Faculty, staff and administration are in "limbo" as the result of a hiring and purchasing freeze issued by Gov. Edmund G. Brown

The freeze, issued last Thursday, is directed toward all state agencies and prohibits the hiring, promotion or transferring of any employee. It also prohibits the lease or purchase of equipment, office supplies and related expense items.

Everything is just absolutely in limbo right now," said Arlene Okerlund, dean of the School of Humanities and Arts.

"We are in the process of hiring faculty," she said, adding that, "this is the most important problem."

Although class schedules are set for next fall and tenured personnel have already been hired, temporary faculty cannot be hired to teach classes, she said. Approximately 20 percent of the school's 211 teaching positions are temporary, according to Okerlund.

"We'll go ahead and process the papers for promotion and hiring to the point of action," said Hobert Burns, SJSU's academic vice president. Burns said he met with the council of deans yesterday to update them on the situation

Papers will be processed to prevent a backlog, according to Burns, who said he expects modification of the freeze to allow hiring and promotion of faculty.

"They'd have to close down the campus" if it were not modified, he said.

Emergency purchases are not permitted by the executive order issuing the freeze, Burns said. If there is an emergency on campus the university's top administrator would have to approve any needed purchases, he said.

The details of the freeze "are still being worked out," according to Boyd Horne, assistant chief of budget planning in the chancellor's office. "This has been done before," Horne said, recalling the freeze last October when Brown ordered a 2 percent cut in state agencies' budgets.

Horne described October's cut as a "soft freeze," compared to last week's "hard freeze." The difference, he said, is that a hard freeze is administered by the state department of finance rather than individual state ag encies

This calls for more rigid enforcement of the order.

Horne said the chancellor's office is negotiating with the department of finance, and he expects that details of the effects of the freeze will be issued in about two weeks. "We have not been given any dollar target," he said, adding that he expects exemptions to be made for systemwide faculty hiring. "Those things that relate to classroom instruction will continue," he said. "The presumption that we're

Two groups denied money A.S. tightens purse strings

By Lenny Bonsall With the general fund at $8,730 shrinking, and requests for money currently exceeding the present budget, the special allocations committee has begun to tighten the A.S. purse strings.

The committee refused Monday to recommend funding for two campus groups, the A.S. Program Board and the SJSU chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers. The groups may still present their requests to the A.S. board of directors today. Problems arose immediately for the Program Board when the group's adviser, Ted Gehrke, submitted a request for $4,174 for a proposed Fountain Blues Festival

"Your group was given $77,000 in the budget this year and close to $11,000 in line item transfers," said Bo Buhisan, director of intercultural affairs. "Now you want more money – I really have a problem with that."

Controller Angela Osborne felt the request was unnecessary. "I think it's a good request, but asking for money from special allocations is my concern," Osborne said. The program board's unused balance of $5,710 in the lively arts account, Osborne said, could cover the blues festival.

"If we had no other programs from this moment until the end of the semester, we would have enough," Gehrke admitted. "Then you would have a board that won't have any more programs.

Committee member Tom Adkisson sided with the program board

"I don't think we should fund the whole thing (the blues festival), but I think we should fund for some of it," Adkisson said. "This would it. benefit all the students and it would be a chance for the A.S. to show some support for something as worthwhile as this."

Despite Adkisson's vote of approval, the committee recom-mended not to fund the board. Osborne welcomed Gehrke to make his request to the board of directors on Wednesday.

The board has the option of overriding the special allocations recommendation and funding the group. The committee Monday also refused to recommend funding the engineers for a trip to Las Vegas. The group needed the money, said ASCE chapter President Jim Heath, to attend an annual convention and cement canoe race sponsored by the national organization.

"The race is usually held in California and we prefer to pay our own way," Heath told the board. "This year it's out of state and paying for it ourselves is out of the question." The money would be used, Heath said, to rent two vans and pay for hotel stay. "We want to get as many people from our organization to attend as possible," Heath told the board. Representation of the SJSU engineering school was important, according to Heath.

"Your argument for school representation is good, but there are several organizations on campus that have annual conventions the members would like to attend.'

Adkisson told Heath. "I just don't see how A.S. can fund you money for this.

The committee agreed, refusing to recommend A.S. funding for the group. Osborne suggested the group also go to the A.S. board of directors on Wednesday for a final vote.

The board was not completely stingy, though. A request for $534 by the Recreational Students Association was approved for recommendation by the committee.

The money, according to RSA spokesman Theresa Lazzari, will be used to present a barbecue and panel discussion to "broaden the students' knowledge of the recreational field." The money will be paid back from the proceeds garnered from the barbecue, Lazzari said.

The committee also recommended funding $250 for a Minority Student Conference April 2 through . The conference, said Director of Ethnic Affairs Dolores Canizales, is 'career oriented to discuss the problems minorities are finding while looking for a job."

The A.S. board of directors will decide the money problems today.

operating on is that any essential activity will continue," he added.

All funds are frozen," said SJSU purchasing officer Jim Hill. "Anything not committed by 5 p.m. Thursday (the day of the order)" cannot be bought, he said.

"The only exception is something endangering health and safety," he said, adding that verbal commitments will be honored, including any phone orders that have been made.

Hill said his office has been receiving calls from departments all over campus inquiring about orders. "The duplicating center is close to being out of chemicals and they need to make graphic plates," he said. "I would anticipate that by the end of this week there will be some modification of the freeze," Hill said. "As it stands now it is not practical." The Science Department's laboratory animals, cated in Duncan Hall, must be fed, he said. The only alternative for the department would be to use University Foundation funds, he said, adding that he is not sure if this could be done. The foundation is a separate legal entity that helps

Academic Senate eliminates foreign language stipulation

By Cindy Maro SJSU students will not have to take a foreign language to graduate as a result of Monday's Academic Senate meeting.

Senators approved a resolution introduced by the Curriculum Committee that noted the importance of studying a foreign language but did not make its study a requirement for graduation.

"It mandates nothing, but it states some philosophy at least." said Ruth Yaffe, curriculum committee chairwoman

While the resolution said college graduates should be familiar with a foreign language and suggested a "desirable level of language proficiency" would be three semesters of study, it maintains that no single California State University campus should require foreign language study for graduation.

Such decisions should be made by the trustees for the system as a whole," the resolution said.

It also asked that officials from SJSU's departments review their programs and attempt to add foregin language study to their requirements "if it is found to be professionally beneficial."

Yaffe said the resolution was "as innocuous as apple pie and motherhood."

professor, said the resolution implied the Senate was incapable of making decisions at the local level. He questioned why SJSU officials could not make curricular decisions that applied to their campus.

The resolution was not written to imply that the Senate cannot make curricular decisions for SJSU, Yaffe said.

"For one university to have very diverse requirements from another (would) perhaps produce problems in counseling for students," Yaffe said. The resolution also promised to support any foreign language requirement if it applied to all CSU campuses.

The statewide Academic Senate has referred the issue to one of its committees, but no decision has been made

Ruth Yaffe

yet, said George Sicular, SJSU's statewide Academic Senate representative.

In an earlier interview, Brett Melendy, dean of undergraduate studies and member of the curriculum committee, explained how the foreign language issue first surfaced.

'Some individuals in the school sent a petition in a couple of years ago asking (that) there be a foreign language requirement," Melendy said.

However, Melendy said the 13-unit foreign language requirement would cause problems in some majors, such as journalism, where there wouldn't be enough room without dropping other requirements

Campus cops aim to recruit hispanics

By Phil LaVelle

University police recruiters accepted the final batch of applications for employment last night in their search for candidates to fill five positions on the understaffed department.

Recruiters contacted a large number of hispanics in their recruitment effort, particularly in the heavily hispanic Salinas Valley. We're trying to reach the hispanic community," said Russ Lunsford, one of the department's recruiters. "We've lost two hispanics within the last month."

The department is trying to fill positions for three patrol officers, one sergeant and one in-

Aptos, Gavilan in Gilroy and Hartnell in Salinas – as part of the recruitment effort. "Down at Salinas we had a good exchange with the hispanic community," Lunsford said.

"Out of between 40 to 50 applications given out, 95 percent were given to minorities, primarily hispanic

"That doesn't mean they're going to write back, but at least they were interested," added

The department won't alter its hiring standards to bring in more minority officers,

Lunsford said.

By noon yesterday, the department had received 145 applications for the officers position, 15 for the job of sergeant and 15 for the investigator position.

This Saturday, candidates will take a written test and also will run a physical agility course at university police headquarters. Those who pass will be assigned an oral interview date.

The oral board for officers is comprised of two university police officers, an SJSU administration official, a university staff member, and an representative from the student com-

Currently, two sergeants and two patrol officers are minorities, Lunsford said. The department is seeking more minority bilinguals to meet the needs of the campus and the surrounding community, he said. "Because we have a large hispanic com-muhity around the campus, we want more bilingual officers," Lunsford said.

The department has been advertising the openings in El Observador, a San Jose-based hispanic weekly newspaper, and in the San Jose Mercury News and Oakland Tribune.

Lunsford and Sgt. Leon Aguirre visited three community colleges last week - Cabrillo in according to Lunsford.

'Hiring is determined by merit," Lunsford said. "We make the effort to reach minorities, then it's up to them. We do everything we can to reach the minority community.

In addition to recruiting on college cam-puses, the department sent recruitment materials to every law enforcement agency in the state, including other campus departments, the California Highway Patrol, every city department and every county sheriff's office, Candidates who pass the oral board will then be given a psychological test. A background check also will be done.

An interview with Chief Earnest G. Quinton and a physical are the final steps in the hiring process, Lunsofrd said.

The tentative hire date for officers is June 1.

The department may end up hiring more than three officer candidates if a patrol officer already on staff is hired for the sergeant or investigator position, he said.

Lunsford said a list of all qualified ap-plicants will be kept by the department for a year as an insurance measure in case more positions become available.

KSJS is wearin' the green

By Holly Taglier St. Patrick's Day has long connoted an infectuous air of celebration, beer drinking, wearing of the green and general hoopla. This year will be no exception at SJSU if radio station KSJS has anything to do about it, according to General Manager Jim McCarthy and Program Director Ryan Urban.

The festivities will begin at 9 a.m. today in front of the bookstore. Disc jockeys will be drawing names and awarding KSJS T-shirts and other surprises to contestants, until 2 p.m., McCarthy said.

Contest entries can be filled in the Bookstore and winners will be announced over the air today, McCarthy said.

Another group of disc jockeys will follow the action inside the Pub starting at 11 a.m.

Although the beer in the Pub will not be green this year as it was last year, Pub Manager Joann Marahrens said that beer will be given away to drinkers lucky enough to find a shamrock on the bottom of their glass. The Pub will also be serving corn beef sandwiches for $1.70 and all pizzas will be discounted throughout the day.

Last year's green beer was just too messy, Marahrens said, but this year's innovation will be green pizza dough.

"We're doing something we've never done before," McCarthy said, "a remote in two loctions."

"I've never heard of it done before on any station," Urban said. "We think it will work out really well.

The broadcast will be from both the Bookstore and the Pub as well as music from the studio.

"There are a lot of logistic problems involved," Urban said. "It takes a lot of coordination. Everything has to be perfect."

Disc jockeys in both locations will be talking to students over the air as they report on the festivities, McCarthy said.

Jockeys Steve Ryan, Jim Mc-Carthy and Bill Kelly will be in the Pub while Russ Call, Bob Helms, Jan Daniels, Gary Peixoto and Victor Rodriguez will be in front of the Bookstore, Urban said. The jockeys will be working in shifts covering the events throughout the morning and afternoon.

"We want people to understand we exist," Ryan said. The program director expressed his disappointment that many students on campus do not realize that SJSU has a radio station.

Urban encourages all students to meet the disc jockeys today at either location while taking part in the festivities.

Urban says that KSJS is unique for a campus station in that it provides a diversity of programs for all students.

Who's in charge?

PCB. Polychlorinated Biphenyl. This chemical has been linked to skin cancer, liver damage and male sterility, which it can cause simply by coming into contact with someone for a brief period.

SJSU has five main transformers on campus which contain as much as 30 gallons apiece of this toxic insulator, and an uncounted number of light fixtures scattered throughout the older buildings on campus which contain the chemical in lesser amounts.

the chemical in lesser amounts. One of the five transformers has already started leaking, but the official attitude of SJSU seems to be one of wait and see; hopefully the transformers will neither leak nor explode before they get around to replacing them. Indeed, when a transformer in Sweeney Hall started leaking PCB's, it seemed to reinforce the administration's policy of benign neglect toward the presence of PCB's on campus.

Since this leak occurred without any significant health hazards for students, their reasoning seems to be that, if another leak does occur, it can be handled in the same leisurely manner.

Instead of looking at this spill as a vindication of their present policy, SJSU officials should see it as a warning of the tragedy that could happen if they continue their present policy of blithely downplaying the possibility of a similar spill elsewhere.

If a PCB leak had to happen, the transformer in Sweeney Hall is where you would want it to occur.

The transformer is located in a locked, airtight room, inaccessible to students. The administration has the additional luxury of being able to wait until the spring break, when almost every student and faculty member will be off campus, before they have to clean this spill up. They may not be as fortunate the next time.

other four transformers, located in an entrance way to the Jour-The naism Building, atop the Health Building, in industrial studies classroom 127, and along the walkway between the Engineering Building and the Spartan Bakery, will have a far greater impact on SJSU if they go bad. None of these transformers is located in an airtight room, isolated from SJSU's population. It won't mean business as usual if they should leak or explode, as it did in Sweeney Hall. Taking the worst case, if the transformer located near the Engineering Building should explode, as many as three campus buildings might have to be shut down, or have access to them severely restricted, while an im-be shift down, or have access to them severely restricted, while an informediate and expensive cleanup took place. If it happened between classes at 11 a.m. Wednesday for example, hundreds would immediately become contaminated. SJSU officials say they have submitted a plan to have the transformers replaced. All they need now is the funding.

But Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has already cut the California State Univesity budget by 7 percent over a two-year period, and is refusing to consider any new taxes, at least until he has completed his bid for the U.S. Senate

SJSU is also likely to come up dry in their search for replacement funds when they approach the CSU Chancellor's Office. The CSU Chancellor's Office has 19 campuses under its jurisdiction.

many with PCB problems far greater than SJSU's. But while the CSU system's reluctance to bail SJSU out of its problem may be understandable, the failure of SJSU's adminstration to act on its own is not.

Officials here are responsible for only one campus, and they have their own operating budget, for which they can set priorities. Even the rationale of limited funds for replacement of these tran-sformers is weak. It's going to cost $2,800, without even repairing the transformer itself, to clean up a small spill that was limited to one enclosed room

How much will it cost if SJSU delays too long and is forced to im-mediately clean up the effects of an exploding transformer that could spray a hallway, classroom or as many as three buildings with the lethal chemical?

The administration should pay now, rather than face the possibility of having students pay later

Replace San Francisco? No way, San Jose

A recently announced candidate for mayor of San Jose has adopted as a centerpiece of his campaign the politician's rhetoric that San Jose must "grow up, not out." How true. The trouble is, it may never happen. San Jose is the kid brother of BayArea cities. Ambitious types in the South Bay will argue that San Jose, given its growth, is a contender with San Francisco for big-city status

There is no comparison. San Jose cannot be compared to San Francisco and emerge the better

"city." Not to say San Jose doesn't have its good points. It does, and in many ways that makes San Jose the better place to live. But in aesthetics, in charm, in vibrance, and in significance of an international scale - San Francisco wins. San Francisco is a city apart. It has been called an island and it is. Surrounded on three sides by water, it is separated from its land link by some very large hills. And the cities that share a border with San Francisco - Daly

City and South San Francisco - are for the most part ugly, crime-ridden little cities that are no competition for San Francisco. So, what San Francisco has from the start in geographical terms, is a separation, a partitioning from all that is ordinary. Nowhere in the United States is there the blending of a beautiful physical landmark -- Kerouac's ''11 mystical hills'' -- and a beautiful urban world.

And San Francisco is one of the great seats of culture in the Western world. Whether as the mecca of poetry on the coast in the '50s or the center of the universe to countless flower children of the '60s, the City has defined the avant-garde. This remains true to this day.

there" in simple things like crime in ways no other city can be. Where else in America would one city of-ficial shoot two other city officials (one of them being the mayor) and blame it all on Twinkies?

San Jose is a city, too, even in areas besides crime.

San Jose has been called, no doubt by some city-inspired public relations firm, the "Hub of the Bay." I assume by "hub" they mean that San Jose is where all that is 'happening" in the bay emanates from. Not quite. San Jose is desperately trying to gain an identity as a major American "city." City officials are fond of pointing out that San Jose, as of the 1980 census, is the 17th largest city in the United States.

San Jose does have all the problems other big cities have, a high crime rate and a (soon-to-be) sagging economy. The trouble with all this is San Jose has yet to face up to the responsibility of being "big time." San Joseans think they can get their little plot of suburban property, fence it in, supply it bi-weekly with trips to the local Safeway, and all will be well.

The suburban flavor of San Jose remains both its greatest identity factor and its greatest roadblock to true big city status. A great city is made of more than just population. San Jose is a city that doesn't know it's a city yet. It may take us years to find out.

But we're trying. Our female dominated city council earned San Jose the title "feminist capital of the world." The medfly sprang from this valley. San Jose got its share of national press. And San Jose has its good points, lousy temperature situation. No thanks. San Jose is much more 'Californian'' in climate.

Geography: True, the City has an incomparable magnificence in this category. But San Jose has its own style of physical beauty. On a clear spring day San Jose is haun-tingly similar to what it once must have been in the days when orchards carpeted the valley floor and freeways were nowhere to be found. Yes, it was once the Garden City.

Proximity: From San Jose you can get to San Francisco or Santa Cruz or Oakland (God knows why you want to go to Oakland) fairly easily by car.

Of course, it's ironic that one of San Jose's better points is that you can get to another, presumably better, place relatively easily.

But the irony is two-fold. What comes up must come down. If you can split easily, then, the logic go you can return easily. And the return is not really a coming down rather, it is a settling-out. San Jose is pretty quiet. It really is. It's a

San Francisco is a city apart. It has been called an island.

which should be brought out. Climate: San Francisco, for all its wealth of physical beauty, suffers the ungodly horror of being next to the Pacific Ocean right where it begins to get real cold. Great luminous masses of incoming fog make for a lovely post card, but a great place to return to and recoup after burning out in another, perhaps livelier place.

All in all, San Jose is not a bad place to live, when taken in context. A better home than San Francisco? I think so. A "city"? Maybe. The "Hub of the Bay"? No way.

Where else would The Tubes be I think not.

San Francisco is even "out

'Personal Best' victim of bias

Editor

My first response to Marianne Croker's review of "Personal Best" was that you needed to send a different critic to view the film.

Would you send an immature, wealthy, white woman to review a film about the emotions and hardships of a poor, black ghetto youth? Would you send a child to review "A Clockwork Orange

I am not in the least bit sur-prised that Ms. Croker didn't share my sense of excitement and intensity upon viewing the film. The title of the article and her first few paragraphs revealed her bias.

Obviously, she could not un-derstand the real theme of the movie, her ideas were colored from the start by the lesbian elements

Was it not revealing of her maturity to find the only highlight of the movie in a chauvinistic, sexist outburst of frustration by the male coach'

The Spartan Daily staff would have done more justice to the film by sending someone who was either a feminist, an athlete, a nonhomophobic or at least a person with a maturity level beyond the fourth grade. "Personal Best" was an excellent film depicting the intensity of athletic competition, and the strong bonds of comradarie and love that develop out of intense, shared ex-periences. Often times the relationships that develop are homosexual, and understandably, for who else can understand the joys and pains of pushing yourself to the limit or "kicking your own ass" except someone who is right there with you?

Perhaps if the positive, intense experiences of life were shared sideby-side with women and men, the issues of homosexuality would be a whole lot less threatening. But, although insinuated by Ms. Croker's article, the love affair was not the main focus of the film.

The greatest accomplishment of this film was to portray female athletes like they have never been shown before, like real athletes. In what other films have you seen the roles of athletes played by real athletes? It's a shame everybody can't enjoy watching the beauty and grace of physical expression through sports.

One other small but significant contribution of the movie was that for once it showed the man in his birthday suit while the woman herself was covered! It sure looks like Ms. Croker missed many of the significant highlights of the film because of her bias.

As Sonia Johnson (former Mormon ex-communicated for supporting the ERA Amendment) warned in her speech last week, "don't be fooled by words because they come from a woman's mouth, for many women are token males.

Fancy steppers practice defense?

Editor:

This afternoon I saw the Air Force ROTC out on the field by the Music Building.

The guys and gals were looking very sharp in their uniforms and were nearly as perfectly precise as any well disciplined group could be with their marching.

It pleased me to see them, as they reminded me that there is a defense establishment in the United States, reputed to be the second best in the world. (Which is pretty good.)

But after I finished walking by there and disappeared into the bowels of the Student Union, I began to wonder how does marching in straight rows and wearing spit shined shoes make better fighter/bomber pilots?

How does this practice improve the air defense of the United States?

A.S. denies funding for blues festival

By Jon Swartz

The A.S. special allocations com-mittee in a 3-1-0 vote recommended to the board of governors Monday that the program board not be given any money for a proposed Fountain Blues Festival.

The program board, represented by its adviser, Ted Gehrke, asked for $4,174, its second such request in a week.

Bill Rolland, program board director, asked for a similar amount from special allocations last Monday, but the com-mittee asked that Rolland return a week later with a more concise request. Rolland was unable to attend Monday's meeting so Gehrke took his place. Angela Osborne, A.S. controller, committee chairwoman, said she thought the festival was a good program but added that she didn't like the idea of funding the show through special allocations. 'If the program board-sponsored events generated income, the program board wouldn't be here," Osborne said. 'Other groups want money and it's not fair for the program board to ask for more money Gehrke argued that to schedule a blues festival without special allocations would require that the event be included in the A.S. budget or the program board take $5,000 out of its budget to be set aside for the program. He said the latter option is a move he didn't think the board would take. "I don't think you want this program, Gehrke said to the committee, in particular Osborne.

'That's not the point," Osborne replied. "The idea is good but the fact of the matter is that the program board had $87,000 in their budget and didn't provide funding for a blues festival.'

Bo Buhisan, intercultural affairs director, agreed with Osborne. "You (addressing Gehrke) should have budgeted for the event and planned ahead," Buhisan said. "You requested $91,000 in your original budget (1981-1982) and eventually got $87,000 through non-reverting funds and special allocationss. Where is all of your money going?" Gehrke said that of the $87,000 the program board received for its budget, less than $40,000 to $45,000 of that was spent on scheduling events.

'The rest of the amount was devoted to travel," Gehrke said. "A large amount of free programs were given. That may have been a mistake on the board's part. Plus, the Glass concert (The Phillip Glass Ensemble, which performed March 4) lost a substantial amount of money ($5,200)."

In the report submitted by Gehrke, Gehrke said, "the boar figures showed that the program board , speciously ask for money.

has spent $15,807 on free shows for the academic year and $51,704 on income generating events. Salaries, operating costs, travel and telephone expeditures totaled $8,382. Total costs: $75,893.

That leaves the program board with $10,880 divided among three categories: the lively arts ($5,710), films ($3,392) and forums ($1,871). Combining these totals with money already spent or committed by the board comes to $86,866.

Gehrke's proposal to the allocations committee requested $4,174.50 plus $1,000 which would come from the program board's lively arts account. The ex-penditures for the Fountain Blues Festival would total $5.174.

Last year the festival cost $5,400 and was a success, according to Gehrke. This prompted committee member Tom Adkisson, the lone dissenter in the vote, to ask Gehrke how much money would be left in the program board's lively arts account and how future programming would be affected if a special allocation was not granted.

Gehrke replied that roughly $560 would remain in the account and events after April 1 would include only Jane Goodall (April 28) and a debate on the ripheral Canal (May 6).

Adkisson, in reference to the blues festival, said, "something should be done to fund this event."

Gehrke was then asked why the blues festival, which took place last year without financial difficulties, was on the verge of extinction.

He said that last April the program board could afford a blues festival then because of the money generated by another event (Ambrosia). The event the program board hoped would generate income, the Philip Glass concert, earned only $1,800 at a cost of $7,000, or a loss of $5,200

Gebrke cited this as another example of the uncertainty of the entertainment business

Jean Lenart of the committee asked Gehrke if the program board couldn't schedule the blues festival by using possible profits from other upcoming events.

Gehrke said the income generating events were scheduled too late to coincide with a late April early May blues festival. He also said the bands would have to be contacted immediately.

Saying it was the first time he was aware of the program board going before special allocations to ask for funds, Gehrke said, "the board isn't here to ever. Yet there is most difference certainly a difference between the Bill Walsh who graduated from SJSU in 1954 and Bill Walsh, circa 1982. There are stark contrasts in the perceptions of the person, if not in the personality itself. In his two-year playing career on SJSU's football team in the early '50s, Walsh's statistics were nondescript.

As an offensive end and a defensive back on the Spartans' '52 and '53 teams, Walsh caught a grand total of four passes for 83 yards (none for touchdowns) and intercepted a single pass, decidedly unenchanting numbers which gave no glimmer of the magic that was to come.

By transforming the 49ers from the perennial toads of the National Football League to the league's reigning princes in just three years, Walsh has firmly established himself as the warlock of his sport.

Such a whirlwind ascension to the pinnacle of a profession could fog some memories, but Walsh has not forgotten that he did not take the sport by storm in his formative days at SJSU friends on and off field at SJSU, remebers of therwise. "Bill was always playing jokes," Matthews said. "We used to go out together quite a bit. We raised a little hell, got into some trouble. A lot of the stuff we did isn't printable. "But he used to always be maintaining an SJSU connection in the upcoming months. "I will be working with San Jose State as an alumnus on various projects," Walsh said.

Besides making financial contributions to SJSU's athletic program, Walsh also will be donating his time in an effort to convince the San Jose community to expand Spartan Stadium.

play practical jokes. For instance, we'd go to the cafe and you would be drinking your coffee and the next minute you would have mustard squirted on your pants. Or he would you to his house and take tell his mother to fill the bathtub because you wanted to take a bath. He kept everybody loose."

After receiving his bachelor's degree in education in 1954, Walsh served a 21-month stint in Army before returning to SJSU in 1956 to pursue his master's degree.

While doing his graduate work, Walsh served as an assistant on Bronzan's coaching staff.

That year as Bronzan's assistant coupled with the previous years as one of his players, had a profound influence on Walsh's influence on coaching philosophy. "I think our minds probably ran a parallel course," Walsh theorized, 'so there was a lot I may have absorbed from Bob Bronzan that others may not have. In my early years of coaching, I could even see I had some of his gestures and mannerisms. I think his teachings were a big part of my approach to the game." Walsh received his degree master's in January, 1958, shortly after completing his thesis.

The master work was entitled, "Flank formation football; stress: defense, a striking irony since Walsh has gained his reputation as an offensive genius.

"I have to chuckle about it now," said the thesis' author. "But at the time, it was an almost gravely important part of my life.

Indeed, the thesis was hardly a laughing matter. It won Walsh con-siderable notoriety and was the catalyst behind his hiring as the University of California's defensive coordinator in 1960 after serving three years as the head football coach at Washington Union High School in Fremont.

In 1963, Walsh moved

returned to Stanford as that school's head football coach, a position he filled until 1979 when he was selected as the 49ers' new head coach and general manager.

Filling both of those capacities has taken its toll on the 50-year-old Walsh, causing him to con-template retiring from at least his coaching duties. "It won't be this year," Walsh said, "but I think at some point soon, I may step away from it simply because there is an at-trition rate to this type of thing. There is the stress and the wear and tear and you don't know how it af-fects your health. "You just wonder what it might be like to have a normal year like everyone else, not spending the latter half of your year completely embroiled in your work with virtually nothing else that crosses your mind," added Walsh, who said he had only one day off (Christmas) from July 10 last year to the day of the Super Bowl (Jan. 24) this year while working an average of 65 to 70 hours per week per week.

"So, I would sort of look for some relief at some point," Walsh said. "But I expect that I'll remain in athletics either as the general manager of the 49ers or in television commentary."

Since he committed to returning as the 49ers' head coach this year, Walsh is working diligently to further improve the Super Bowl champions' already pleasurable plight. Because it is the team's most noticeably weak position, Walsh said the 49ers may choose as many as three running backs in the early rounds of the NFL's collegiate draft at the end of next month.

He said he has his eye on five backs in particular: USC's Marcus Allen, Stanford's Darrin Nelson, Baylor University's Walter sity of Michigan's Butch Wolfolk and SJSU's Gerald Willhite.

"I think the stadium should be enlarged," Walsh stated. "San Jose is going to have to make a step in that direction. There isn't any question that facility means much to people's attitudes. If you live in a squalor, you feel inadequate. "You can relate the San Jose State community

Mere redemption of last Thursday's tie won't be enough for the UC Berkeley tennis team when it takes the court against SJSU today. A clean sweep should be sufficient, thank you.

'I'm sure they'd (Cal) want to come down here and beat us 9-0," said Spartan coach John Hubbell. "They're going to bring their best players down here."

Cal's No. 2 and No. 4 players, Mark Wooldridge and Harold Hecht both sat out last Thursday's match, Wooldridge because of a twisted ankle and Hecht with a cold. Hubbell said both players should be healthy for today's 2 p.m. match at the South Campus Courts. Wooldridge did play in the doubles so I figure he'll be healthy," Hubbell said.

However, the status of the Spartans' No. 5 player, Glenn Brassington, who has been sidelined with a muscle strain in his right shoulder since last week, is still uncertain.

"I'm going to have to wait and see what the trainer says in the morning," Hubbell said Monday. "I'm playing it by ear.'

With Wooldridge and Hecht back in the lineup, Hubbell said Cal should be solid in both singles and doubles. In the last match, Cal won the first three out of four singles matches before losing to the Spartans' fifth and sixth players, Ken Bryson and Steve LaMar. "Their (Cal's) strength may be in doubles," Hubbell said. "they've been down a couple matches, then swept

Last Thursday, with the match tied at three, Wooldridge and Hecht, who didn't play in the singles, teamed up to down Dave Kuhn and John Saviano 6-1, 6-4, to go ahead 4-3 before darkness ended the match.

Hubbell said if Brassington doesn't play, the Spartans will have to do some player shuffling for the doubles.

With Brassington healthy, Hubbell said he would go with Brett Dickinson, the Spartans' No. 1 singles player, and Brassington for the No. 1 doubles team. Kuhn and Saviano, No. 2 in singles, would be No. 2.

If Brassington stays out, Hubbell may go with the same doubles lineup he used against Cal the first time. Kuhn and Saviano would move up to the first position, while Dickinson and Paul Van Eynde (No. 4 in singles) would compete in the second spot.

LeMar, who normally combines with Van Eynde for the Spartans' third doubles team, would probably play opposite No. 6 Ken Bryson if the trainer's verdict on Brassington is negative.

Although the Bears as a team want to avenge themselves, a few of the individual Spartans would not mind evening the score a bit either. Dickinson, who lost to Cal's No. 1 player, Randy Nixon, in a close 6-4, 6-3 match, will have to play out of his skull to beat Nixon, according to Hubbell.

'Nixon is a very solid, consistent type of player," Hubbell said. "He makes you have to beat him. You have to be on to beat Nixon.

There's no reason why he (Dickinson) can't turn it around," Hubbell added, referring to Dickinson's 6-3, 6-2 win over Nixon in an indoor tournament last season. Dickinson is more of a free-hitting, go-for-broke style of player.

Meanwhile, Saviano will have his hands full with either Wooldridge, if the Bears play him in the second spot, or Doug Stone, who beat Saviano 6-0, 6-2 in their first meeting

"I think he (Saviano) wants to play Stone again," Hubbell said. The coach said although the other Spartan players don't like to lose, Saviano abhors losing any match, even practice matches. "Saviano is probably the (Spartans') most intense competitor," he said. The Bears are not the only ones with redeeming

Students pay $2 per quarter for the center

By Chris Borden A group of 20 SJSU representatives and students traveled to the University of California at Davis Sunday to find out how that campus community feels about the Recreation Center built there.

The center on the UC Davis campus is being used as a model for SJSU's proposed Rec Center. "When it came time to vote on it, very few people were against it," said Tony Palumbo, a UC Davis graduate. "They didn't build it soon enough." The Davis center, opened in September 1977, houses facilities for more than 16 sports, including basketball, volleyball, squash, racquetball and wrestling. The $8.2 million building also features a weight room containing privately donated equipment and an arena with 9,600 seats. The project was passed by Davis students in 1969 when they decided the old Vern Hickey Gym, which is about the same size as SJSU's men's gym, wasn't adequate enough to serve the needs of the 18,000 Davis students.

It is financed by a $12.2 million municipal bond, in addition to donations from local citizens, UC Davis "If every SJSU stud faculty, staff and students. "The students, faculty and staff are really proud of this building," said Alice Hannam, manager of the center. "They try to take care of it."

Students pay $2 per quarter to finance the center and $2.80 for unlimited use of it during the quarter. "Our idea isn't to make money, but rather to bring in people," Hannam said.

The center employs about 50 to 60 students during the year, in such jobs as maintenance, parking and on the campus entertainment council.

"The building is extremely busy," Hannam said. "About 2,000 people a day go through here. Last year, 300.000 used it.

The building is used primarily for informal recreation and intramural sports, according to Hannam. She said sports are delegated to the facility on the basis of a sport's drawing power.

Wrestling is one of those low priority sports, so we don't schedule any major wrestling meets during daytime hours," she said.

Tony Robinson, A.S. president, said he was impressed

"If every SJSU student could see this, they'd want to be a part of it.

Craig Tompkins, an undeclared freshman, thought a Rec Center at SJSU would be a good idea.

'The big area for concerts was nice," he said. "I like the idea of not using the courts for classes.

Jeff Smith, a senior majoring in journalism and English, liked the Davis center, and said SJSU "is crying for something like that.

"I'd still be willing to pay for it so that people in the future would be able to use it," he said. "Being an alumni of the school, it gives you something to be proud of."

Bookstore, KSJS join in promotional event

Irish day brings savings to students

By Lee Sherman

Price reductions and givea way drawings highlight the Spartan Bookstore's "Bit of Blarney" St. Patrick's Day promotion which is being held today in conjunction with KSJS radio.

Its purpose, according to Ron Duval, bookstore manager, is to "give customers a discount, promote KSJS and promote the bookstore, all at the same time."

same time." Friedley Capitality "It's part of our promotional program in the bookstore," said David Friedley, Duval's St. Patrick's Day in one assistant. Friedley was in charge of the committee he said. that planned the event.

Many items will be on sale during the daylong promotion.

"These are big items that most students would be interested in," Friedley said.

The items include clothing reduced in price by 20 percent, Irish gifts at the same discount and Irish books at 10 percent off.

Friedley explained what "Irish" books are. "We chose a line of form, fashion or another," A special drawing will be held and KSJS will said.
