Women 'oppressed,' Angela Davis says

Women should maintain a "three-fold attack" against racism, poverty and war, said political activist Angela Davis in a Student Union speech

Davis discussed the oppression of women, particularly from the Third World and working classes, as part of SJSU's "Womyn's Week."

"If there is going to be any real progress in the women's movement," Davis said, "it's going to be led by working-class women."

There are one million women entering the labor force each year, Davis stated. Women make up 27.4 percent of all organized workers, she continued, and a large percentage of these are Women are the first to be laid off, however, Davis said. She was told by one worker that some women who were laid off at a Chrysler plant back East were being forced to walk the streets because of their destitution.

"Racism is on the rise," Davis said. She cited the case of the two men in Chico who could not find a deer so they shot a black man.

Big oil companies and other monopolies encourage racism and sexism, Davis said. She added that if monopolies know people are fighting each other, they can not concentrate on fighting the monopolies.

Big businesses "watch us and smile and continue to rake the profits in," Davis said. Oil companies should be nationalized, she added.

The role the United States has played in promoting the Cold War must be exposed before people can understand the situation in Afghanistan, Davis said.

Davis, who teaches in the Women's studies program at San Francisco State University, talked about the history of the women's movement and the black women who were a part of this history.

She said that white women and minorities have had to join forces in the past to further the goal of woman's rights and that they must continue

If women are racist, they are only hurting themselves, she said, as men are only hurting themselves if they are sexist.

Men must fight against male supremacy just white women have to fight racism, she added.

Davis, 36, was tried and acquitted in San Jose in 1972 for murder and kidnapping charges in connection with the Marin County Courthouse shootout, in which four persons were killed.

"I wonder if I should say it's good to be back?" Davis said with a smile.

Ballroom to approximately 400 persons.

Most people greated her with loud applause and some people gave her a standing ovation but there were outbursts from two female members of the audience who accused Davis of espousing propaganda.

One of the women accused Davis, a member of the U.S. Communist Party, of backing the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The other woman said Davis ignored the fact that revolution is the only solution for racial and economic problems in the U.S.

Revolution is not just picking up a gun, Davis replied, "People have got to organize a mass

Davis said that people should say "no" to capitalism and work toward a socialist United Women must work to defeat Proposition 9, which would cut the state income tax in half, Davis said. It is the right of the working class to get an education, she added.

'You ought to be damned upset," Davis said. If Prop. 9 passes, students might not have a school to go to or will have to pay a high price for their education, she said.

Political activist Angela Davis spoke to a group of approximately 400 yesterday in the S.U.

Ray Dodd, ICSC chairman, said the real question is whether or not the foreign students can give away their right of privacy just by signing

Fullerton pointed out that foreign students have given away their right to the INS by authorizing the university to release information on them, once they signed an "I-20"

"If some other agencies like the FBI or CIA ask us the same request as the INS did, then we will ask them to show a subpoena," Fullerton said. "But the INS is not the same case."

Robert Martin, dean of Student Robert Martin, dean of student Services, said there is no real conflict between the "I-20" form, which authorizes release of in-formation, and the Privacy Act of 1974, which provides the students' right to privacy

According to the Privacy Act, written consent must be received from a student before releasing personally identifiable data from records to sources not authorized under the Act.

The INS is not an authorized source under the Act.

However, Martin said, the Chancellor's Legal Council suggested that, because the foreign students signed an "I-20" form, they already gave prior consent to the

"The shah has no right to asylum," based on the 1949 Human Rights Provision of the United Nations charter; "there is only one legal place for the shah – Iran!" said Rutgers University Prof. James Cockcroft at a discussion of foreign policy and Iran held Friday in the Student Union

Cockcroft, a sociologist of the New Jersey school, and his wife Eva, an artist and photographer, visited Iran from Jan. 26 to Feb. 4.

As Albohassen Bani-Sadr, Iran's new president "unflinchingly stands," Cockcroft said, "The hostages can be freed as long as the United States acknowledges its culpability for crimes under the shah, and agrees not to interfere in efforts to get the shah back.'

According to Cockcroft, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini stands behind Bani-Sadr who in turn is backed by 90 percent of the Iranian people.

"I am confident they (the Iranian people) will get the shah back," Cockcroft said. "I think the hostages will be freed."

The Cockcrofts interviewed students at the American Embassy in Tehran, a member of the ruling Revolutionary Council, and others from government, industrial and private sectors of Iranian life.

A.S. Constitution

A new A.S. constitution will be placed before the students in a special election today and tomorrow. The document has been approved by A.S. council but its survival requires voter acceptance.

The Spartan Daily believes the new constitution is in the best interest of SJSU students. Its adoption will result in a more efficient and effective student government.

The current A.S. council is oversized and inconsistent and its performance, for all practical purposes, leaves a lot to be desired. Council decisions are made without sufficient thought and often contradict each

Any group which has approached the council for special allocations or any student who has attended a meeting can attest to that.

Under the new constitution, the council's 20 members, elected at large, would be replaced with a 12-member board of directors. The overall effect would be to streamline the council and inject some expertise into the decision-making process.

Board candidates would run for specific seats, such as director of student services or community affairs.

The current system creates weak student government by encouraging candidates to adopt broad, empty platforms. At-large elections are essentially popularity contests pitting students who claim to have answers for every campus issue but in reality know little.

Council members, because of the at-large process, are poor decisionmakers. There is no pressure on them to research issues and legislate wisely because each is performing all roles at once.

In delegating specific responsibilities to each council member, the director format would eliminate this problem. Each member would be forced to research issues in his area and could not sit back and hope

The director who evades his responsibility would endanger his credibility and respect, both with the council and the student body.

Under the present system, there is no individual accountability for poor decisions and lack of effort. The council as a whole takes the blame, so members do not have to be accountable.

Under the new constitution, students or groups who don't agree with council decisions will be able to petition specific councilmembers. Protest of an action viewed as discriminatory, for example, would be channeled to the director of ethnic affairs.

At present, the typical council meeting is frequently an exchange of unresearched opinions, personal attacks and bickering over trivial points. Input, both from the outside and inside, is often ignored.

In recent weeks, the need for a change has become more and more apparent. The council has often criticized itself for poor decisions and unprofessional conduct, and rightfully so. The board of directors model fits very well with the upcoming incorporation of A.S. This format is an efficient way of delegating the added responsibilities and duties associated with an independent, non-profit business organization. The proposed constitution would also replace the public information and personnel officers, now paid non-council appointed positions, with publicly elected council members.

These officers work very closely with the present council and A.S. effectiveness would be enhanced by making them a part of this body.

The new constitution further streamlines A.S. by eliminating the attorney general position and delegating most of its duties to the A.S. vice president.

Low A.S. election turnouts and student apathy in general reflect widespread dissatisfaction with the existing council.

The new constitution is not a panacea, and those voters who visit the polls today and tomorrow must understand that. This is only the first step in the long road to a revitalized student government.

Increased student participation in A.S. should accompany this

With A.S. elections coming later this spring, a voter rejection of this document now would mean at least another year of ineffective student

The Daily encourages students to approve the new A.S. constitution and end the confusion in SJSU student government.

This editorial was approved by the editorial board. The vote was 8-0.

Dan Rather not the right man to replace Cronkite at CBS

Slowly but surely, avid viewers of the CBS Evening News are being spoon-fed with what is soon to be the patron's culture shock of the decade

Dan Rather is to replace that pillar of credibility, Walter

Rather, who chose CBS after being offered a spot by all three networks, is not scheduled to take over Cronkite's post fulltime until 1981, but already, starting last month, CBS began paying him an $8 million salary, to make him the second highest-paid journalist in the Time magazine's pronounced him the $8 million man. By my calculations, that is $2 million more valuable than Lee Majors was as television's Bionic Man. Rather is hardly bionic, maybe at least in the assessment of his own ambition.

As a newsman he is perhaps dynamic, but only, it seems, within the confines of that hardhitting "white-hatted" vigilante quartet of '60 Minutes.

We can't help feeling let down even though we must face the fact that Uncle Walter is getting tired of facing us every night after so many Cronkite feels it is time to step down.

The only consolation in that is CBS did not tell him to leave.

You can't help but feel that Cronkite should be unwavering, like motherhood, baseball season and

What's difficult to fathom is what's wrong with the executives at CBS hiring veterans on the network such as Roger Mudd, Terry Drinkwater or Bob Schieffer. They are older, experienced and wouldn't pose a threat to the staunch reputation of the CBS Evening

Could CBS have made a mistake in hiring Rather to replace Cronkite? Rather is a good investigative newsman, many think, but how good an anchorman

This position inevitably requires stability and knowledge of news events covering a broad spectrum. This may be something that eightmonths-on-the-road-a-year Rather is not used to, and, in his wanderlust role, may not be ready for.

His sky-rocketing rise to the top so early in his career may prove to be another story of too far too fast and too much too soon.

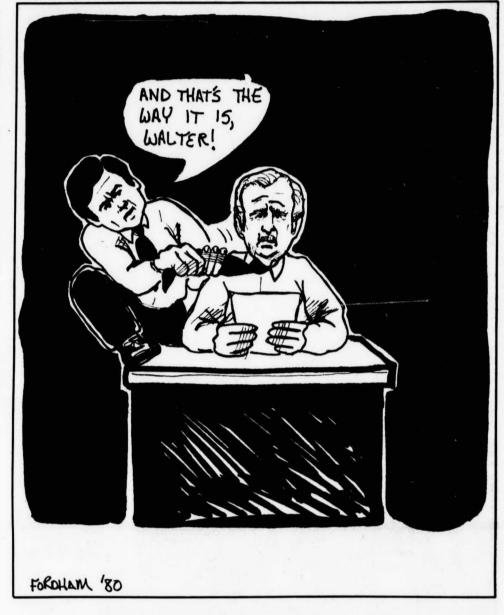

Cronkite is steeped in his reputation as being a low-key and highly-capable professional, but it took him years to arrive at his current measure of confidence from the American public.

That seems to be a territory that has much respectibility if even oddly tinged with some acceptable dryness, personified by Cronkite himself.

It may be a dismaying thought could it be time for trustworthiness and old-style professionalism to give way to glamour, sensuality, youth and a high-gloss approach? It happened with Burt Parks being fired from the Miss America Pageant.

That not always reassuring phrase that is synonomous with Cronkite – "And that's the way it is" will pass from the forefront as

Parking

I have been pleased to read your recent articles and letters about the proposed 4th and San Carlos parking garage, since I, along with most everyone else (judging from the current outcry against the garage since word got out), didn't hear about it when the ministration was rushing through its funding proposal for the thing last summer. Am I being malicious in thinking that maybe they didn't want to hear our feelings on the

I am sorry though, that the Spartan Daily has not been more descriptive of the sad consequences of building the garage. First of all, we would lose a lot of irreplaceable old buildings (some of them even beautiful)

And face it, do you really believe that they're ever going to build anything again on klutzy old San Jose State that actually has giant bevelled-glass windows, wood-panelled staircases, neato Victorian turreting? Why do we want to let something like that get thrown away

I'm talking about the Afro-American Studies Building, the Environmental Studies Building and the Women's Center.

And second, if oil crises keep propelling gas prices upward, if enrollment keeps dropping like it has and if Santa Clara County bus ridership continues to rise like it has, maybe the university will end up building a cold, soulless concrete parking garage six stories high that blocks the sunlight, collects dust, destroys the last remnants of hope for a beautiful, human campus - and sits half empty most of the time!

We're supposed to be trying to discourage ourselves from using cars, anyway. It looks like the administration is real committed to helping the country get out of its present energy crisis.

So I don't like this idea - a parking garage on 4th and San Carlos - and I hope the Daily doesn't either, and that you tell us and the

Solution

With disagreements on parking statistics, instead of adding more numbers to the confusion, I will suggest a parking solution that could be started tomorrow.

It would cost nothing to implement and would benefit commuters and campus-area residents

Free carpool parking! That's it. Just three words. Simple. Immediate. Effective. Everyone can understand free carpool parking. When two or more people arrive at the Seventh Street Garage in a car, there should be no charge for parking; the attendants should just let the car through.

Now, I realize that actually doing something about the parking problem instead of talking about it is a radical idea, but I think the students are tired of charges and counter-charges over who manipulated which data.

Students are ready for a solution now. Let A.S. council and the administration argue about numbers on their own time.

Confused

I would imagine the purpose of having a political section in the Daily is to inform people and to clarify the political scene.

But, judging from the March 4 article, "It is sink or swim in today's primaries," a person might be more confused about the current scene

For example, Greg Grimes, your political editor, wrote "Sen. Kennedy is virtually fighting for his political life and a majority of the 11 delegate votes in his home state of Massachusetts." I don't know if this was a misprint or what, but there were 111 delegates at stake.

Also, Mr. Grimes listed con-tending Republican candidates but made no mention of John Anderson, who was a strong third in the polls last weekend in Massachusetts. It isn't very informative to leave out the man most likely the receive the nomination of his party.

The story also quoted Howard Baker as saying, "I need at least one win this month in order to be considered among the top three or four contenders come November. Either Mr. Grimes misquoted isn't aware there is only one Republican running for president in November. Mr. Grimes said John Connally has "used up more than $12 million without receiving one delegate vote."

This is incorrect. Mr. Connally won one delegate last month in Arkansas. This reflects much more Aside from these items, the article wasn't really too bad. But mistakes like these shouldn't be allowed to persist. Sure, I'm no expert. But Mr. Grimes is hurting his credibility as

Decisions

Brian Wirth's opinion piece (Friday) began hailing a court abortion decision that he thinks is good" and "sound." The rest of his article deals with the issue of abortion and not the soundness of recent abortion decisions.

Recent abortion decisions have been bad. The Hyde Amendment, passed by Congress, would significantly restrict federal funding of abortion. A New York judge mentioned by Wirth singlehandedly overruled the Congress of the United States and ordered the Health, Education and Welfare Department to fund abortions. Not only that, his order mandates the spending of money not appropriated by Congress.

Dooling and the Supreme Court that upheld his ruling, while considering its merits, both know that the House of Representatives won't appropriate money for abortion, except under the provisions of the Hyde Amendment.

The House of Representatives is solidly pro-life (anti-abortion). Elected according to population, members of the House reflect the will of the American people better than do one New York judge, the Supreme Court or the U.S. Senate (which is split about evenly on the have voted directly on the issue of abortion, it has been voted down.

Wirth argues for a decision that will probably, in time, be ruled unconstitutional due to its ordering the government to spend money that has not been appropriated.

Worse than that, he argues for the destruction of human life.

Craig Anderson,

Journalism, senior

Two points

Brian Wirth missed two very important points in his article on March 7.

First, the federal funding of abortions as described in his column is nothing more than an overly expensive form of birth control Sure, he says they are poor and can't afford it. Agreed, to an extent, but the reason they are in this predicament is because they are uneducated on the facts of birth control. (In this sense, I am talking about preventing the pregnancy, not getting rid of it.)

I would much rather see the federal government take the millions of dollars needed to fund such a program and educate these poor desperate people who, I'm sure, would rather prevent the unwanted pregnancy than go through the traumatic experience of an abortion.

Mr. Wirth also talks about saving money, but I don't think that he thought about the amount which would be saved by getting some of these same people out of another government freebie, the penicillin line, to cure their VD. If we educate them on how to prevent unwanted pregnancies, we can also slow down the VD epidemic which is now sweeping the country.

Confident

My thanks to Robyne Martin for Proposition 10. Now that I know just what the proposition is all about, I will be able to vote with a confident "yes" against rent control.

Martin attacks proponents' call for a "Fair Rents Amendment" and names it instead The Big Landlords' Loopholes." Tell me, what is fair rent? A law which lowers rents below their market value will benefit the renters at the expense of the landlords.

Similarly, a law which places a mandatory floor on rents above the market level would favor the landlords at the expense of the renters.

In other words, any economic sanction actuated by government coercion will favor one faction over another, thus rendering the term 'fair' in this context meaningless.

No facade of moral righteousness can mask the obvious fact that "rent control" means the coercion by one special interest group - renters - over the interests

Conclusion

After reading both Reid Scott's letter criticizing the "raise" given welfare recipients in light of state employees lack of same, and Keith Thompson's letter (March 7) describing Scott as being in "grevious error," I have concluded that it is Mr. Thompson who erred. Reid Scott is correct in his

"Going to the Nationals is the greatest thing that's ever happened to me," Ebeling said. "It has a kind of euphoric affect on me."

Ebeling, who lifts in the 148-pound class, boasts lifts of 325 pounds in the bench press, 450 pounds in the deadlift and 460 pounds in the squat.

Powerlifting is a sport where the mental aspect is as important as the physical aspect. Ebeling credits the ple he has met through the sport and those around him people he has met through the sport and the for his success and enjoyment in the sport.

'The people around me push me to do better. You get psyched up when you have your teammates cheering you Without them, I would be nothing," he said.

While he says enthusiastically that "it helps to like people," lifting is an intense sport that takes hours of work every day. The personal commitment calls for inner strength as well as physical ability.

Men netters topple Canada

by Catherine Cassidy and Dave Meltzer

The men were expected to win, but the women ran into unexpected problems.

The SJSU men's tennis team breezed through their match yesterday with relative ease, downing highly touted Canada College, 7-2, at the South Campus courts. On the No. 1 singles court, SJSU star Nial Brash easily defeated Canada's John Huebner in a straight set victory,

The Spartans' second singles man, Paul Batten, was not able to pull himself out of a losing slump, however, recording his fourth consecutive loss when he dropped his match yesterday to Mike Codiga in a 7-5, 6-4 decision. On the doubles battlefield, Batten came on strong pairing up with Brash for a 7-5, 7-6 win over the Codiga-Huebner duo after a thrilling end-of-the-day

The Lady Spartans' match, however, did not go so smoothly yesterday.

As of press time last night, SJSU had come from behind to tie their match with California at 4-4.

Darkness set in during the final doubles match, and it looked as if the contest would be called at a tie. But Cal, not satisfied to bring home either a tie or a loss, requested the match be played out on a lighted court in San Jose. Results of the final doubles match were not available at press time.

Both teams will be looking for more home action again today at the South Campus courts.

The men will be battling cross-town rival University of Santa Clara, which boasts its biggest threats in freshman Jim Laccabue and sophomore Scott Ritchey. Laccubue, who remains undefeated through six matches so far this season, has been proclaimed by Bronco boach Greg Kerber as "the best tennis player to ever enroll at this school."

Ritchey, currently Kerber's No. 2 singles man, was last year's team highlight in the top singles spot.

At the other end of the South Campus battlefield, the women face a tough match with Cal State-Northridge.

The Northridge women, led by No. 1 singles player Debbie Pearl, a top-ranking junior in Southern California, took third place in the Sacramento State Invitational tournament last weekend.

The Lady Spartans followed behind, placing sixth out of 22 teams from throughout California participating in the weekend event.

Spartans, Warriors battle

The Spartans return to action today as they take on Stanislaus State at San Jose Municipal Stadium in a 2:30

The two teams played to a 2-2 tie in their last meeting on Feb. 5 at the Warriors home field. The game was called after nine innings because of darkness The Warriors, who have won their last five games, lead the Far Western Conference with an 11-1 record, 12-2-1 overall. SJSIJ is currently 8-10-1 overall and 6-6 in the Northern California Baseball Association for fourth place. In his nine years at Stanislaus State, head coach Jim Bowen has guided the Warriors to the Division III national tournament four times. After winning the Division Championship in '76 and '77, the Warriors slipped to a fourth place finish in '78. In 1979, the Warriors took second to Gladstone in New Jer-

Outfielders Keith Bell and Randy Filkins lead the team in batting with .448 and .424 batting averages respectively.

Third baseman Jeff Turnbull has the only two home runs for the Warriors and has 14 hits in 39 at-bats, for a .359 hitting percentage.

On the mound, right-hander Larry Cruz, a junior, is tops on the pitching staff with a 2.73 ERA. Cruz is currently 4-0 and has gone the distance in three of his four If the game should turn into a pitching duel, SJSU should have a decided edge. Cruz's 2.73 ERA is far higher than SJSU's top starter, John Tillema, whose ERA is 1.69. Teamwise, the Spartans again have the edge, 2.16 to 2.63, and no Warrior reliever has had to go a full inning, while the Spartans have three pitchers who have gone two or more innings in relief.

After today's game, the Spartans resume league play against the University of San Francisco. The series starts on Friday at San Jose Municipal Stadium and will be completed on Saturday at USF in a double-header beginning at noon.

'I want marijuana and cocaine legalized'

Presidential candidate Ed Clark speaks out

Edward E. Clark is a presidential candidate with a

The neatly groomed and conservatively dressed 49year-old nominee of the third largest U.S. political party, the Libertarian Party, resembled a Midwestern insurance

It first appeared as if Clark might be politically just to the right of George Wallace as he walked into the press conference inside the Santa Clara County Libertarian headquarters.

But that impression dissolved the moment he sat down and began to speak.

I want to see all laws which infringe on our personal and individual freedoms abolished," Clark said, slapping his palm down on the conference table.

Things like marijuana, cocaine, heroin and PCP as well as prostitution and gambling should all be legalized," he added. Clark leaned back in his chair and unfastened the button of his navy blue blazer, then leaned forward and picked a stale doughnut up from the table. "Everyone, though, is capable of abusing any one of a number of things," Clark said, looking at the doughnut. "Even this doughnut. If you eat too many, it could give you a heart attack," he said, putting the doughnut

The point is that the U.S. government is telling us what we can and cannot do every day of our lives. If we are treated like children, we will act like children and not like the adults we are. The government should let us decide if we want to use or abuse drugs, gamble or hire a prostitute," Clark said, again slamming the table with his palm. "We own our bodies, not the government. The presidential nominee leaned back again, this time to light a cigarette.

To anyone familiar with the Libertarian Party,

Clark's views come as no surprise.
Established in 1972, the Libertarian Party was founded on the principle that there should be no interference by force in the right of adult men and women to live their own lives in their own way.

For the Libertarians, force primarily is shown through governmental action.

From that principle, the Libertarians have developed a list of political party positions on issues ranging from pornography to compulsory education.

The list is prefaced with a Libertarian view of the function of government.

'Libertarians maintain that the only legitimate function of government - if we are to have government at all - is to protect individual rights; i.e., to protect people from the use of force and fraud by others.

'It is not the proper function of government, we believe, to assist some people at the expense of others, or to prevent individuals from harming themselves

Here are some excerpts from the party platform that begins, in details, to outline the party's political stand.

Freedom of Speech: "We look on police interference with the sale of 'pornographic' materials as an insolent meddling in the private concerns of free men and Sexual Freedom: "All laws regarding the private sexual conduct of consenting adults (with the age of consent reasonably defined and identical for males and females) should be repealed. Prostitution should be made legal and brought under the ordinary commercial code.

Drug Control: "Total freedom of cultivation, manufacture, sale and use of drugs by adults. Part of the a free, self-determining adult is acknowledged right to ingest whatever materials one Gun Control: "Gun control is an abrogation of the individual's right of self defense, and a disarmed public is at the mercy of criminals or a criminal government.'

The Draft: "Repeal the Selective Service Act, complete dismantling of the Selective Service System, and immediate and unconditional amnesty for draft-

would legalize

prostitution and pornography

If elected as president of the United States, Libertarian candidate Ed Clark

Compulsory Education: "We advocate the dismantling of the system of compulsory education, and its replacement with a network of diverse, voluntary educational institutions, the ending of government brainwashing and enslavement of American children."

Foreign Policy: "We are politically isolationists. We advocate the withdrawal of American troops from other countries of the world, believing that American military forces have no business outside American borders.

Government Support: "Between 500,000 and 1 million public school children (are) currently being drugged with amphetamines, largely at the insistence of their teachers, a part of the frightening ideology which sees almost all nonconformity as an illness and imposes "treatment' on

Unjustly Imprisoned: "The immediate release of all persons presently detained or imprisoned for victimless

Helped by those and other political stands, the Libertarian Party grew from 85 members in 1972 to more than 1.3 million in 1978.

During the last presidential election, the Congressional Quarterly's "Guide to the 1976 Elections' reported that "in the brief period of four years, the Libertarian Party leaped fom a fledgling organization ... to the nation's third largest party.

Clark, formerly a lawyer for Atlantic Richfield, ran for governor of California against Gov. Jerry Brown and Evelle Younger in 1978 on the Libertarian ticket and received nearly 400,000 votes or 5 percent.

The Santa Clara County Libertarian Party headquarters estimates that there are approximately 90,000 registered party members in California alone, more than 3,000 coming from Santa Clara County.

"I would like to see the United States become a threeparty system," Clark said, "so that voters will have three choices in the future.'

Clark said he expects to be on the ballots of 50 states by the November presidential election.

Clark also said that he is in favor of the Howard Jarvis onsored Proposition 9, which would cut income taxes in half for all Californians.

The reason Jarvis I did not properly help the lower ncome people the way that it was designed to, is due to the fact that most cities have a very restrictive land use

'Cities will not allow large apartment buildings to be built; therefore, the landlords have kept the rent break money rather than giving it to the tenant. There was no realistic housing competition for the landlord to be forced into lowering his rent.

But Jarvis I increased the employment rate in this state," Clark said. "It also increased the wage structure.

"I believe Jarvis II will have the same effect," he Clark also said that all troops in every country outside the United States should be brought home.

"Why should we spend millions to defend the West Europeans and others?" Clark asked. "If there was one lesson learned in World War II, it was that the Germans, the Japanese and others can take care of themselves. "The whole idea that the draft is a common American tradition turns my stomach," Clark said, adding that soldiers should be paid market wages if they are to volunteer for the military services. Clark said he believed that the only military necessity right now is to be prepared for a missile attack

"I think we ought to cut out all the useless money that goes to the military for offensive weapons and con-centrate strictly on defensive weapons," Clark said.

"There can never be a possibility of a land or sea invasion, so let's strictly have a functional missile

Although Clark did not rule out the possibility of winning the 1980 presidential election, he did concede that it was "not probable."

"I expect to receive several million votes this year," he said. "But I don't want to put any upper limit on the voting.

Clark said that with his party platform, he hopes to at least give Americans a real choice.

"I'm not saying that if we win and implement our platform we will turn this society into a Utopia," he said. "It will just be a better society."

Both groups may receive up to $6,000 from A.S. funds, as they coordinate two of the five "cultural weeks" allocated for the 1979-80 A.S.

Both groups are on the agenda Monday's Special next Allocations Committee meeting.

Vice-Chair Joanie Goar plained why the Greek Week allocation was not settled.

Some problems may arise if the Associated Students decide to fund musicians hired to play at Greek Week casino night on April 26, Goar said. The event is sponsored by two fraternities, Sigma Nu and Theta

"If the casino night is held at one of the frat houses (on 11th street)," Goar said, "our (A.S.) liability goes up, as we don't have any control over it."

Goar said she encouraged the fraternities to move the casino night activities to the campus, where A.S. liability would be decrease making it easier to fund the event. decreased,

For the remainder of the twohour meeting, the committee worked on guidelines for allocating next year's funds. Goar and Chair woman Juvencia Romo requested that committee members Chris Gustafson, Dawn Cerne and Ken Schott 'get tough" on forming guidelines.

The committee agreed that "it will make people think harder," and "force the arguments to be better" when conditions for funding groups are better defined.

Reacting to predictions of next year's budget cuts, the committee suggested harsher restrictions on funding for conferences attended by clubs or departmental groups.

Senate prepares for Prop. 9 budget cuts

an emergency procedure policy passed Academic Senate Monday

The policy specifically addresses the possibility of which may result if Prop. 9 income tax revenue in half. Pending final approval

How to deal with Fullerton, the emergency Proposition 9, should it policy will implement a pass in June, is the focus of consultative procedure for dealing with any possible by the budget cuts.

If Fullerton does approve the policy, each department will report to faculty layoffs and its school dean by May 16 program terminations on how the department would implement 10, 20 and succeeds in cutting state 30 percent cuts in the tentative fall 1980 full-time faculty equivalent

"The department's report will include an assessment of the most consequences of budget cuts upon departmental programs and students, including the courses or sections to be dropped, programs to be eliminated, the number of faculty positions per TSA (teacher service areas) reduced, and possible alternatives to layoff," the Part two of the process will not begin unless Prop. 9 passes. If it does, each school will review the department reports. Each school will then report to a university ad hoc committee by June 11.

The ad hoc committee will review the school reports and then make detailed recommendations to the Academic Senate based on the information in the reports.

The senate will consider the committee's report in executive session on June 30 and determine to best advise Fullerton on how to make budget cuts.

The policy also calls for senate members to provide summer schedules so that they can be reached if Prop. 9 passes. Schools and departments are urged to develop a telephone alert

In other business, the enate discussed a policy for selection and review of a library director. Discussion will continue at the senate's next meeting.

'Womyn's Week' workers protest nude cake popper

A professional nude cake popper sparked controversy Monday when two people involved in "Womyn's Week" protested her appearance in the Student Union Forum

Forum is a weekly interview program sponsored by GROPE, the S.U. programming group.

The cake popper, who works under the name Brandy, was being interviewed for the program in the S.U. Amphitheater along with representatives from National Singing Telegram and Gorilla Gram.

This is inappropriate during "Womyn's Week," Alice Campbell, Coordinator of the Women's Center said when she stepped up to the microphone provided for audience questions.

'Did you know you are being advertised as tits and Robin Williams, co-director of "Womyn's Week" asked Brandy as she displayed a poster showing bare buttocks popping out of a cake.

Brandy answered that by being interviewed on the program, she was showing people that there is more to her than just a body

Campbell asked Brandy if she felt she was "being exploited or exploiting others" by jumping out of cakes

Brandy said she was neither being exploited nor exploiting other people.

"I feel I am a free agent," she said. "I'm not forced to Monday's program will be broadcast at 10:30 a.m.

Cake popping is "an opportunity for me to show ple in a very nice way that the body is today on KSJS, FM 91. people in a very nice way that the body is a very acceptable thing," Brandy told the small audience.

Brandy explained that either she or her husband Dave, who also pops out of cakes nude, is wheeled into a party in a specially-built cake or a gift-wrapped box.

They then pop out, give the recipient a hug and a kiss

Carter, Reagan win

(AP) - President Jimmy Carter and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan overwhelmingly defeated their respective opponents in all three Southern primary elections last night.

Carter's landslide victory in Florida, Georgia and Alabama over Sen. Edward Kennedy puts added pressure on the importance of next Tuesday's Illinois primary, a state where both have predicted victory.

Reagan now has a commanding lead over secondrunning former U.S. senator George Bush for the Republican presidential nomination.

and talk to the party-goers for a few minutes.
"Then I excuse myself to get dressed," said Brandy, who charges $60 per party and performs as many as six times a night on weekends.

After dressing, she returns to the party so people have a chance to talk to me," she said.
"It is that kind of portrayal that makes our society look at women as bodies and not brains," Williams said "I don't think it's fitting for an educational institution, and I don't think it's of interest to the campus ... it's a form of pornography," Williams continued "It's just really a nice thing," Brandy commented.

How can it be harmful?"

"I thought they (Williams and Campbell) were really being reactionary without thinking," Cindy Hovens, program moderator, said.

They came in late. They didn't know what she was talking about. They wouldn't listen to her reasons," she Havens said "Womyn's Week" was a "good week" for a Forum program including a cake popper "It gave them (Williams and Campbell) a chance to come in and ask questions," she said.

Defending the poster which shows bare buttocks popping out of a cake, Havens said, "That's what Brandy does. It's what all cake poppers, male and female, do."

enemies out of people it is supposed to be protecting, Cockcroft said, adding that instead, the U.S. should behind these inevitable revolutions.

The crisis in Iran is being "used by Carter to re-elect himself" and create economic stability by reinstating the draft - not to help free the hostages, Cockcroft said.

The hostages would be returned of the shah was extradited, Cockcroft explained.

"The shah was one of the bloodiest tyrants in history,' said. The Iranian people want the shah to stand trial "because they want the world to know," so the mass executions and tortures will not happen again.

According to Cockcroft, Khomeini is guilty of "excesses, but 7,000 deaths, justified or not, out of the revolution is "small per capita" compared to any other revolution - including the American and French revolutions.
