

Conflicting opinions cause A.S. representative to quit

by Stephen D. Stroth

For the second time in three weeks, a member of the Associated Students board of directors has resigned.

Director of Communications Eric Green resigned during Wednesday's board meeting "for the good of the (A.S.) government" and "for myself," he said.

Green was the official representative of the A.S. to on- and off-campus media.

The first resignation from the new board occurred Sept. 25 when former Director of Student Services Michael Wangeman resigned for "personal reasons."

"I don't think I was working effectively with the executive branch of this body," Green said.

He added that the major barrier to effectiveness in his role was his disagreement with A.S. President Mike Medina over the format for the full-page A.S. advertisement on the back of the Independent Weekly.

The Weekly advertisement appears every week at a cost of $186 to A.S.

"There was a difference of opinion about how things should be done," Medina said. "Things he thought were major problems, weren't."

"It all started when they came to me and said they didn't think I was using the space (on the ad) effectively," Green said. "They said it wasn't attracting people."

As director of communications, Green was responsible for "the preparation of advertising concerning A.S. meetings and activities," according to the board's rules of procedure and director responsibilities.

Executive officers Medina, A.S. Vice President Rebecca Graveline and A.S. Controller Tom Fil were "pushing me around and putting on an (advertising) campaign against my philosophy," Green said.

Green said that the officers wanted to "dress up in monkey suits and take crazy pictures of the executives" in an effort to improve the image of the A.S. with the ad.

"I've tried to avoid that kind of meaningless, yellow and false style. But, I was willing to work with it," he said.

Fil said that the executives were "trying to garner more student interest" with the photographs, which would appear in the Weekly ad.

"We took all different kinds (of pictures), some jokes and some serious," Fil said.

Business Professor Porter commits suicide near home

SJSU business Professor Albert Porter died of carbon monoxide poisoning Monday in his car near his Sea Ranch home in Mendocino County.

According to Mrs. Porter, Porter took his own life.

He was found in his car by the Sea Ranch security police.

Porter, 64, came to SJSU in 1955.

He and his wife, Dorothy, had been living in Sea Ranch since last spring.

Art Professor Dave Hatch, a friend of Porter's, was very upset at the news.

"I just started to cry immediately," he said.

"He was easily one of the most exciting people you'd meet around here. He just excited me to listen to him, and I think we need people like that."

"Someone told me that his whole career was controversial, and I think that is great," Hatch said.

In fall 1976, under the university's reduced-time, pre-retirement plan, Porter was cut to half-time status.

In 1979, Porter's request to return to full-time status was denied by the university.

In a letter to Academic Vice President Hobert Burns last year, School of Business Dean George Halverson said Porter was not sufficiently competent to return to full-time status.

Porter later said that these accusations were the basis for the decision not to reinstate him as a full-time professor.

Porter filed a grievance against the university following the denial in February 1979. He claimed SJSU President Gail Fullerton's decision was "unfair, uninformed and possibly malicious." Porter said he was defamed professionally and personally by the decision.

The grievance hearings, which began late last semester, recessed on May 13 and were to resume on September 25.

However, on September 25, Porter decided to withdraw his grievance, stating that he still did not agree with the pre-retirement plan, but under the circumstances, it was wisest for him to withdraw.

Porter said he believed that without a specific policy or criteria for reinstatement, the president and her advisers acted reasonably.

Hatch said that there was no doubt in his mind that Porter's strong desire to return to full-time teaching caused him to commit suicide.

Porter was scheduled to teach next spring at SJSU as the final part of his five-year pre-retirement plan.

Aeronautics dept. discrimination suit delayed until June

by Dan Martin

The trial date for a $1.5 million discrimination suit against SJSU and Aeronautics Department Chairman Thomas Leonard has been postponed until June 9, 1981, so the plaintiffs can prepare their case. The trial was originally scheduled to begin Dec. 2.

The suit, filed Feb. 29 by two SJSU aeronautics majors and a graduate, claims that the Aeronautics Department discriminates against persons of Middle Eastern descent.

According to Diane Dickstein, the attorney for the plaintiffs, they want to study the university's claim that it can't be sued under the 11th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The amendment states: "The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit or law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another state, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign state."

"It is a very difficult issue - very complicated," Dickstein said. "But the trend is to allow people to sue a government when they are deprived of their rights. The judge is thinking about it very carefully."

At a hearing Sept. 29 before Robert Peckham, chief judge of the Federal District Court in San Francisco, the university presented its claim and the plaintiffs then requested the postponement.

The plaintiffs, Nabil Taovil, Marcel Frangieh and Samir Asad, all of Middle Eastern descent, contend they were the victims of "verbal assault," misadvancement and general "discriminatory practices" by school officials.

They are claiming general and punitive damages for alleged discriminatory acts and subsequent tampering by Leonard with a report supposedly outlining those same acts.

When asked to comment on the latest developments in the case, Leonard said that he would have to comply with Deputy Attorney General John Davidson's request that he refrain from discussion. Davidson was not available for comment.

Leonard said, though, that he heard many specific instances of discrimination presented by Dickstein at the hearing. When pressed for comment though, neither party would elaborate on the specifics.

According to Leonard, Taovil and Frangieh are still attending SJSU, but Asad is minding business interests in the northern Bay Area.

Five dormitory students attacked by Chicano youths

Canh Lee, proprietor of Mimosa's Cafe, points to where 12 Chicano youths attacked five dormitory students Sunday.

A group of five SJSU dormitory students was attacked by a dozen Chicano youths Sunday night as they were walking to the 7-11 store on 11th and E. San Carlos streets.

There was no apparent reason for the assault on the two male and three female students, which occurred at 8:45 p.m., according to one of the students.

Some of the students received black eyes and cuts and bruises on their faces.

Five San Jose police units arrived on the scene, which was less than two blocks from Allen Hall, where the students live.

Arrested and taken to juvenile hall was a 17-year-old female who had threatened the students with a broken bottle.

"They (the youths) weren't out for money," one of the female victims said. "They were out to punch."

The students said it all began when one of the two male students was walking ahead of the others as they passed the group of youths. As the student pointed out the church on the corner of 10th and E. San Carlos streets, he felt a hand on his shoulder and was spun around.

One of the youths punched him in the face, while three others grabbed the other male and began pulling his hair.

The first male student shook off his attackers and ran the half block back to the dormitory for help.

He returned with four male dormitory residents.

Another female student ran into years in prison and/or a $20,000 fine, to making threats against the president with a maximum penalty of $1,000 and/or five years imprisonment.

Blacker established that the temporary $1 million bail, set at Almani's arraignment, be made final, despite a plea from Almani's attorney, Paul Mansfield of San Jose, to lower the amount to between $100,000 to $250,000.

Mansfield based his request on Almani's history, which he said showed that Almani could not flee to Iran because of his anti-Khomeini political beliefs.

"His No. 1 desire is to become a U.S. citizen," Mansfield said.

The FBI accused Almani of planning to return to Iran to engage in subversive activity.

It also said that he was part of the "Iranian Free Army," which is a militant group that has threatened the lives of the president and his aides and has accused them of being responsible for the fall of the shah.

Almani was planning to buy 100 sub-machine guns to be used in terrorist activity in the U.S., the government attorney continued, and 1,000 more for use in Iran.

Joseph F. Spencer, special agent for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, told the court that he believes Almani would try to flee the country.

Spencer received information about Almani's activities through an associate who became an informer, according to an FBI report.

Because of the "prejudicial charges," Mansfield said, Blacker had no choice but to maintain the high bail.

"There is no indication of an organization that Naser is fronting for," Mansfield said. "He only has his family, who are loyal to each other and successful."

Mansfield called Almani a patriot who could be compared to the anti-Vietnam demonstrators of the '60s.

"He is patriotic to Iran and the United States," Mansfield said.

With the assistance of an interpreter, Almani told the court that he cannot go back to Iran, and he wants to have his day in court in front of the press so the "world will know what is happening in Iran."

Although Blacker said Almani was eloquent and honorable in his plea, he said that he has to believe that the charges are true at this point and consider Almani as a "flight risk."

The FBI report said it found two pipe bombs in the back of Almani's business on the evening of Oct. 1, along with about 300 communiques of the IFA. One claimed credit for the Berkeley bombing.

Reports also said that diagrams for bomb making, timing devices, electrical wiring and a quantity of gun powder were also found in the search of the shop.

Prior to Almani's arraignment on Oct. 2, he said that he wanted to gather exiled members of the shah's army to overthrow Khomeini but denied that he made bombs or intended to bomb a meeting at SJSU.

License extensions too easy, sacrifice safety

by Michelle Waugh
Staff Writer

The new mail-in driver's license renewal program may be sacrificing an increase in automobile accidents in order to save money.

The program is very convenient for motorists and probably saves the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) a lot of work and money, but the danger of practically handing a person who might need re-testing a driver's license outweighs the convenience and financial advantage.

Four-year extension forms are now sent out to "selected" motorists who have the privilege of answering one question, paying $3.25, and sending the two in to the DMV for an automatic license renewal.

The criteria for selecting these privileged individuals seems a bit lenient.

The person must be under the age of 70, have no disease that affects driving ability, and not have had an accident or conviction during the last four years.

The majority of drivers probably fit into this category easily.

The single question that a motorist must answer to obtain the four-year extension is not exactly an accurate test of driving knowledge.

The question reads:

"Within the last three years, have you experienced a lapse of consciousness or had any disease, disorder or disability which affects your ability to exercise reasonable and ordinary control in operating a motor vehicle?"

Who would answer "yes" to such a question?

The driver's testing system that is now used is not nearly as stringent as it should be, but why should we turn to a mail-in convenience system when the driver's test is the only comprehensive way we can regulate and promote auto safety?

By the end of the four-year extension, a driver has not been tested for up to eight years. This is too long of a period for any driver to go without some type of testing.

Most people probably feel the driver's test wastes a person's time in long lines waiting for a test that is really unnecessary. But if most of the people on the road are such safe and competent drivers, why are there so many auto accidents? And why are meter-maids and highway patrolmen able to make a living by giving parking and traffic violations?

Convenience and reducing government spending are good motives for the creation of new programs. But when convenience sacrifices the safety of so many people, a new solution should be considered.

Students plagued by financial burdens, don't need extra $10 fee at graduation

by Greg Miles
Staff Writer

There are many, many students who do not know that when they graduate from SJSU they will have to pay a $10 fee in order to receive their diploma.

According to the people who deal with this matter, the money is used for many purposes. The money mainly goes toward the expense of the diploma. The number one element of expense is the diploma holder, which is the frame the diploma sits in when put on the family shelf.

Other expenses that are related to the cost, according to Clyde Brewer of Admissions and Records are: the cost of the diploma itself, the certificate, the postage to mail the diplomas and the protective mailing package the post office uses when mailing them.

Part of the money goes toward the rental of chairs that are put up in the stadium, and part of it goes to the hiring of students to set up for graduation, Brewer said. However, he was unable to give a complete breakdown at this time.

I can't vouch for the rest of the students on campus, but I think there shouldn't be a fee charged to graduate. If the administration is going to charge a fee to graduate, it should find somewhere else to add in the fee, like with registration fees or some other expense the students has to pay to get into the university.

To most students, it's already difficult to come up with the money it takes to pay fees each year they attend the university.

But it doesn't end at that point. Not only do students have to pay fees to get their classes, they have to pay for such things as books, pencils, pens, paper and other things needed in each class they attend.

The $10 fee may not seem like very much to some students, but to others, it may seem rather expensive because they figure they have already paid out enough to the university to attend the school.

First, the students have to pay to get in the university to get their education, then they have to turn around and pay to get out of the university with that education. It just doesn't make sense.

What makes it all so disturbing is the fact that after students pay the $10 fee, they have to turn right around and pay for other things they need at graduation such as caps and gowns and pictures that are taken during the ceremonies.

So, every way the students turn to get away from the costs of attending a university, they get hit with more expenses.

Half the students at the university have limited living expenses due to the fact they can't work because of limited time. If they do work, most of their money goes to such expenses as food, rent and other odd and unexpected expenses that go with living away from home.

So, most students figure that since they have paid out so much money to attend the university, surely if they have earned enough credits to graduate, they should be able to do so without a charge to them.

What do you think?

Question: Which presidential candidate are you voting for in November?

(Asked Tuesday at the Student Union and Business Tower)

"I really don't have a choice for the presidential candidate. I know that is coping out, but that's the way I feel about it. I feel really bad about the nominees, and if I don't vote, I don't like to complain about who is elected."

Tessa Wahle
Human Performance, senior

"I feel that Reagan is my presidential choice. I really just trust his past. I'm tired of Carter and I'm ready for a change."

Steven Wittmer
Industrial Arts, senior

"I'm voting for Carter, primarily because of his involvement on the moratorium of whales. I am not a person that is interested in the politics of business. I look at legislatures for what they can do for animals. Animals need concern right now more than people. I am not saying people don't need legislature, but I think we need more humane laws right now for animals."

Gail Lewis
Nursing, graduate student

"I really don't have a presidential candidate, but if I had to choose someone, it would be Barry Commoner, Director of Urban Development in New York City. What this country is primarily missing right now is urban development. We need to develop our country."

Rob Corder
Art, graduate student

"Right now, it would be Carter because he is probably the only one who would have a chance to keep this country out of war and stabilize it in some way. Reagan is going to divide the country into every race and the people are going to feel that they have been cheated in some way. Anderson does not have any power in Congress. Carter is just about the only choice we've got."

Grading policy 'insulting'

Editor:

As a business student, I am appalled at Edward Laurie's attitude toward the new grading policy directed at the School of Business. For him to stand behind this document, which violates academic freedom of students and shows a lack of administrative regard toward faculty, proves that he is lacking as an educator.

The School of Business executive committee has attempted to correct their "so-called" grade inflation at the expense of insulting the students and the business faculty. It seems that they have neglected the idea of solving their problem through the various individual faculty members who they feel are giving away free "A's". If this is the only course of action the executive committee has, then maybe it's time for a new business executive committee.

Dr. Laurie accused the Associated Students of being political on this issue when the only thing they did was to bring this matter out into the open. If what the Associated Students did was wrong, then it was a drop in the bucket compared to the actions of Dr. Laurie and his cohorts.

The business faculty as a whole are fine professors and fair graders, and I hope they do not take the grading policy seriously. With all the uproar that is happening on this matter, hopefully the business hierarchy will reconsider their erroneous decision and look more into the problem before handing down a solution.

'Suicide' to demilitarize

Editor:

If John Minnis ("Draft registration a mistake; prelude to war") meant drafts cause war, he's really coming off the wall.

America is in for it. World War III has been going on since World War II ended. Demilitarization in the '80s is suicide. Even if we (especially if we) never defend another country's freedom, we will eventually have to defend ourselves - militarily. There is no choice - we're going to have to defend somebody. The less ready we are when attacked, the more we'll suffer and lose while building the needed strength.

Drafts don't always prevent war, but they never cause them.

Credit ruined if phone unpaid

Editor:

Recently, there has been a lot of talk about the phone company's high installation/connection fee for dorm phones. A group of students is asking dorm residents not to pay these fees, to demonstrate their anger with the charge.

I agree that $31.50 is too much to pay for connection, but we all signed an agreement to get a phone connected knowing that the charge would be $31.50 to $40.

That sounds a lot like a contract to me. Some have suggested that the phone company could not attempt to collect so many delinquent accounts. Not so. Believe me, they can and do. They'll just send the bill to a collection agency, who, after a period of time, sends it to the credit bureau, who in turn marks you with bad credit. That means no car loans, no VISA card, no nothing.

I feel that the way to go about this is through consumer protection services, such as television stations, newspapers, the Consumer Protection Agency, etc. Don't ruin your credit for years to come. Pay your bill.

Intellectuals mistreat religion

Editor:

What's with Kathleen Fritz - do English majors really read the letters to which they respond?

Jeff Barnes did not object to our right to "question or attack religion" as near as I can tell. Nor did he condemn Chess as a person. Quite the contrary, he called him a "very brilliant instructor."

Jeff's objection was with the unobjective treatment of religion in the hands of many intellectuals. And he objected to the misuse of art for the sole purpose of illustrating immoral behavior. Physically and psychologically, humans are constructed to experience sex in a two-partner heterosexual relationship. The obvious physical purpose is to produce children. The psychological (emotional) purpose is not always so obvious. Deviations from this create family strife. In fact, deviations from this destroy families.

To answer your question, Jeff, I, too, oppose spiritual murder.

Now I have a question for you. Is the Art Department subsidized by PussycatTheaters?

• The Daily encourages reader comments regarding editorials, opinions and news stories.

Releases

• Releases should be submitted as early as possible to the City Editor at the Spartan Daily Office or by mail. The sooner the release is received, the better coverage the topic may receive.

• All releases should include a telephone number that can be called in case further information is needed.

• All other releases of lesser importance can be left in the Spartan Daily box located in Journalism East, room 208.

Mexican cantina to emerge in January

Completion of Pub renovation put off

by Judy Larson

Contractors began demolishing the interior of the Spartan Pub yesterday morning.

"The floors, wall coverings and old fixtures, such as outlets, have to be ripped out" before reconstruction and remodeling work can begin, John Schulze said.

Ed Zant, manager of Spartan Shops, said he still hopes the Pub will be completed and open for business when students return from Thanksgiving holiday.

However, "It probably won't be done until the first of January," said Schulze, a partner of Gearhart and Spivey Construction Company.

"We did sign a three-month contract and there have been a few delays in starting," Schulze said.

The $152,000 remodeling contract was awarded to Gearhart and Spivey last week.

The total cost of remodeling the Pub, including equipment purchased by Spartan Shops, is $240,000, Zant said.

The Pub will be remodeled in a Mexican cantina style. Installation of a full bar, a full-size pizza oven and an integrated ceiling will add to the atmosphere, Zant said.

Materials for the project will be unloaded from trucks parked on the sidewalk next to the Pub. At other times, the contractors will probably utilize parking on Seventh Street, Schulze said.

Zant does not anticipate that construction will interfere with business in the bakery. The Pub operates in the bakery after 4 p.m. Contractors will use a fire exit to come and go, Zant added.

"We hope the noise will be kept to a minimum," Zant said. "It's not major construction like the library."

"We won't be driving pylons or anything," he added.

Student Services is expected to be the one most bothered by the noise, Zant said.

Student Services will be warned ahead of time which days will be noisy, Zant said.

Estimation of the exact completion date is difficult, both Zant and Schulze said.

"We always anticipate some delays," Schulze said.

Bike shop reopens; new manager hired

by Nancy Young

With a new manager, two mechanics and a $400 surplus to invest in parts and equipment, the A.S. Bike Shop opened for business Monday.

Mike Gudjohnsen, an economics senior, was chosen from 10 applicants for the position of A.S. Bike Shop manager.

According to Jean Lenart, A.S. business manager, advertisements were placed on billboards at various locations on the campus in late August. However, applicant response was slow.

"We only began getting applicant response recently," Lenart said. "The new manager had to meet the qualifications of a bike manager and a mechanic."

According to A.S. President Mike Medina, the primary consideration in selecting a manager was finding someone who could repair bicycles and do invoices.

In the past, the A.S. paid mechanics and managers a salary slightly above minimum wage, which is $3.10 an hour. The

A.S. recently raised the pay to more than $4 per hour, depending on experience, in an effort to employ an experienced manager and mechanics.

"The A.S. was paying a little more than minimum wage and expected a lot of work," Medina said.

The A.S. looked into the possibility of relocating the Bike Shop from the upper level of the Student Union, where it's presently lodged between the A.S. Council Chambers and the Pacheco Room, to the lower level, where Earth Toys was located and expanding the facilities.

"The move is not feasible right now," Medina said. "We would have to pay the Student Union $170 a month for rent. If it's going to move, it's got to get going first."

"We really need more floor space," Gudjohnsen said. "If we had more space, we would look into the possibility of selling bicycles. Even if the supplier would give us bicycles on credit, we have no room to sell them."

"I'm 100 percent for moving," he added. "No one knows where we are."

Success of the Bike Shop is also hindered by the location because students must take an elevator to the upper level, walk through the Student Union with their bicycles and search for the shop.

According to Gudjohnsen, part of the $400 surplus will be allocated toward publicity through flyers and radio and newspaper advertisements.

"We'll eventually get people in here," he said. "We want to help cyclists and develop a respectability that the Bike Shop lost last year."

Previously, the A.S. Bike Shop had experienced difficulty obtaining parts from local bicycle distributors. The shop generally has lower prices than repair shops within a 10-mile radius of the campus, and in some cases offers one-day service.

According to Medina, the competitive pricing caused local distributors to boycott selling parts to the A.S. Bike Shop.

"We'll find other ways to get the parts," Gud-johnsen said. "Not all of the distributors cut off their supplies to us."

"We may be limited by supplies, space and money," he continued, "but the staff is not limited with enthusiasm."

The Spartan Gardens Recycling Center, on 7th and Humboldt streets, needs trash.

The center collects glass, newspapers, aluminum, tin, scrap metal, cardboard and even car oil.

A.S. board opposes new 'curve' grading

by Stephen D. Stroth

The Associated Students board of directors condemned the newly imposed "curve" for grading business classes and approved the allocation of $3,088 to the Pan African Student Union during its Wednesday meeting.

A resolution submitted by Jim Rowen, director of academic affairs, was approved by the board despite some opposition from Bob Fudenna, director of community affairs.

The resolution called for A.S. to oppose attempts "by anyone within the university administration to ultimately establish the grading policy of any instructor."

Fudenna said that the new policy would make the standards of the School of Business higher. "There's nothing wrong with high standards," he said.

The School of Business recently adopted a "curve" grading guideline to combat "grade inflation," the issuance of too many good grades by instructors.

In a memo to instructors stating the new guidelines, Edward Laurie, associate dean of the School of Business, said,

"If a substantial number of people in the class achieve the 'A' level, the standards have clearly been set too low."

"Imposing restrictions on teachers is not going to enhance the student's learning," board member Bill Santi said.

"I hope they (School of Business) realize what a precedent it is for the administration to tell instructors what grades to give and how many students to flunk," Rowen said.

"A great majority of the students enrolled here are business students," Rowen said. "A lot of them are taking their field quite seriously and are performing better than their predecessors."

"I think it would help San Jose State," Fudenna said. "Without it, we tend to get mediocrity" in the business program.

"What we wish to prevent is some mockery of student performance - disasters like 60 percent A's and B's," Laurie said earlier.

In addition to the resolution, the board approved a request by the Pan African Students Union for $3,088.

The request must be signed and approved by SJSU President Gail Fullerton before the allocation becomes final.

Daryl Poe, PASU president, said the group was seeking funds from A.S. for films, dances and seminars that would enhance "the understanding of black people in America."

The seminar topics will include a session on women, scheduled for the first week in November, the role of the African student and a three-day seminar on Africa.

"Anyone can come," PASU secretary Denise Harrison said, "but our main focus is the African student."

Harrison said that the PASU works indirectly with the All African People's Revolutionary Party and will probably have AAPRP representative Bob Brown speak during one of the seminars.

Brown was a follower of Malcolm X in the '60s and has been a frequent speaker at SJSU.

The board warned the PASU that all the sponsored activities "must be educational and informative and not political or religious."

Santi, who is responsible for seeing that sponsored groups spend their money in accordance to A.S. rules, pledged adherence to those rules in the board's warning to PASU.

Don't let repair shops drive you around

Faulty automobile repairs can be avoided

by Joe Aseo

Your car needs repairs. You do not know if the problem is the frayed fanbelt, the cracked heater hose or the needed oil change that was neglected. You take the car to the local mechanic. After paying $50 for three hours in the shop, the car still needs repairs. Join the crowd.

Last year, the Bureau of Automotive Repair handled over 24,000 consumer complaints about rattles that weren't repaired, squeals that weren't squelched and other assorted auto ailments that weren't fixed by the more than 30,000 auto dealers, corner garages and specialty shops that diagnose and repair passenger vehicles, according to Joseph Burch, bureau spokesman.

The consumer is not powerless against repair shops.

The consumer does have basic rights by law that the dealer, garage or specialty shop, must respect.

The repair shop must give the consumer a written estimate of the repair work to be done and must get the consumer's

The repair shop must be registered with the Bureau of Automotive Repair and display a sign listing the consumer's rights and the bureau's toll-free telephone number, (800) 952-5210, to handle complaints.

repairs. With a few referrals from friends, the consumer should call the Better Business Bureau at 298-5880 to see if the bureau has received any complaints about these shops and if those complaints were resolved.

Once the consumer has a list of reputable dealers, he can get estimates for the needed repairs. If the consumer visits the shops (a good idea for the first estimate) he should ask some questions:

- Is the repair shop clean and orderly? A dirty shop with tools strewn about may have the best mechanics in the business, but generally, an orderly shop indicates a shop cares about its work, according to Burch.

- Is the equipment being used? A $5,000 oscilloscope is not benefitting the consumer if it sits in the corner while the mechanic tunes a car by ear.

- Is there evidence that the mechanics are qualified to work on the automobile? Look for certificates from the manufacturer of the automobile stating the mechanic has received training for that automobile, or from national organizations such as the National Institute for visit or call individual shops for estimates. He should understand the specific repairs that are included in the estimate, ask any questions on anything that is unclear, and ask for a written guarantee for the repairs done and understand what the guarantee covers.

The consumer can learn to perform many repairs himself. Simple jobs, such as changing the heater hoses, fan belts, and radiator hoses every two years can lengthen the car's life, according to Burch.

Leisure Services offers auto repair classes geared for the consumer to learn as De Anza College, and adult education programs, also offer consumer auto repair classes.

Anyone interested in learning how to repair their car can call Leisure Services (277-2971), De Anza College (996-5567), or Metropolitan Adult Education (998-6350) for further information.

Elway, Erickson expecting the unexpected

Spartans open league play tomorrow night

by Jerry McDonald

If one is to believe Fresno State football coach Jim Sweeney, the Spartans should have themselves an easy win in their opening Pacific Coast Athletic Association game Saturday night at Spartan Stadium.

"I'd say it would take a shot gun and a couple of snipers," was what Sweeney replied when asked what it would take to beat the Spartans in the 7:30 p.m. homecoming game.

Spartan head coach Jack Elway and offensive coordinator Dennis Erickson aren't buying it, however. And they should know.

Elway served as an assistant under Sweeney at Washington State from 1972 to 1975 and Erickson played quarterback for him at Montana State in the late 1960s and assisted under him at Fresno State.

They are expecting the unexpected.

"I'm sure they'll do some different things. He (Sweeney) always does," Elway said. "They are coming off a big win and I'm sure they're really excited about the game."

The Bulldogs captured their second win of the season, a 31-25 win over Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo. They have lost three times including a 39-25 PCAA game Spartan tailback Gerald Willhite runs for some of the 138 yards he gained on 28 carries in last Saturday's 35-21 loss to Stanford. Willhite also scored three touchdowns in the game and was named the PCAA Offensive Player of the Week for his efforts.

against Fullerton State. SJSU is 2-2.

"Down the road, Jim (Sweeney) will really help their program," Erickson said. "He'll get them back to tough, disciplined football."

The Bulldogs won the PCAA title in 1977 under Sweeney, who then left for assistant coaching jobs with the Oakland Raiders in 1978 and the St. Louis Cardinals in 1979. "It's great to be back in college football. I love it," Sweeney said.

Sweeney admits he misjudged the ability of his team at the beginning of the season.

"It was my mistake early that we projected ourselves better than we were," Sweeney said. "Since then, we re-evaluated our team and on a scale of excellent, very good, and good, I'd say our improvement has been very good."

Despite Sweeney's apparent downplay of his team's ability, their defense has Spartan coaches concerned.

"They play a different kind of defense than we have seen before," Erickson said. "They use an eight-man front with three backs and do a lot of stunting and blitzing."

Because of this, they play a lot of man-to-man coverage in the secondary and this can make them susceptible to the big play," he continued. "They also will have to adjust to what we do."

A plus for the Bulldogs is that although they will have to play some man-to-man coverage in the secondary, they have some cornerbacks that can do the job in brothers Anthony and Tim Washington, both excellent in one-on-one coverage. Anthony was All-

Pacific 10 at California before transferring to his home town.

The Bulldog offense has been inconsistent most of the year, having its moments both running and passing, but not in the same game.

"We run the same offense as the St. Louis Cardinals, and try to show a mix of both running and passing," Sweeney said. "We are trying to develop a better balance of the two, but haven't been able to yet. That is something only the greatest teams can do."

The Bulldogs pro-set features two players recruited by Erickson when he was Sweeney's assistant at Fresno State, quarterback Sergio Toscano and fullback Ted Torosian.

"He's mobile, smart and tough. He can scramble some and is very competitive," Erickson said of Toscano.

Of Torosian, Erickson said, "He's their best player; he can run, block and catch passes."

Spartan defensive coordinator Lon Troxel expressed concern with Bulldog tight end Scott Scambray.

"In terms of catching the ball, he's the best we have faced this year," Troxel said. "He hurt us last year."

Sweeney wasn't sure how the loss of quarterback Steve Clarkson would affect the Spartans.

"That's unknown, because from all the reports we have on Scott Ruiz, he can do the same things," Sweeney said. "He's a tough kid, and can throw long and short. And Gerald Willhite is a super back and a super kid. In fact, I tried to recruit him to come here."

The game will be the Spartans' first at home since their Sept. 6 28-14 win over Santa Clara.

An added attraction to the game for the fans will be the appearance of SJSU alumnus and current professional cheerleader "Krazy George" Henderson, who makes a living agitating crowds with his eccentric behavior.

SJSU beats Fresno, faces 4-7 Cardinals

by Joe Aseo

The SJSU soccer team goes into tomorrow's game with Stanford looking for its fourth straight win. The Spartans, who defeated the Fresno State Bulldogs 3-0 Wednesday night in Fresno, play the Cardinals at Harry Malone field at 1 p.m.

The win was the Spartans eighth against three losses, and gives SJSU a 2-0 Pacific Soccer Conference record. The Bulldogs drop to 6-3 and are winless in conference play.

The Cardinals are 4-7 for the season, but their performance belies their record as Stanford coach Nelson Lodge had his team on a grueling East Coast road trip where they lost to soccer powers Brown, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Yale. They sport a 1-1 conference record with a win over University of the Pacific 1-0, and a loss to University of San Francisco 5-0.

The Spartans crushed the Tigers 10-0 on Oct. 1.

Stanford features a twin-pronged scoring attack with midfielder Willie Giaceli, who led the team in scoring last season with 20 goals, and forward Ted Rafalovich who led the nation in scoring as a freshman in 1978 with 28 goals. Rafalovich missed much of the 1979 season with a knee injury and only managed to score nine goals.

Rafalovich and Giaceli have four and six goals respectively so far this season.

The Spartans match Stanford's scoring tandem with the conference's top two scorers - forwards Giulio Bernardi and Sergio Cardoso. Cardoso leads the conference in scoring with 15 goals, and Bernardi is right behind him with 11.

Wednesday night's game against the Bulldogs serves as an example of the Spartans' scoring prowess as Cardoso fired two penalty kicks that combined with Bernardi's header off a pass by Simon Chafer to give the edge against a team that SJSU coach Julie Menendez said "was sky high for us."

"This is the best win we've had this season as we played well against a team that was ready for us," Menendez said.

The Spartans have played flat in the past and lost games to soccer powers as Fullerton State and San Diego State, both ranked in the 10 top teams on the West Coast. SJSU's wins against ranked teams were Sunday's win against sixth-ranked University of Southern California and a close 1-0 win over Santa Clara. SJSU is currently ranked seventh on the coast.

SJSU sports summary

Cross country

by Greg Miles

The SJSU cross country team will run against some of the best quality runners it will face all year, including many world class runners, when the team travels to Palo Alto to run in the Stanford Invitational tomorrow.

The meet will be held at the Stanford golf course. It will begin at 10 a.m., and start at the second tee on the course. The distance will be 10,000 meters.

The Spartans' mission is to do well against other teams in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, head coach Marshall Clark said. "Right now, UC-Irvine looks like the best team in the conference."

Clark believes his runners are healthy, but in this meet, "We are up to our necks in competition," he said. Clark said he is hoping his runners won't get burned during the outset of the meet, because it may be hard to get a position, due to the large number of runners.

"I would like to see Dan (Harvey) do well," Clark said. "How Dan does is a big factor."

"It's a big challenge to him, because it gives him an idea of how he will do in his efforts to make the NCAA championships," Clark added.

Clark said there is one advantage for running on this course, and that is, the team will be running on the course again in the PCAA Championships, on Nov. 15. This will give the team an idea of what to expect next time.

Featured in the field will be such teams as UCLA, which is considered the favorite by Clark. UCLA features an outstanding runner in Steve Ortiz.

Also present will be Nevada-Reno, which features the Columbian runners, Stanford, with runners Rod Berry, and Fresno State, led by Tim Holmes.

Poloists face tough competition

by Jim Wolfe

Tonight may not prove to be an easy Friday night out of town for the SJSU water polo team when it takes on one of the best water polo teams in the nation.

The SJSU water polo team is scheduled to travel to play UC-Irvine tonight at 7 p.m., Long Beach State tomorrow at 11 a.m. and come back home to play UC-San Diego at Independence pool Sunday at 3 p.m.

Spartan coach Mike MacNaMa said he expects to win only one game out of the three - UC-San Diego.

UC-Irvine is the No. 1 water polo team in the nation, as ranked by the coaches, according to MacNaMa.

SJSU's team won three out of four games last week to place second in the small colleges division at the Stanford Invitational.

The SJSU team's record stands at 5-6 for the season.

The UC-Irvine team is the strongest team Coach Ed Newland has had in 15 years of coaching at Irvine.

UC-Irvine has raced off to one of its best starts in a season ever with its record at 7-0-1.

The winning start duplicates its beginning in 1970 when it won the conference championships.

UC-Irvine is coming off a successful round of play last weekend when it won its own tournament, the UC-Irvine Invitational, with six straight wins.

During the competition in the tourney, the Irvine poloists beat their rival for the No. 1 ranking, Stanford, 7-3.

UC-San Diego lost to UC-Irvine last weekend, 15-9.

Long Beach State's record this season is 7-4.

UC-San Diego is 6-3 so far this season.

Volleyballers stumble by USF, host Cards

by Joan Casserly
Associate Sports Editor

It wasn't so much that the SJSU women's volleyball team was worthy of a win, it was just that the University of San Francisco Dons deserved to lose.

The Lady Spartans were given three games by the hapless Dons Wednesday night in Spartan Gym, 15-9, 15-13, 15-5.

If SJSU intends to stand a chance against the No. 20 ranked Stanford team, they will have to drastically improve their play. The Lady Spartans host the Cardinals tonight at 8 in Spartan Gym.

The Cardinals are 15-5 on the season, while SJSU is 6-14-1 over all and 1-0 in league competition.

Earlier this season, Stanford captured three straight from the Lady Spartans by scores of 15-5, 15-10, 15-8 in the Berkeley Invitational.

However, Cardinal coach Fred Sturm stated, "I believe San Jose is definitely capable of beating us."

"I expect San Jose to play real well," Sturm said, adding that if SJSU has a good night, "it could be a very, very tough match."

Sturm said that Stanford's major disadvantage is its inexperience. All but three of the Cardinals' 15-player team are either freshmen or

Sturm said that another asset for the Stanford team is its depth. "I have 12 players that I am confident to put in at any time."

"We really work together as a unit," he added.

But teamwork was not evident at the USF-SJSU game. The Dons' passing could be charitably described as erratic, their service inconsistent, and solid spikes few and far between.

Nevertheless, SJSU did not breeze to what should have been an easy victory over a team which went 0-12 in conference play last season.

The Lady Spartans captured game one, 15-9, aided by the serves of Joyce Sprout and Rene Fitzgerald.

In the second game, USF held a 12-8 lead before their inability to return serves cropped up once again, and SJSU went on to win, 15-13.

Down two games to none, the USF players became tentative about going for loose balls, letting easy shots drop to the floor, and continuing their bad bumps. The Lady Spartans won the game 15-5.

"Our passing was too strong (bumps were like line drives, not high arching shots which are easier to set up) which forced the setters into going to the outside," SJSU coach Marti Brugler noted.

"The one consolation is that the blocking was good, a lot better than the rest of the game," she said.

Brugler also said that the team's passing was very bad and the setting was inconsistent.

"We didn't play smart defensively," she said. "The players were reaching into each other's areas."

Brugler described tonight's opponent, Stanford, as a "scrappy team."

When asked if SJSU can defeat the Cardinals, Brugler replied, "We can beat them. We go into each game thinking we will win."

"If the rest of our game is up to par, I think our block can take care of Stanford," Brugler said.

"We didn't play that well when we lost to them," she said, referring to the team's performance against the Cardinals' in the Berkeley Invitational.

"We passed well against Fresno, so we know we can do it. We just have to prepare ourselves better," Brugler commented.

Attack victims subdued; no charges against youths

Mimosa's Cafe, 484 E. San Carlos St., to get additional help the minute the fight broke out.

Canh Le, owner of Mimosa's, went outside to assist, and said he saw a Chicano girl "kicking one of the girls in the head and back" in the middle of the street.

Tony Kowalishen, a freshman dorm student recruited to help, said the first thing he did was call the police. He then followed the others down the street to help.

By that time, the student who had sought help had his shirt torn off by three Chicano females.

Kowalishen said that when the student tried leaving the area, "A girl broke a bottle and threatened everyone."

Later, he said, a police officer advised the students to

"just hit the girls."
"I couldn't believe that," he said. "From now on, we're going down there (7-11) aware."

John Saviano, another freshman resident who helped out, said he likes SJSU but that "As soon as you get off campus, it's a different zone."

"This just makes you want to transfer to another school," Saviano said.

Sgt. Dave Bartholomew, who works under the juvenile division of the San Jose Police Department, said no further action can be taken because none of the victims came forward with a formal complaint after the incident.

The victims also failed to report the incident to University Police.

New ad format wanted by A.S.

Green also complained that none of the executives worked with him on the ads in an effective manner.

"Jim (Director of Academic Affairs Jim Rowen) was the only one working with me effectively," Green said.

Green said that too often ads that were to run in the Weekly were coming in at the last minute and the executives "were making decisions over my head" about advertising format.

"Eric Green, as director of communications, has the last word (on advertising) unless he would like to delegate the authority to someone else," Fil said.

The executives wanted to use a format "that hasn't been used before," according to Fil.

According to Weekly Editor Scott Shifrel, he had advised the A.S. to "do something a little more exciting" with its advertisement.

Green said that a key incident in his decision to resign was a note that he received from Fil that "told me to buy an ad in some fraternity booklet."

"He had already sold the ad and was telling me to pay for it," Green added.

"When they start telling me what to do with my budget," Green said, "that's when I had to quit."

"I didn't tell him, I asked him," Fil said. "It was a $40 full-page ad in a newsletter for Sigma Chi (fraternity) for Derby Days (a Homecoming activity sponsored by the fraternity)."

Fil also said that the A.S. will now incorporate a "modular display method that breaks advertising down into three areas," making it more attractive than the current format.

Fil said that the A.S. hopes the new format will generate more student interest in the A.S.

Green, after his resignation, applied for the director of student services vacancy created by Wangeman's resignation.

Disabled students to benefit from new equipment

The Disabled Services program recently received new equipment to aid disabled students various needs.

This equipment includes: two closed circuit TV enlargers, one braille typewriter, a motor-driven wheelchair, a specially designed drafting table and two phonic ears, which provide classroom communications for the hard of hearing.

There is also a new TTY telephone service for the deaf. The TTY service has a typewriter to type in a message which is transferred to the other end.

Mary Rogers, disabled services coordinator, is pleased with this new equipment. "We pretty well have all the equipment that is needed by a disabled student," Rogers said. "This office serves permanently and temporarily disabled students."

In the spring semester, Rogers was successful in acquiring five new elevators in various buildings on campus. According to Rogers, this only leaves the Physical Education and Recreation Building and the Men's and Women's Gym inaccessible to disabled students.

Rogers doesn't foresee elevators being installed in these buildings this year because there are no funds available. She hopes to acquire these elevators within the next two years.
