Clash with the Titans

Karen Kelso

Spartan defensive end Terry McDonald pursues Titan quarterback Damon Allen. SJSU lost Saturday night, 20-11.

Spartans fall to Fullerton State

By Pat Sangimino

The Spartan defense has been able to stop just about everybody this season — that is until the Cal State Fullerton Titans came along.

Going into the game the Spartans were ranked fourth nationally in rushing defense. SJSU had limited its opponents to a mere 62.8 yards per game on the ground. However, in the Titans' 20-11 victory Saturday night in front of 21.318 fans at Spartan Stadium, their offensive line dominated the contest as the team rushed for 164 yards.

Fullerton, now 5-1 and 4-0 in Pacific Coast Athletic Association action, is not the typical PCAA team that relies basically on the passing game. Not at all. In Safurday night's contest quarterback Damon Allen threw the ball only nine times.

"They didn't have to pass," Spartan safety Sherman Cocroft said. "They went by a game plan — to run the ball — and it worked for them."

Allen added: "We didn't get the chance to throw the ball a lot like I wanted to. I thought we were going to throw the ball more than we actu-

Spartans crazy. The junior quarterback rushed for a team-high 59 yards. Most of his yardage came when he dropped back to pass, but could not find a receivern — he just took off.

Several of Allen's scrambles proved to be important. One in particular set up a third quarter Roy Lewis touchdown that made the score 17-0 and all but sealed the win.

On a third and 21 from the Spartan 39-yard line, Allen could not find an open receiver. He avoided a sack attempt by Terry McDonald and raced 23 yards for the first down.

Student rep arrested at Spartan Pub

By Ken Leiser

Dipak Patel, one of seven student representatives to the Academic Senate, was arrested Thursday night on charges of using a false identification at the Spartan Pub.

Patel, 19, tried to enter the Pubusing someone else's California driver's license, said Russ Lunsford, University Police information officer.

He handed the license to a Pub employee who was checking IDs at the door at about 10 p.m.

The license was then handed to Officer Alex Dourov of the University Police Department, who was standing nearby, the police report Dourov asked Patel to step outside and then cited him.

Patel was later handcuffed and taken to the University Police Department where he was booked and released.

His future with the Academic Senate will be discussed today by Kathy Cordova, Associated Students president and student government representative on the Senate, and Robert Martin, dean of Student Services.

The dean of Student Services handles student disciplinary actions, which include probation.

Don Dushane, associate dean of student services, said the incident may also be in violation of university policy.

He said it represents "knowingly furnishing false information to a state university."

Possession of a false identification is a misdemeanor under the Business Professions Code, Lunsford said.

Men's Center discusses society's problems with drink

The Men's Center held the first meeting of their alcohol awareness forum series in front of a small crowd Wednesday night in the Guadalupe Room of the Student

With a turnout of 12 people, Rick Spargo, the "Most Grand Exalted Poobah" of the Men's Center, was "disappointed that there weren't more people, but with the World Series and midterms," he said he understood. "We're covering real issues that affect college stu-

"We're covering real issues that affect conege students," Spargo said. "We're serious, and not just out for a good time." Speakers for the event were University Police officer Alex Dourov, who discussed drunk driving, and Greg Ruppert, "Most Grand Exalted Vice Poobah" of the Men's Center, who spoke on alcoholism. Spargo said the next forum on alcohol awareness will be October 26, when two members from Alcoholics Anonymous will speak, along with Robert Musil, "Worthy Sergeant at Arms" for the Men's Center.

Dourov spoke for most of the meeting.

He said that more than half of the highway deaths in the United States come from drivers being under the influence of alcohol, a classification which only requires a .10 blood alcohol level.

A man weighing 150 pounds will exceed the .10 level after five beers, but the body will burn off only .02 blood alcohol per hour.

If under the limit, then the person is usually released, unless the officer suspects drugs.

Dourov said that only a suspicion is necessary for an officer to pull over a driver and that officers base their decisions on subtle driving manuevers like "driving with the window down with the drivers head hanging out."

Dourov said that for drunken driving, more men are pulled over than women.

When an officer pulls someone over, the driver is given a field sobriety test. The test consists of walking heel to toe on a straight line, balancing on one foot, testing finger dexterity, and following a pencil with their eyes.

Dourov said that if a drivers eyes waver horizontally when looking to the side on this test, it indicates intoxication. If they waver vertically, it indicates drugs.

The alphabet test, which used to be used, was ruled unconstitional in superior court because of the number of non-English speaking people.

While relating stories of people trying to remember the alphabet, Dourov said that drunk driving was "serious stuff, but if you make fun of it, it gets the message across better

If the driver fails the field test, they are taken in for a blood-alcohol test. The person has their choice of a breath, urine, or blood tests.

They must take one of the tests or their license is automatically suspended. If felony drunk driving is involved (where someone is hurt in an accident), the law says that blood can be taken by force.

Dourov said the easiest and least time-consuming test is the breath test, and the most accurate one is the blood test.

The breath test has been challenged as being inaccurate, but he said the machine that the suspect blows into is regularly checked with a "control" bottle of .10 for accuracy.

A sculptor is forced to remove his work from an exhibit at UC Berkeley because feminists and grade-school children consider it "sexist.

Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" is banned from classrooms across the country.

- Again at Berkeley, birthplace of the so-called Free Speech Movement, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations is heckled and jeered off the podium.

 Closer to home, feminists successfully campaign to remove several "pornomagazines from the Spartan

A common thread runs through these and many other similar incidents. An individual chose to express him or herself and came under attack, not from a Bible-thumping fundamentalist, but from people who could be generally classified as equality-loving liberals: people who may have thought they were doing the right thing.

Unfortunately, whether acting on good intentions or not, they were not doing the right thing. Their actions amounted to nothing less than attempts to suppress individuals' freedom of expression. And, also unfortunately, the suppressors are all too often succeeding without meeting any significant, ideologically based opposition from the public or the press.

A recent case in point: the sculptor whose "sexist" work was removed from an exhibit at Berkeley. The objected-to piece was "Sweetheart," a robot/sculpture with a coffee machine for a torso, a long-spouted coffee pot for a head, and 1952 Cadillac bumper bullets for breasts

Sweetheart was displayed earlier this month in Berkeley's Lawrence Hall of Science until employees at the hall and visiting grade-school children complained that the generously endowed, coffee-serving robot was "sexist" and "offensive to women." Robert Knox, the hall's deputy director, decided to remove Sweetheart after 35 people signed a petition of protest.

Sweetheart's creator, Clayton Bailey, was understandably miffed, and said the removal was "next to book burning.

Bailey is not quite right. Sweetheart's removal was not a step away from book burning; it was on the exact same low level. Like last semester's burning of typed passages from literary and religious works by members of the Women's Center, Sweetheart's removal was an irrational attack on the idea of a free marketplace of ideas.

Many advocates of freedom with sympathies toward liberal causes are slow to crit-icize instances of suppression like Sweetheart's

They should not be so hesitant.

Never mind that Sweetheart's detractors may have been blind to the "her" satiric intent; whether or not a work has "socially redeeming" aspects is irrelevant. What is significant is that they were able to force the removal of a work they did not think advanced their particular interests.

When one group controls what others may create or consume in the field of ideas. it can deny the right to use one's mind. And when faced with an attempt to suppress ideas, one can fight for the right to use his or her mind, or, like Robert Knox, lose it by

Kings, life and the futility

Well, you know what happened. We lost, and Scott Dempster won

He's king, and he's crowned. For a year he'll reign as our leader — he'll represent SJSU at pizza parlors and wet T-shirt contests, at carwashes, at any function that demands gleaming teeth, a ready smile, and a Greek.

Maybe he'll even get to meet Gail Fullerton.

As for the rest of us, we must content ourselves in our hopeless anonymity with whatever crumbs of fame and recognition that get tossed our way. We can look forward to perhaps winning a free bag of fries from McDonald's, getting chosen by dad to cut the Christmas turkey, or maybe even finding ourselves in a crowd shot on the Channel 4 News. but not much more.

The future seems really bleak, and makes the thoughtful ones wonder if life is really worth living at all. It isn't, of course, but then the thoughtful ones also realize that death may be as empty and futile as life, which would make suicide pointless. and the Great Ones always choose purposeful futility over the effortless waste of time.

For even though the anonymous life may be pointless, it still has cable TV. Movies. We can see lots of movies for cheap monthly rates or perhaps for nothing at all. Many of the movies are cheap Rrated exploitation flicks that only play in disreputable theaters, and the wonders of cable allow us to ogle them at home, safe from the social ostracism that going to those theaters would generate, safe from the greasy popcorn.

In this, we see that anonymity can be a good —a good that the famous can never know, or only remember, which makes us laugh derisively and cast stones, or perhaps nerve gas. "We got something you don't got, nyaa, nyaaa, nya, nya nyaa," taunt the anonymous and the dull normal, and the scholars timidly agree, with the footnote, of course, that grammar and syntax ultimately aren't as important as the thought, but can make one sound stupid and indicate a devotion to white sugar. What else does this indicate? No doubt, this line of thought will lead us nowhere, but it's still worth exploring if only because I have four more inches to

Andy Warhol, a minor artist not known for his depth of thought, once said that we'd all be famous for fifteen minutes at some point in the 20th Century. He will no doubt be proved wrong, but his premise is useful here for reasons that will remain vague or just unknown.

Scott Dempster has gotten his fifteen minutes of fame. He's gotten many, many more than that With my luck, he's probably snagged mine and the fame of my children and grandchildren as well. He may have gotten yours too. And there is absolutely nothing we can do about it. This realization brings us back to our original premise about futility, and its overriding intrusion into our lives.

Can we live with the pointlessness of the human experience? Can we live with the knowledge that Scott Dempster is the king and we are merely stu-dents? He got his hair cut for the occasion; will he

These and many other questions have yet to be

It's early yet, and the full ramifications of the 1983 Homecoming may not be known for months, perhaps years. Maybe there won't be any ramifica-tions at all, but in an empty, desolate, world, homecomings play an important role

Long live the king.

Students should gain more knowledge of campus funding

After reading Harry Marinakis' letter stating that California Public Interest Research Group should not be allowed at SJSU. I can only suggest that he develop an understanding of the principles underlying democracy.

Last spring SJSU students voted to establish and fund a chapter of the CalPIRG, contrary to Marinakis opinion that it does not belong here.

These campus-wide elections allow us to control how our associated student body fee is spent, and whether or not it should be collected.

Here at SJSU, different subjects and activities are present for different people, but everyone pays the tuition and fees which fund them all. It would be chaotic and unrealistic to set up a system of strict user fees or donations. The same money is collected for everyone and allocated through the Associated Students.

CalPIRG is simply an addition to this system, except that the student body endorsed this extra fee and, unlike most fees, this one is refundable.

CalPIRG is essentially an educational program on campus giving students the opportunity to research and

In the future Marinakis should remember that in any democracy the majority prevails, and that the people who vote make the decisions.

Research and advocacy group needed to influence community

Regarding Harry Marinakis' letter in Oct. 10 issue of the Daily. Yes, Marinakis, the California Public Interest Research Group is not a "necessary" student service. Rather, it is a non-profit research and advocacy organization giving California students the opportunity to influence their community

Grad student makes noise about noise in Clark Library

I was on the third floor of Clark Library on Wednesday and was quietly studying when a large group of students came and sat next to me. These students proceeded to talk in a very loud manner which disturbed everyone around them.

If the discussion had been academically oriented I could understand the need for collaboration. But it was not. These students were talking about everything but classwork

This seems to be a frequent problem on the third floor. Because librarians request that the periodicals remain on the third floor, I must work near these inconsiderate students.

I cannot understand why students use the library to socialize. Wouldn't the Pub or the Student Union be a better place?

There are many students like myself who need the library for serious studying and we would appreciate a quiet atmosphere. Anyone who is not interested in studying should not be in the library.

At least ten times I have asked security to eject these "people" (using the term very loosely). I have seen deranged men flailing about, scattering students. I have seen perverts making obscene gestures, unchallenged, for an entire hour or so. Dope addicts, mental incompetents, potential rapists and other debris roam the campus at will.

Everyone knows who they are. They are always filthy-looking and glazed-eved.

Why do we allow this to go on? Because there are no laws to protect us. SJSU is public property, meaning transients, who have absolutely no business on this property, are allowed to hassle us, or worse.

It will take some bizarre daylight murder to shock our administrators into declaring laws on this problem

In the meantime, I urge all students, staff and faculty to pick up the phone anytime they see transient or halfway creating trouble. Don't be sheep! Fight back!

Glass blowing, it's a delicate art

By Eric Hermstad

"It's the glass, it mesmerizes you and you become part of it," said Ellen Basher, a fine arts graduate student par-ticipating in the SJSU free-blown glass

The program, headed by art professor Robert Fritz, is internationally known and respected. Fritz, a well-known artist himself, has pieces in four major museums in Europe

Taking molten glass and shaping it into a work of art is a delicate and in-volved process — not to mention hot. From a large 1,800 degree furnace, the melted glass is removed with a 4-foot-6-inch blow pipe.

When the glass is removed from the oven, the artist alternates between blowing, shaping, and heating

"With the heat and intensity, all your energy goes into the piece," Basher said. Fritz said that glass blowing probadates back to the second century in the Mediterranean area. However, most of the modern methods were started during the Roman period between the second and fourth centuries.

In 1964, Fritz started the glass blow-ing program at SJSU, the first on the West coast and the second in the nation to have an industrial process studio. Fritz said that this is the only art form that gained popularity in the U.S. first and then moved to other countries

The loss dropped the Spartans to 4-2 and 3-1 in PCAA action. The conference title that looked so promising after last week's 41-23 win over Fresno State is now in serious jeopardy

In order for the Spartans to win the conference and represent the PCAA in the California Bowl in Fresno Dec. 17, Fullerton must lose its two remaining conference games against Fresno State and Las Vegas. SJSU must also its three remaining PCAA games against Utah State, Pacific and next week's contest at Long Beach State

But the advantage is clearly in the Titans' favor They are the only undefeated team in the conference and can control their own destiny with a win next week at Fresno State

The Spartans had the advantage in the early going, but could not take advantage of several scoring opportunities. On their opening drive of the game, the Spartans drove all the way down to the Titan 39yard line only to be held on fourth down when Dave Criswell was stopped for a one-yard loss

Later in the first quarter Fullerton punter Vince Gamache had a snap go over his head and was tackled for a 34-yard loss where the Spartans took over at the Titan 15-yard

Unfortunately for the Spartans, quarterback Jon Carlson was unable move the offense into the end zone. Running back Bobby Johnson, who rushed for 88 yards in the game, got SJSU down to the seven-yard line and Phillippe Rebboah was called on to kick a relatively easy 24-yard field goal. However, the Titans kept the Spartans off opportunities that we the scoreboard when defensive back Mark Collins got through the line and blocked the kick.

Rebboah, who has been erratic all season struggled through another long night. Later in the contest he missed a 45-yard field goal. Those two the second half when the Spartans finally were able to generate some kind of offense

By the time SJSU scored, the contest had been all but decided. With 3:10 remaining in the third quarter, Rebboah connected on a 26-yard field goal to make the score 17-3. The Spartans had to settle for the three points after strong safety Dale Thompson made an lunging effort to knock a pass away from receiver Eric Richardson in the corner

The Titans took the ball on their next posses sion and drove down in to field goal range. From there, kicker Greg Steinke booted his second field goal of the night —this one from 47 yards out — to make the score 20-3.

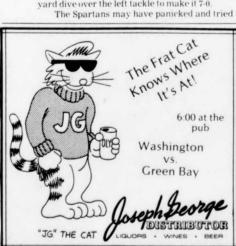

A costly 40-yard pass interference penalty on free safety Sherman Cocroft moved the ball into Steinke's range. Allen threw deep to James Pruitt, who was being covered by Cocroft. The two humped. Pruitt fell, and Cocroft was called for the

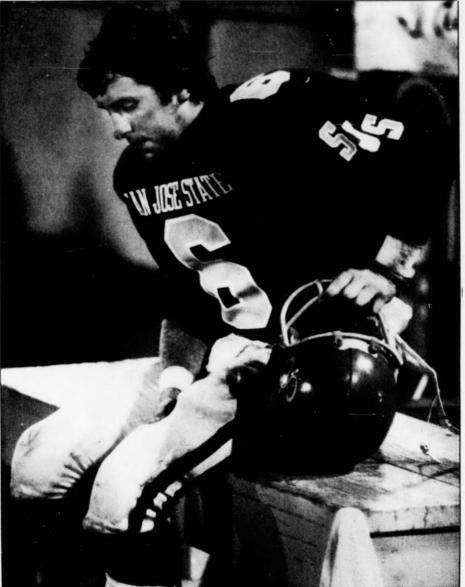

"I was going for the ball and the receiver was. too," Cocroft said. "It shouldn't have been a penalty because I knew where the ball was and I was going for it. If they wouldn't have made that call you never know what might have happened. There was a lot of time left.

Time enough for the Spartans to pull off one of their patented comeback wins like against Las Vegas and Oregon. But it wasn't meant to be. After Carlson, who completed 18-of-33 for 173 yards and three interceptions, found Richardson for a 30-yard touchdown reception with 11:37 remaining and Criswell hauled in a catch for the two-point conversion, the Spartans couldn't muster any more offense.

After a scoreless first quarter Fullerton got on the scoreboard when running back Rick Calhoun culminated a 14-play, 90-yard drive with a oneyard dive over the left tackle to make it 7-0.

Most parking lots around government offices, shopping centers, stores, entertainment centers, banks and other buildings include specially marked spaces for the handicapped.

Knabe said he did not have any statistics on how many parking citations are issued each month to driv ers who violate the law.

"It's just one of those frustrating things. I know I've seen it," Knabe

Feminist visits America seeking peace

Anna Vio . .helped to get Italian rape laws passed she was morally condemned and forced to leave town. The men of Comiso considered the rape to be the girl's fault, Vio said. "Up to now, violence on a woman was considered a crime against morality," Vio said, "and the men were judging whether a woman was moral or not. The feminist movement was instrumental in getting Italian rape laws to consider rape a crime against the voman as a person, rather than a crime against a woman's morality, Vio said.

When a proposal to change the law was in Parliament. 50,000 women assembled in Rome to protest the morality status of rape and the law was changed, she

Having recently returned from a six-week stay at a peace camp in Seneca Falls, N.Y., Vio said she came to the United States to learn more about the peace

"I'm very encouraged at what's happening here,"

Recent nuclear arms developments have strengthened the peace movement in Italy and the international movement in Europe, Vio said.

Nuclear missiles are being forced on a U.S. controlled Italian government, instigating demonstrations and marches that often reach 100,000 people, she said.

The first goal of the feminist movement is to get the Italian government to refuse missiles from the United States. Vio said, but its basic mission is to protest all sion, she said, but the feminist movement believes in expressing this anger by celebrating the joy and beauty of life. It believes women can be powerful without violence.

Women have been strongly connected with nature. Vio said. "What men do to nature, they do to women. She said she believes the United States has selected

Sicily as a missile site because of its strategic position to Russia, and the rest of Europe and the Middle East. When the Italian government first began accepting missiles from the United States that were destined for Sicily, Vio said 500,000 Italians staged a demonstration in Rome to protest the move. The Sicilian Parliament was not consulted, Vio said, so Sicilian citizens petitioned to get a referendum against the missiles placed on the ballot. A petition requires 500. Vio said one million of the five million Sicilians signed the petition, but the Italian government refused to call for a referendum, stating that the public had no say in the She said polls show 60 percent of Italians are against accepting nuclear missiles, while another 15 percent will accept the missiles, but only if controlled by the Italian government.

Still, the missiles continue to be controlled by the United States, she said.

Reagan plays games with the currency every time he wants to pull something on Europe," she said. 'One thing the American people have to start to understand is to get rid of the mentality that this is the strongest country, the most powerful; (that) they have to dominate the world and they have to tell all other countries what to do

The worst thing, she said, is that NATO, or the United States, depends on the Italian Mafia for land and con-

The Italian Mafia has been backed by the U.S. since the last world war," she stated.

Vio said several people, including a member of the Sicilian Parliament, have been executed by the Mafia for playing too active a role in the peace movement.

The Christian Democratic Party, the dominant political party in Italy, is a puppet of the Mafia and the United States, she added.

Her message to the American people is to "try your best to do everything you can to protest the missiles."

"The feeling is, unless the United States approves of what you are, you'll never get a chance of governing your country," Vio said. "So, the idea is accepting other people's self-determination, not imposing rules, not imposing economic or political control, not imposing arms.

Drunk driving topic of forum

The usual fine, he said, is $325, the same amount as the bail. The second offense is double the fine. A recent law says driving on a suspended license brings an automatic $1,000 fine

However, Dourov said what the laws are and what really happens are two different things.
"In the past, the laws have been too lenient," he said.

But with such interest groups as Mothers Against Drunk Driving, and others, the laws have been getting tougher

The minimum amount of time in custody is four hours, an amount of time for the blood alcohol level to drop and the paperwork to be finished. Dourov does not think that four hours is sufficent for the level to drop because of the slow rate the alcohol leaves the body.

Unfortunately, there is no way to keep a drunk person from popping into a car," he said.

Ruppert spoke on alcoholism, the fourth largest health hazard. He said people drink to reduce anxiety and to get a false sense of power

He said that alcoholism is not curable, only repressi-

Study shows cervical caps are effective

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cervical caps, classified by the federal government as experimental, are a safe birth control device that can be as effective as a diaphragm. according to preliminary research reports.

Initial results of a Los Angeles Regional Family Planning Council study involving 950 women show that the cervical cap is just as effective as a diaphragm in preventing pregnancy, said Ron Frezieres, director of the council's research project.

The family planning council is one of the agencies approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration to

A cervical cap is similar to a diaphragm in that both are usually made of plastic or rubber, hold contraceptive cream or jelly and are placed in the vaginal canal to prevent sperm from entering the uterus.

The difference is that a cervical cap covers only the cervix while a diaphragm blocks the entire upper-vaginal canal. An advantage of the cervical cap is that most researchers believe it can be worn for a few days. A diaphragm must be inserted shortly before intercourse and cannot be worn longer than 24 hours

Both devices are considered to be 98 percent effective if used correctly each time a woman has intercourse.

Frezieres said. The actual effectiveness rates are about 85 percent because of improper usage, he said.

The cap, however, was found difficult to insert and remove by some women. Nurse practitioner Renee Potik aid that about 60 percent of women are successfully fitted with the cap.

"We feel we really are getting a nice success rate," said Ms. Potik, who is approved by the FDA to fit the

The cap could not be approved for use other than in an federal Food and Drug Administration study for at least two or three years, according to an article published in today's Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

Guided by dog, blind woman delivers the news

PITTSBURGH (AP) -Claire Michaels shoulders a canvas bag before dawn each weekday and sets out with her guide dog to deliver newspapers - her way of proving that despite blindness, "There's nothing I can't do if given

With the help of Cinder, a black Labrador retriever, Miss Michaels, who was blinded by injuries from a car accident 10 years ago, negotiates broken sidewalks and steps. The dog fetches errantly thrown papers to make sure her mistress tosses them correctly

The only thing I've proved to me is there's nothing I can't do if given the chance to do it," said Miss Michaels, whose day begins at 5 a.m. "I'd rather have a real job. I just can't seem to convince people I can do other things

"I'm not going to sit around until somebody comes up with a job. But there are so many people out of work, why hire somebody with a disability? Most private employers feel that way," she said in a recent interview. Miss Michaels, who has a degree in English and sociology, began delivering the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette more than a year ago and has 48 customers. She also delivers the afternoon Pittsburgh Press inside her apartment

With Cinder's help, Miss Michaels has learned short cuts through hedges and around steps. And if she misses a porch with her first throw. Cinder retrieves it for a second

"She knows it's supposed to land on the porch. She only gets it if I throw it wrong. It's a game with her," said Miss Michaels

"She's the best paper carrier we've ever had. She's never missed. You never find your paper in the mud or the snow," said customer Anne Tomko

For Miss Michaels, who would like to work at a hospital or the courthouse, the job satisfaction is important

Until then, Miss Michaels will keep delivering papers for $20 to $30 a month to supplement her $350 monthly Social Security checks.

Porkers have a ball with alley discards

DES MOINES, Iowa Where do old bowlng balls go when they die?

In Iowa, the nation's No. 1 pork-producing state they frequently wind up as toys in a pig playpen.

"It gives them some-thing to do," explained Dallas Bowman, who often puts bowling balls in pens at his hog confinement operation near Adel, in cen-tral Iowa. "It encourages them to get up and get active, to eat, feed and drink

Several animals at a time will try to push the balls around with their

Dr. Patrick Rohret, a veterinarian in Adel, said putting playthings into pig pens is not so unusual

"I've seen sometimes where they've got a chain hanging from the ceiling or Rohret said recently. "Of course, they don't swing in it, they just push it around.

Phil Anderson, the operator of a bowling alley in Greenfield, gives all the battle-scarred balls that are retired from service to farmers in the area.

"It keeps them from chewing on each other's
