sonntag said regarding Measure A. "It would worsen any representation problems we already have."

Regarding Measure B, Sonntag said, "I can't see 20 sophomores on the council representing seniors and graduate students."

Measure C would guarantee equal human rights to all students.

"I'm in favor of it to make things more clear and broaden rights in general for all persons," Sonntag said.

Measure D proposes that 50 cents of the $10 A.S. fee each semester go toward funding the Spartan Daily.

"I totally oppose it," Sonntag said. "The Spartan Daily is trying to circumvent the A.S. Council's authority in their use of funds."

"Also, the Spartan Daily is trying to guarantee their existence by extracting nearly $27,000 a year," he said.

Rick Howe, an SIP candidate, was unavailable for comment.

Elections will be held April 25 through 27.
