S.U. games manager cleared, did not borrow funds for self management practices in Student Union games area has cleared Terry Gregory, games area manager, of allegations that he used money collected from foosball machines for his own personal use.

The audit, which was completed in early July by the auditing firm Zeiss, Scruggs and Thomas, did indicate, however, that money taken from the the foosball machines was "misused" by Gregory, a charge the games area manager admits to.

Gregory was accused last semester of borrowing money from the foosball machines, which he then used to pay for machine repairs and machine transportation as well as for the women's bowling team trips, of which he was manager.

The normal procedure for such expenses is to fill out a requisition form, which is sent to the A.S. business office or the San Jose State University Foundation for approval.

Gregory, attempting to avoid red tape in filling out the forms, had been borrowing the money from the football machines, entering I.O.U.'s for the amount into the books and asking for reimbursement after spending the money.

Student Union director, Ronald C. Barrett, Gregory's immediate superior, said he believes Gregory was just trying to save time by not going through normal channels for the money, calling it "an example of a person doing the most expedient

Barrett insisted that the foosball money shouldn't have been used in that way." He pointed out that the audit had shown no evidence of any money not being accounted for, but admitted that "funds have been

60 percent eligible for funds

Possible subsidies for students

Financial aid legislation benefitting up to 60 percent of SJSU students is being debated in Washington D.C., but even if it passes, the campus may have to give back money it is entitled to, said Student Financial Director Don Ryan yesterday.

Companion bills in the House and Senate would extend aid money available to families in the $15-25,000 income range, Ryan said.

Tax credits for middle-income families with students in secondary or post secondary education are also being debated, Ryan said.

Some form of financial assistance to middle income students is "a good possibility" by 1982, he predicted.

But there is trouble in this financial aid paradise.

Currently, the financial aid department provides money to 25 percent of SJSU students, and is two to three weeks behind in processing applications, Ryan said.

Under the proposed legislation, aid could be extended for up to 60 percent of SJSU students, a load which would be "impossible" for his present staff to handle, Ryan said

With only two weeks left in the current legislative session, the possibility of the bills eventually finding their way to President Carter's desk is not good, the Washington, D.C. lobbyist for the National Student Financial Aid this week.

But enough money to fund current plans for the student aid project have already been set aside by the House Appropriations Committee, Ryan said, and the possibility of full House and Senate approval of the action is "promising" if the current legislation files.

"There is a lot of positive feeling in Washington about extending money to middle-income category and I think some sort of compromise is possible," Ryan said.

The House version of the assistance bill, the Middle-Income Student Assistance Act, is currently bottled up in the Rules Committee, where the chairman who favors a tax credit measure, has kept the measure from being voted out.

Both assistance bills would add $1.2 billion to current federally funded student assistant programs,

The bulk of that, almost $1 billion, would be placed in Basic Education Opportunity Grant program (BEOG) with remaining funds distributed between Colleg Work-Study, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, and the Guaranteed Student Loan programs.

The tax credit bills, already passed by both bodies and heading into a joint conference committee, would provide tax credits for tuition

The House tax bill would provide refunds up to $250 in tax credits by 1980, with the Senate bill offering a maximum $500 refundable credit (limited to half of tuition and fees) by the same period.

Both bills would offer lower tax credits immediately and would be available to elementary, secondary, vocational and undergraduate SISU President Gail Fullerton has contacted local legislative representatives, urging them to vote for the student aid program over the tax credit proposal, she said last week.

'Since we (SJSU) don't have tuition here, students would only get credit for the $102 fee," she said.

More financial aid to students would be available under the middle-income assistance bill, she said. But with more money coming into SJSU's financial aid program, problems of administration arise, Ryan said. This year's aid offerings of $8-9 million at SJSU might increase to $14 million under the student

"It blows my mind when I think what might happen," the SJSU graduate said.
"The bureaucracy and red tape for these (financial aid programs) is extensive. "if our applications sizeably increased it would be impossible for us to handle it," he said. Nineteen support and semi-professional people make up his staff, Ryan said. He estimated that if roughly 50 percent of the campus became eligible for financial assistance, as much as 75 percent of the campus might apply, creating a further backlog.

Prop. 6 foes plan campaign with education

By Katherine Hamilton

A grass roots movement against Proposition 6, the Briggs

Initiative, is beginning at SJSU.

Largely sponsored by the
SJSU Women's Center and supported by the Gay Students Union, the group will try to "go out into the community and hit the precincts and districts with flyers" to educate voters about

According to Jennifer Lendl-Gargini of the Women's Center, the group is basically fighting what she terms an "un-constitutional" and "Mcconstitutional" and Carthy-ish" proposition.

"McCarthy was the first person to employ this kind of ambiguous attack on a group of people," she said. "There's not en a clear definition of what he's (Briggs) doing.'

According to the summary of the initiative as prepared by the Attorney General of California, the grade level that is to be affected by Proposition 6 is not stated. Proposition 6 supporters interpret this to mean grade and high school children; op-ponents of the legislation interpret it to mean all teachers, administrators, counselors, and aides.

This ambiguity of purpose has prompted Lendl-Gargini and others to action.

Jana Cunningham, president of the San Jose-South Bay Chapter of National Organization of Women (NOW) backs this move.

"I can see a clear parallel with this and Joe McCarthy," Cunningham said. "It has little to do with school work."

"Besides, what's to keep leone who doesn't like a teacher from saing, 'Hey, this guy's gay.'

David Newman, director of counseling services, said Pro-position 6 would be "a mis-chievious thing" used to "harrass anyone (who is) outside norms of the community."

But, according to a spokeserson for Sen. Briggs', R-Fullerton, this is ludicrous.

This is a fair, constitutional and compassionate approach to the issue," the spokesperson said. "It's based on local values. Do people want these kind of people teaching their children?"

It all stems from the preservation of the family unit, according to the initiative.

'As a result of continued close and prolonged contact with schoolchildren, a teacher, teacher's aide, school ad-ministrator or counselor becomes a role model whose words, behavior and actions are likely to be emulated by students..." the initiative states.

However, according to Kent Olson, spokesperson for the Metropolitan Community Church, a gay church, even this is debatable.

"Statistics show that the formative years, the years when a person's sexual preference is fixed, is between three and five, Olsen said. "So the initiative is based on fallacious cir-cumstances to begin with."

Assemblyman Vasconcellos agrees, "There is just no evidence of any situation that indicates any need for it."

'It's a serious violation of peoples' rights to choose their own lifestyle in our society," Vasconcellos said. "It threatens everyone."

According to Matthew According to Matthew Savoca, spokesperson for the SJSU Gay Students Union, Proposition 6 "violates 'due process' in that teachers making a statement, public or private, supporting gays is subject to suspension for 30-60 days."

What it doesn't state explicity, according to Gordon Chapman, counselor at Santa Teresa High School in San Jose and as SJSU alumnus, is what constitutes a "public homosexual activity.

"Public activity...that's really a vague word," Chapman said. "I don'; t think homosexuals are threatening, I find the wording (of the initiative) threatening."

"It also violates freedom of eech and association because the initiative as written will require districts to fire any teacher, gay or straight, if he or she even proposed the Briggs Initiative," he continued. Cunningham shared his con-

"One of the frightening things about this is, if a teache showed up at the rally (at SJSU Sept. 15), and if the Briggs Initiative passed, the teacher could lose his job," she said.

Newman regards Proposition 6 as "clearly unconstitutional" and "absolutely unnecessary" because "school districts already have the right to dismiss (teachers) because of moral turpitude."

'It's unconstitutional, ugly, and I'm very much opposed to Savoca feels the whole affair is very frightening, not only for the gay community, but for everyone.

"It's really a threat to everyone. That's important for everyone to understand," said.

"It should be frightening to everyone because if they can do it to us, they can do it to any group that's expendable."

School funding unfair

By Steve J. Hastings For once, I thought I was in agreement with a New York corporate executive.

On first reading, a guest editorial in Columbia University magazine by William S. Beinecke chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Sperry-Hutchinson Co., seemed to be advocating more corporate money for education

Beinecke, a Yale graduate and trustee, began his piece by stating that American corporations were "falling short" in providing tax-free gifts for worthy causes, including education. Who could argue with

Reading on, through a tangle of hypocrisy and double-talk, it became clear that Beinecke wasn't sticking up for all educational institutions-just the private ones.

The idea of giving more money to the schools that were already in financial health enraged me.

It has always been the view of people like Beinecke that private schools are bigger, better, and more deserving of contributions and praise than public schools. I feel the snobbish arguments for private over public schools are ludicrous, based on upper-class prejudices, and easily torn apart by any sensible

Beinecke said that private schools are particularly deserving of support because they are more able to "choose their own directions, to assert self-governance, to attract genius, to maintain close teacherstudent relationships and to exercise flexibility..." Almost every one of these traits could be applied to any institution that had money already.

Most would agree that money can buy power, independence, and flexibility. However, not even genius is lured by a bigger paycheck.

> Steve J. Hustings is a Spartan Daily reporte

Public schools, yes, even San Jose State University, have their share of genius, it takes only a quick check around the academic departments here to find professors who can match the caliber of professors in any other school of higher education.

Close teacher-student relationships? That depends more on the availability of the professor and willingness of the student than anything else. Even if the private schools offer a heavenly setting for learning, who could afford to go there? Beinecke's kids, perhaps, and anyone who could cough up $10,000 plus, every year in

The blindest point in Beinecke's case comes when he asserts private schools opt to have "a pluralistic education system over financial security." In other words, public schools are financially secure and offer a limited education.

Please write to Mr. Beinecke at his New York office on Madison Avenue and tell him about Proposition 13, Chancellor Dumke's desire to have tuition in the California State University system by next year, and the lack of funds for adequate sports, entertainment, or new academic facilities. Ask him how that can be construed to be Still, Mr. Beinecke has a point. Big business does not give enough money for the public good, education or otherwise. Despite being allowed up to five percent of taxable income for charitable donations, Beinecke said that "only a handful of companies actually reach that level.

Beinecke suspiciously neglected to say if Sperry-Hutchinson, the monster insurance and promotions firm that he heads, is among that

Perhaps the government tax incentives don't match the in-centives of the New York Stock Exchange. Or, perhaps corporate executives get more publicity when they talk about giving money to charitable causes than when they actually sign the checks for it.

Government linked to assassinations?

By Don McCarthy

Why is the U.S. government, via the House Select Committee on Assassinations, again spending time and money to convince the public there was no conspiracy involved in President John assassination? Kennedy's

Even as all reports from the hearings support the basic con-clusion of the Warren Commission, former CIA agent Jim Wilcott told Waren Hinckle of the San Francisco Chronicle he understood "agency people" had Kennedy murdered because the President had reneged on a "secret agreement" with former CIA director Allen Dulles to militarily support the CIA-backed 1961 invasion of Cuba.

> Don McCarthy is a Spartan Daily reporter

Other theories of Kennedy's assasination point to Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, U.S. corporate power (as portrayed in the film "Executive Action") or again to the CIA because the President knew too much about the agency's covert operations.

More intriguing than the JFK probe, are the assasinations of three men which seem to follow a pattern. those of Martin Luther King, Malcom X, and Sen. Robert Ken-

Bobby Kennedy did have the position and charisma to lead the poor to better days. He also had the rare opportunity to attain enough power through the presidency to really shake things up on their behalf.

Very dangerous men all, in very dangerous times. The group which had the most to preserve during the uncertainties of the 60's were of course the men with the most wealth and power: world-wide American multinational corporations and bank

And what better way to defuse some of the uncomfortable political movements than to remove the most powerful leaders for social

These bankers and corporate kings are of course also shrewd and subtle enough to never allow a link to be seen between them and the killings. In fact, they control the tools useds to carry out the executions.

Two of those tools used were the FBI, and the Justice Department. And the bureau looks pretty silly at best when seen through its investigation of the King case. 'How a small-time, chronically inept criminal such as James Earl Ray, with no ostensible motive, no violent past and no visible means of support, could raise the nearly $10,000 he spent in three countries before the assassination, and then elude his pursuers for two months after the assasination, using several aliases and a false passport in his flight to Europe, 'still remains a mystery', according to the Justice department," wrote New Times reporters Jeff Cohen and David S.

Cohen and Lifton also found the FBI mysteriously lagged in its investigation of any possible con-spiracy, despite numerous leads which merited checking.

The two writers also wonder where the agents who had been maintaining electronic and photographic surveillance of King were during the assasination.

And according to Arthur Murtagh, a former FBI agent, the bureau's Atlanta Intelligence Unit should have been suspects in the investigation. The unit was known as "get King squad," New Times quotes Murtagh as saying.
"We never even looked for a conspiracy," Murtagh said. Leads that might have uncovered one were 'washed out,'' in "Murtagh's words.

The CIA has not yet been suspected in a specific way in any of the cases besides JFK's. But it is public knowledge the agency protected corporate interests in Chile to the point of contributing to the assasination of Salvadore Allende. What's to make one doubt the agency would not be all the more zealous in protecting corporate interests in the U.S.?

As in the King case, fishy questions by the dozens hang over the murders of Malcom X and Bobby Kennedy. The book "RFK Must Die" deals with many of the mysteries of the Senator's assasination.

Shortly before his death, Malcom himself started to think others besides just the Black Muslims wanted him dead.

But the congressional investigations are merely a bad joke. If, indeed, the corporate heads did have the three visionaries killed, they will never be found out. They have made sure of that. The investigations are a sham.

The reality is that our greatest leaders lie dead in the grave along with the American revolution they helped create. Meanwhile, the men who probably murdered them lie in unconscionable slumber night after blissful night as the profits pour in.

More self-control

I am responding to Proposition 5 comments in the Spartan Daily Sept. 14. I think the issue isn't so much my rights vs. your rights (because you only have as many rights as you can hold on to). Rather, I think it is a question of can we control our selves and be considerate of others in society or do we have to have someone tell us what to do? I think the first thing to realize is that there are just too many people trying to squeeze into too small a space. We just can't do what we want to any more. Everybody must use more self control and self discipline.

On the other side of the argument there is the danger of losing the ability to control our own actions by having government control us and it is admitting that no, we can't control ourselves and that we must have "Big Brother" tell us what to do and watch over us.

Who Jesus is

Having read the article 'Jews for Jesus movement is by definition a contradiction' last week in the Spartan Daily, I was a bit saddened I noticed that Hayes' article. although she talked to a rabbi, she failed to talk to a person from Jews for Jesus to find out why they call themselves such.

If she had, she would have found that Jews for Jesus, do not have identity crises, nor that it is contradictory to claim being a Jew for Jesus. In addressing the Jews who were seeking to kill Him, Jesus said (in the Bible the Gospel of John, chapter 5 verses 39-47):

"You search the scriptures because you think that in them you have eternal life; and you are un-willing to come to Me, that you may have life. I do not receive glory from men; but I know you that you do not have the love of God in yourselves.

"I have come in My Father's name, and you do not receive Me; if another shall come in his own name, you will receive him. How can you believe, when you receive glory from one another and you do not seek the glory that is from the one and only God?

"Do not think that I will accuse you before the Father; the one who accuses you is Moses, in whom you have set your hope. For if you would have believed Moses, you would believe Me; for he wrote of Me.

"But if you do not believe his writings, how will you believe My words?" Thus, Jesus is saying that a "true" Jew is one who accepts Jesus Christ as the Savior and Messiah prophesied by Moses in Jewish scripture (the Old Testament).

I pray, Miss Hayes, that you would read the Gospel according to John and see just who Jesus claims to be. You would see that being a Jew for Jesus is not a contradiction.

Frat compliment

Editor:

I am very concerned about recent student attitudes towards fraternities and sororities. In the press, it is popular to dismiss these organizations as "animal houses," their parties as "riots," and the groups themselves as "separatists." We appreciate this.

To call a fraternity "Animal House" is truly a compliment, for many fraternity men and sorority women feel that this movie, more than any other, has given some allusion to the real brotherhood and friendship a fraternity can offer.

No person, to our knowledge, has left "Animal House" feeling that they watched a movie about losers. Indeed, the film is about winners— those who know friendship, practice brotherhood and enjoy life in the society of others.

We like parties being called "riots." This just describes the aching need this campus has for a real social life, some genuine en-tertainment. Fraternities at SJSU supply the simplest outlet that nts have to meet one another, to get to know one another and enjoy themselves.

SJSU Greeks are indeed separatest." We are separated "separatist." We are separated from the restof an apathetic student body by our involvement.

No group's are so involved or so important to the role of students in school affairs as fraternities and sororities. We commit ourselves as active students and challenge any other group to show their interest in or participation at San Jose to be greater than ours.

taking a cut in pay to teach at SJSU for a year, Fields thinks "after 25 years of roaming the world, I thought people would be interested in listening to what I have to say."

People are fascinated by pictures, he said, and to emphasize his point Fields recalled his visit to a party in Tahiti.

"I had brought some of my pictures which were published in Life magazine. A few people started looking at them, then the entire party moved to one side of the house to look at the photos. The next thing we knew, the house, which was on a hill, slid off its foundation a

In keeping with his policy of honesty and understanding, Fields has never done any "special effect" work on his pictures.

"I believe in the documentary approach," he clarified, "because, if in a picture, say it straight

Season off to a good start

By Keith Kropp With Barbara Secola and Debbie Calcany scoring three goals each, SJSU's women's field hockey team roared to an easy 10-0 victory over University of the Pacific yesterday afternoon at south campus.

Secola scored all three of her goals in the first half in a three minute time

Padres get the Blues

Vida Blue snapped a winless streak dating back to Aug. 4, as the San Francisco Giants beat the San Diego Padres in National League action last night, 6-3, with relief help from Randy Moffitt and Gary Lavelle, the latter picking up his 13th save. The Giants jumped to a

Classic to aid kids in the Shrine Soccer Classic this weekend for four soccer schools, but there is a lot more at stake that lies below the surface.

Yesterday, several Spartan soccer players and the University of San Francisco soccer team visited crippled children at the Shriner's Hospital in San Francisco.

Today, after a luncheon for Indiana University and St. Louis University soccer clubs, the teams will visit the children and present autographed soccer balls.

The Shriners maintain 17 other hospitals such as the orthopedic hospital in San Francisco and three burn hospitals, for which the Shriners receive no financial help other than donations.

Helping these crippled children is what is really at stake for the tournament and that is where most of the proceeds willgo according to Gene York Tournament Director for the Shriners.

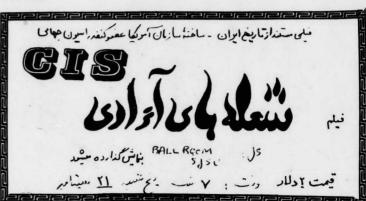

"We want as many people to attend the classic as possible," York said, "so we may raise enough money to help these crippled children.

deliberately set to prevent the spread of the Chinese section and to clear the way for further development of San Jose's business district, according to the San Jose Historical Immigration laws of the time prohibited Chinese from returning to their native country or bringing their families over.

Their poverty and the shunning by white neighbors made life miserable for most Chinese. The temple was one of the few places where they could seek solace without interference.

As the Chinese gradually began to be assimilated into the mainstream of society, interest in the temple began to wane - until 1940, when the city tried to commandeer the temple because of alleged nonpayment of back taxes.

Merchants, newspaper and citizens of both Chinese and non-Chinese descent banded together to save the temple.

But its reprieve was short-lived. In 1948 the temple was finally dismantled despite another effort by the Chinese community to save it.

However, most of its contents have been preserved and will be included in the proposed reconstruction on the Historical Museum grounds, 635 Phelan Ave., off Senter Road.

A campaign to raise funds for reconstruction is underway.

Part of that campaign is the Autumn Moon Festival, to be held on the Historical Museum grounds this Sunday.

The festival, which begins at 11 a.m. and concludes at 4:30 p.m., will feature Chinese food, craft booths, entertainment and demonstrations.

Those who choose to join us in our purpose will find we struggle to live in the style of Jesus by attempting to be a ministering community, reaching out as best we can to human need wherever found, trying to express the gospel through active word as well as spoken.

If you should be interseted in becoming part of us, we invite you to be with us for a while. Then if you are still intrigued, find out about our covenant of membership.

Briefly, we seek not so much to convert as to share.

Classes are conducted from time to time for those intersted in learning more about our history, methods and purpose You are invited to inquire and attend.
