> The fate of the Frances Gulland Children's Center, St. Paul's Methodist Church at Tenth and San Salvador streets, is still up in the air.

> 'We don't know from one year to the next whether will have the center for the following year," said Melba Lyons, director of the center.

> She said last year's eviction notice was the result of two problems. The first dealt with finding an adequate janitorial service, a problem Lyons said is now solved.

The second problem, Lyons said, came about when "the ministers and the church said, 'we feel we have done our share for the children and we would like to get a Center health unit for senior citizens

Ex-student charges sex discrimination; accuses SJSU prof

A former SJSU student has filed a $10,200 claim against the state alleging he was sexually discriminated against while attending SJSU.

Bill Allen, a nursing student who last attended SJSU in Fall 1981, said Ann Doordan, nursing instructor, gave him a no-credit grade in a nursing 184 class because he is a male and a Vietnam veteran.

Doordan was unavailable for comment Thursday.

Allen's attorney, Rob Brockman of San Jose, filed the claim Aug. 16 in anticipation of a civil suit, Brock-

Brockman said the $10,200 claim is for damages plus $200 for a semester's tuition.

But Allen said his civil suit will 'be in the millions" and will name SJSU and possibly instructor Doordman and Fay Bower, former nursing department chairman, as defendants.

Bower, who is now in a similar position at the University of San Francisco, was unavailable for comment Thursday.

Allen said he will sue for millions of dollars because "unless it's for big, large numbers, they're not going to pay attention.

"(But) I'm not just after money," he said. "I'm after my career - my bachelor's degree in nursing.

Allen said Doordan gave him no credit for the class because "she knew she didn't like men and she knew she didn't like vets, especially Vietnam vets. He said he has been a licensed course meant Allen was ejected from the nursing program, causing him loss of salary, according to attorney Brockman.

Allen said he was "drummed out" even though he received "excellent" ratings on other portions of the class taught by other instructors

Brockman said Doordman's 'motivation was partly reverse sex discrimination and partly that he was a Vietnam veteran with extensive experience in military

He produced a signed, copied letter from the man's wife stating that Allen had been caring for him Allen said he is concerned for other SJSU students, as well. "If they can do this to me, they can do this to anyone," he said.

Brockman said Allen was "minute minority" in the nursing program so Doordman "used her authority to have him dumped from the program.

Knife attack leaves man in hospital the "homosexual affair." Anore Wilkerson, 22, was booked for assault with a deadly weapon after the incident in which Tim James was stabbed in the chest. The attack occurred about 10:30 p.m. at 405 4th St., police said.

Police said James was able to alert officers of the attack moments after he was stabbed. Wilkerson was arrested and a knife was found nearby, police said.

Neither was registered at SJSU in the last five years, according to university officials.

Students generally take the writing course within their departments because it will reflect their career writing needs, Galm said. For example, advanced writing in journalism is different from the writing a scientist or a math major would do, Galm explained.

Occasionally it is appropriate for a student to take a writing course in a department other than his own. but Galm stressed prior adviser approval is necessary.

There is only one way for a student to bypass a 100W class-passing the Writing Workshop However waiver examination. those majoring in business and engineering must take the 100W class in their major.

"It's a hard exam and students have to score very well to pass. Galm said. "Students with les a B-plus in writing probably shouldn't take it."

The first time the exam was given, in March 1981, 76 percent of the students taking the test failed By July 1982, the most recent test. the failure rate was 44 percent. Galm credits this to the fact that fewer, but better-qualified students. are taking the exam.

WWWE's are given three times a year -- fall, spring and summer. The next exam will be given Oct. 23 but the deadline to register is Oct. 15, according to Sandy Tocalino, manager of the Testing Office. And there is no late or walk-in registration and no refunds after three days before the test date, Tocalino stressed.

Since the test may be taken only once, it should be taken as soon as possible after 60 units are accumulated, to avoid any delay in graduation.

While writing skills may have been on the wane, Galm said things are improving.

'I think we've turned a corner on this," he said. "Students are taking their writing courses They realize they must write well no matter what field they are in.

Information and registration materials for the WWWe are available at the Testing Office. Administration Building Room 218.

Many departments offer their own upper division class of 100W specifically designed for majors.

Departments which have their own are: Afro-American Studies, Administration of Justice, Art, Administration of Justice, Art, Biology, Business, Chemistry, Communications Studies, Economics, Special Education, English, Engineering, Foreign Language, Geography, Geology Health Professions, History, Human Performance, Journalism Meteorology, Natural Science and Political Science, Recreation and Leisure and Social Science.

Other majors would either take an English 100W or consult with their advisers as to the proper 100V class for their major.

Power out scheduled today at 12

All power to Duncan, MacQuarrie and Sweeney halls will be shut off at noon today so the cables that exploded Monday can be repaired, the President's office announced yesterday.

For safety reasons, classes held after noon MacQuarrie and Sweeney Halls will be canceled. However, classes in Duncan Hall, which has auxiliary power, will meet.

Students wishing to use the Seventh Street parking garage may do so until 11 a.m., said University Police Lieutenant Larry James. The garage will be closed to all incoming traffic after that time, and students are asked to remove their cars from that garage before dark.

Forum encourages reader input

"The Forum Page Is Your Page" is a notice that can be found in this section of the Spartan Daily almost every day. But because we believe that actions speak louder than words we've added more channels through which your views may be expressed: Talkman and "Q and A."

Talkman is the man-on-the-street-type poll that is run along the bottom of this page. It is a random selection of members of the SJSU community. Topics may range from world problems to your favorite joke.

By Steve Fukuda and Janet Gilmore orum Page Editors

'Q and A" is, of course, a question-and-answer sec tion, enabling those with considerable expertise on a given subject to offer their views verbatim on topics of interest. It may be a professor, an adminstrator or anyone with snowledge of an area that affects you, the reader

Letters to the editor are still encouraged and accepted. While there is no guarantee that your letter will run, or that it will run in its complete form (we edit for ibel and space) your compliments, criticisms or insights are welcomed.

Guest Opinion pieces are also encouraged. If there is some view you have or topic you'd like to discuss at ength, an opinion piece is your medium. Length and subject matter, basically differentiate this from a letter to he editor

Letters to the editor are usually short and may be a reply to something you've read in the Daily or just something you'd like to get off your chest.

All the procedures mentioned involve you expressing our opinion or in writing on your page, section two of the Spartan Daily.

And because it is your page, it is the section of the paper where our viewpoints and analysis of events and issues are offered to you. There are so many things going on in the news that even the most compulsive reader may find the numerous, sometimes conflicting, news stories difficult to decipher. That's where editorials and opinion

Through editorials we offer our views on given issues. If you're unsure about how you'll vote on a certain issue, our editorial may give you a different view you may not have thought of before and help you to reach your own conclusion.

Editorials are discussed by the Editorial Board. It is a group of nine editors and three reporters. They meet twice a week, each time producing an editorial that had been discussed, voted on and assigned to one of the board members for writing. Because the board represents the newspaper as a whole, its opinion is that of the paper.

Staff opinion pieces reflect the writer's viewpoint. It is their attempt to explain, analyze or sway you about any

Parking attendant's remark 'degrading'

Editor: On Monday, Aug. 30, I decided to park on one of the lots on Fourth Street. I smiled as I handed the parking attendant 50 cents and he remarked, "You must have gotten some last night. Did you get a little, sweetheart?"

I drove off to park, mute with anger. I could not think of an appropriate reply to this man's harassment. I was furious and disgusted that he spoke to me that way. My sex life is certainly none of his business. I had never even seen him before that morning.

The university should be aware of this incident of verbal abuse. It was offensive and degrading. Incidents like this should not be tolerated.

Fraternity comes back to SJSU

Would you join a fraternity started be this man? He sures hopes so. Greg Kavanagh, services director for the Delta Upsilon fraternity, stands in front of the newly acquired house, located at 282 So. 10th St. Kavanagh traveled from Delta Upsilon headquarters in Indianapolis, Indiana to establish the fraternity at SJSU.

A third family member of Delta Upsilon will lead the revival of that fraternity at SJSU. The fraternity has been absent at SJSU since 1969.

Chapter President Doug Heisinger is another in a line of his family's participation in Delta Upsilon. His father Brent, is a music professor at SJSU and was the frater nity's president in 1960. Heisinger's uncle, Dale, was also

Heisinger said there are two reasons for the frater

"First, the alumnus wanted the fraternity to start again because they felt the time was right . . and the interest for a new house was here," 'Second, with the future revitalization around the SJSU area, having a fraternity here was a good idea.

Greg Kavanaugh, Delta Upsilon fraternities services director, echoed Heisinger. "The international council was very interested in returning the chapter to SJSU," he said. "With the distinguished past of the fraternity, they felt it was time to start again.'

Delta Upsilon was a major fixture on SJSU's fraternity scene from 1948 until 1969, when the doors closed "because of a lot of things. Student apathy and rebellion against old conventions, the area's becoming a semi-slum and various other things," Kavanaugh said.

With the efforts of Edward Mosher, an alumnus, the project was started. Fund-raising letters were sent to other alumni detailing the desire to "bring back D.U."
"The response was fantastic," Heisinger said. "The international chapter helped us out a lot.

So far the chapter has five members, with 15 or more pledged. "We're looking for a certain type of person," said Jeff Kaneko, treasurer. "We are looking for people with responsible ambitions, student leaders, scholars, athletes, a good mix," he added.

"But we don't want boring people," Heisinger added. "We know how to have fun, too.

Heisinger said that they are a non-hazing fraternity. "We don't have secret handshakes, secret codes, all that jazz," he said. "We'll take the pledges one at a time and evaluate them as people.'

The only criteria for membership are "active interest in student affairs, a good GPA and a desire to participate in campus activities," Kavanaugh said.

To join the fraternity would mean joining an organization whose history dates back to 1834. Delta Upsilon was given the Warren Bishop Trophy for best

S.U. Ballroom floor awaits renovation

SUBOG meeting to approve repairs

By Kathlyn Warren
The Student Union Ballroom floor will be repaired during the winter break and ready for use at the beginning of the spring semester, if the repairs are approved by the S.U. board of governors.

The board will meet at 3:30 p.m. uesday, Sept. 14, in the S.U. Guadalupe Room to approve plans for the repairs.

"We're advertising presently for bids which will open Sept. 14," said Ron Barrett, S.U. director. "We'll know then how many bids and the amounts that will be offered.

The board has so far approved only the technical engineering study and preparation of bidding documents.

"There is no evidence of faulty con-struction," Barrett said. "It (the floor) met code requirements at the time of construction

The problem with the floor is due to the new "pogo-style" dancing, which creates a synchronized up and down motion that increases the amount of pressure exerted on the floor, according to Barrett.

The ballroom floor was closed to prevent the beams from cracking.

In terms of cost, the job is not major, said Barrett. "Knowing the styles, it could be the time we correct it when pogostyle dancing will go out.

Indian club protests by participating in run

According to Vischer, challenges are what keep him in soccer.

"Soccer is full of challenges," said Vischer. "For instance, SJSU has never won a national championship, that's a challenge to me. They also say only the nation's best amateurs get to participate in the Olympics, that's another challenge.

Spartan booters face Titans

Freshman phenom Vince Megaro left the team to return to his native country, transfer scoring threat Ray Wilson was almost declared ineligible, and now he must face pesky Cal State Fullerton in the Spartans' home opener tomorrow night.

"This has been some week," said Menendez with hand though is Cal State Fullerton. They're a good team and we're going to have to be at our very best to beat them. We played them last year and beat them (2-1), but we had to go into overtime to do it.

According Menendez, Megaro left San Jose Wednesday at noon to return to Canada. He said Megaro was returning to his native country because was undergoing "financial problems.

He didn't realize the cost of living was so high in California,

Menendez. "We have lost some height."

Megaro, who was a member of the Canadian national junior team, was slated to see considerable action in the midfield this year.

Mike Paone, a 5-foot-9, 155-pound senior, will now play sweeper and Tom Vischer will move to the midfield.

Wilson was almost declared ineligible this week because he had not been officially accepted by the university freshman and there was a delay in the admissions office getting his tran-script," said Menendez. Everything is all taken care of now. He was officially accepted into the university on Wednesday.'

Wilson will start Saturday night and is finally 100 percent after being slowed considerably by a nagging leg injury.

Yet according Menendez, Cal Fullerton always fields a strong team.

"They always field a competitive team," said Menendez. "Over the past 15 years, no one has ever blown out Cal State Fullerton.

The Titans return their top three scorers and a fine goalkeeper, despite losing two returning lettermen to academic ineligibility and a third to knee surgery.

Meanwhile, Spartan goalie Ryan Moore will have to try and shut out Titan Mike Fox. Fox is one of the best players in the

Ice hopes to melt into SJSU spiker squad

Most freshman athletes entering a major university tend to be awed and somewhat intimidated by the dramatic rise in quality from high school to the college

While she may be awed, SJSU freshman volleyball player Lisa Ice is by no means intimidated.

College volleyball "is a lot more intense," said Ice "It's a bigger game all-round, in terms of speed, height and strength, than in high school, but it's a lot more exciting than intimidating to be playing college teams like Ice came to SJSU from Santa Teresa High School in San Jose, where she starred in basketball as well as volleyball. Her coach, Dick Montgomery, feels that she is making the transition from prep to college real well.

"Lisa is making the changeover quite nicely," said Montgomery. "She is becoming more out-going and is really concentrating on volleyball."

Ice said she never had any intention of leaving the

"I really love it here at SJSU," said Ice. "The area round the campus is a little bit scary at times, but I like . I wanted to stay close to home."

'She (Ice) is very competitive and has all the potential in the world...Lisa possesses some natural ability that a coach just can't teach...' -- coach Dick Montgomery

Although Ice herself feels her strongest position is in the front court, blocking at the net, Montgomery plans to use her mainly as an outside hitter

"Lisa has the potential to play with any of our other ee outside hitters," said Montgomery. "Although she three outside hitters," said Montgomery. lacks experience, she'll probably get a lot of playing time

Montgomery also feels that his top recruit is not only the best player to come out of Northern California this year, but that she also has the potential to be a U.S. National Team player.

"She is very competitive and has all the potential in the world," said Montgomery. "Lisa possesses some natural athletic ability that a coach just can't teach to a player who doesn't have it."

Still Ice doesn't strike one as being a dominant volleyball player upon first glance. She is fairly tall and slender, shy and soft-spoken. She answers questions with the embarrassed laugh of inexperience.

But Montgomery is as impressed with Ice's personality as he is with her volleyball skills.

"Lisa is such an unassuming person," said Montgomery, "and she has the biggest heart in the world."

Ice admits that she concentrates on Montgomery's team concept more than striving for individual honors

"The biggest motivation for me on the court," said Ice, "is the self-satisfaction I get from not letting my teammates down. I take that responsibility very

When she's not diving or leaping for volleyballs, Ice likes to spend her free time playing the piano. Though she said she mainly plays for self-enjoyment, Ice added that she has "goofed around with composing.

A health science major. Ice feels she will be able to contribute to the Lady Spartans right away because "to some point, everybody contributes to the team.'

Montgomery is happy that Ice has decided to limit her athletic contributions at SJSU to volleyball.

"Lisa was recruited in both basketball and volleyball when she came out of high school, but she decided to concentrate solely on volleyball," said Montgomery.
"We're very glad she came to SJSU."

Lady Spartan opponents will most likely be facing Lisa Ice for four years and, if Montgomery's observations are correct, will probably end up being more mad than

Bohan, Hadley added to line

Major shake-ups in the SJSU offensive line occurred earlier this week when 1981 starters Maomao Niko and Tom Larson, both guards, were replaced on the front line by senior George Bohan and junior Harold Hadley, respectively

Offensive line coach Dick Sullivan declined to comment other than to confirm the switches and that he didn't want to say anything derogatory about any of his players. He also added the moves would remain intact until the coaching staff had "a chance to look at films later this week and to reevaluate.'

Head coach Jack Elway was unavailable for com-

Bohan, a left guard who transfered from Santa Rosa Junior College prior to the start of the 1981 season, was utilized at both guard positions by SJSU last year, as well as on special teams.

Hadley, a transfer from Saddleback Junior College. has moved from third on the depth charts to the starting right guard spot.

Niko and Larson were both starters throughout the 1981 campaign and were expected to play a major part in the Spartans' 1982 offensive line, a unit considered to be an SJSU strength with four returning lettermen.

The Spartans open the season against the Oregon Ducks on Sept. 11.

If Michael Dray's instructors thought the SJSU reshman looked a little weary in class this week, they

The 6-foot, 160-pound Dray had a good excuse. He had o fly back from Denham Springs, La. to attend classes. He had spent one week with the Watsonville Aggies baseball team at the Babe Ruth World Series.

"I wasn't ready for college," said Dray, whose team was eliminated by Colorado Springs 7-2. "I had to come back (to school) too quick. I was dazed and drained (on the first day at SJSU). I had been playing baseball eight

To Dray, a pitcher/outfielder who's on a partial paseball scholarship at SJSU, the trip to the World Series capped a lifetime dream.

'It was the first time any team in the Monterey Bay Area had ever gone so far," said Dray after the team was honored in a parade down Main Street in Watsonville Monday. "It was an experience of a lifetime. I was atisfied with the tournament."

The former Santa Cruz County Athletic League most valuable player did his best to help Watsonville (23-5) win, but it wasn't enough. Dray batted .444 with five home runs, including leadoff homers in three consecutive

"We had the best team there, but we made errors at the wrong time," Dray said. "We were just inexperienced.

Dray, who turns 18 today, hopes to bring some of his winning tradition to SJSU. His record for team success is outstanding: three Little League crowns, two Pony League titles and two Babe Ruth championships.

At Aptos High School where he was a four-year varsity letterman, Dray helped the Mariners win three

His best season was in 1981 when he led the league in batting (.386) and compiled a 9-3 record with a 1.60 ERA.

A rotator cuff injury to Dray's right arm ("I started throwing too hard to early") sent his average down to the low .200s in his senior year, but he says he's almost 100 percent recovered and ready to play college baseball.

"My arm isn't bothering me and I got my average back up (for Watsonville)," Dray said. "San Jose State is close to home and they have a good baseball and business program SJSU Coach Gene Menges is well aware of Dray's abilities. "He has been on a winning team," Menges said.

"I'm aware of his pitching ability and I know he can play. How does Dray explain the success of the teams he has played for? 'I always work hard," he said. "I set goals and do my best to reach them. I'd do anything to win.
