REC passes by 111 votes

By Mary Green
 Daily staff writer

Voter turnout at SJSU was the highest in 10 years last week when more than five thousand students cast their ballots in a special election which saw a Recreation and Events Center on campus approved by 51.1 percent of the voters.

In an extremely close election, 111 more students voted for increasing student fees to build a $20.9 million Rec Center on campus.

At 9:15 Thursday night, Tod Piloni, A.S. Election Board chairman, announced that 2,626 students voted in favor of building a Rec Center and 2,515 voted against the idea.

The next step on the road to the REC is to receive approval from the California State University Chancellor's Office to raise students fees.

Student fees will increase by $10 this spring and an additional $18 next fall, if approved.

Construction is expected to begin in approximately six months, with completion expected in 28 months.

"This should be a very positive dimension to the campus," said SJSU President Gail Fullerton. She said the Student Union Board of Directors will have to file a resolution to build the REC before it. However, the battle lines are not torn down yet. Rec Center opponent Larry Dougherty said he is not ready to concede anything.

Many jobs for writers, panel says

By Patricia Hannon
 Daily staff writer

About sixty SJSU students learned there's more opportunities in writing than just newspapers and magazines in the Writing as a Career Workshop held last week through Career Planning and Placement.

Five panelists discussed a variety of careers that people who want to write professionally have open to them and the steps necessary to break into the field. The professions included technical and manual writing, public relations, industrial theater and government contract work.

Tom Parker, an industrial script writer, said his field is open to a variety of artists from actors and directors to lyricists and playwrights because it involves producing films to promote certain companies or products.

Major companies like Pepsi, Hewlett-Packard, Atari and Shaklee have multi-million dollar production studios set up for this purpose, according to Parker. There are also opportunities for this kind of work with production studios like Panorama in Santa Clara, which has a full-time staff of about 30 people and is always looking for more, Parker said.

To prepare for careers in industrial theater, Parker suggested that students get general educations, know about computers and learn about business.

"Go to the productions companies," Parker said. "There is a lot of this stuff around."

Maxine Cass, field examiner for the National Labor Relations Board in San Francisco, said the best thing about her job is that her income is set by the government. Government positions range from $16,000 to $43,000 annually, with management positions starting at $59,000, Cass said. As a field examiner, her responsibilities include investigating unfair labor practices and assimilating the information revealed into technical, written form.

She suggests that students interested in writing become proficient in interviewing and summarizing techniques, and learn how to make charts and diagrams.

One of the major drawbacks she finds about working for the government is that political activity is severely limited because a field examiner is expected to remain unbiased.

Cass is also a free-lance writer and photographer and said that to do this a person has to have a mind for business and be very disciplined.

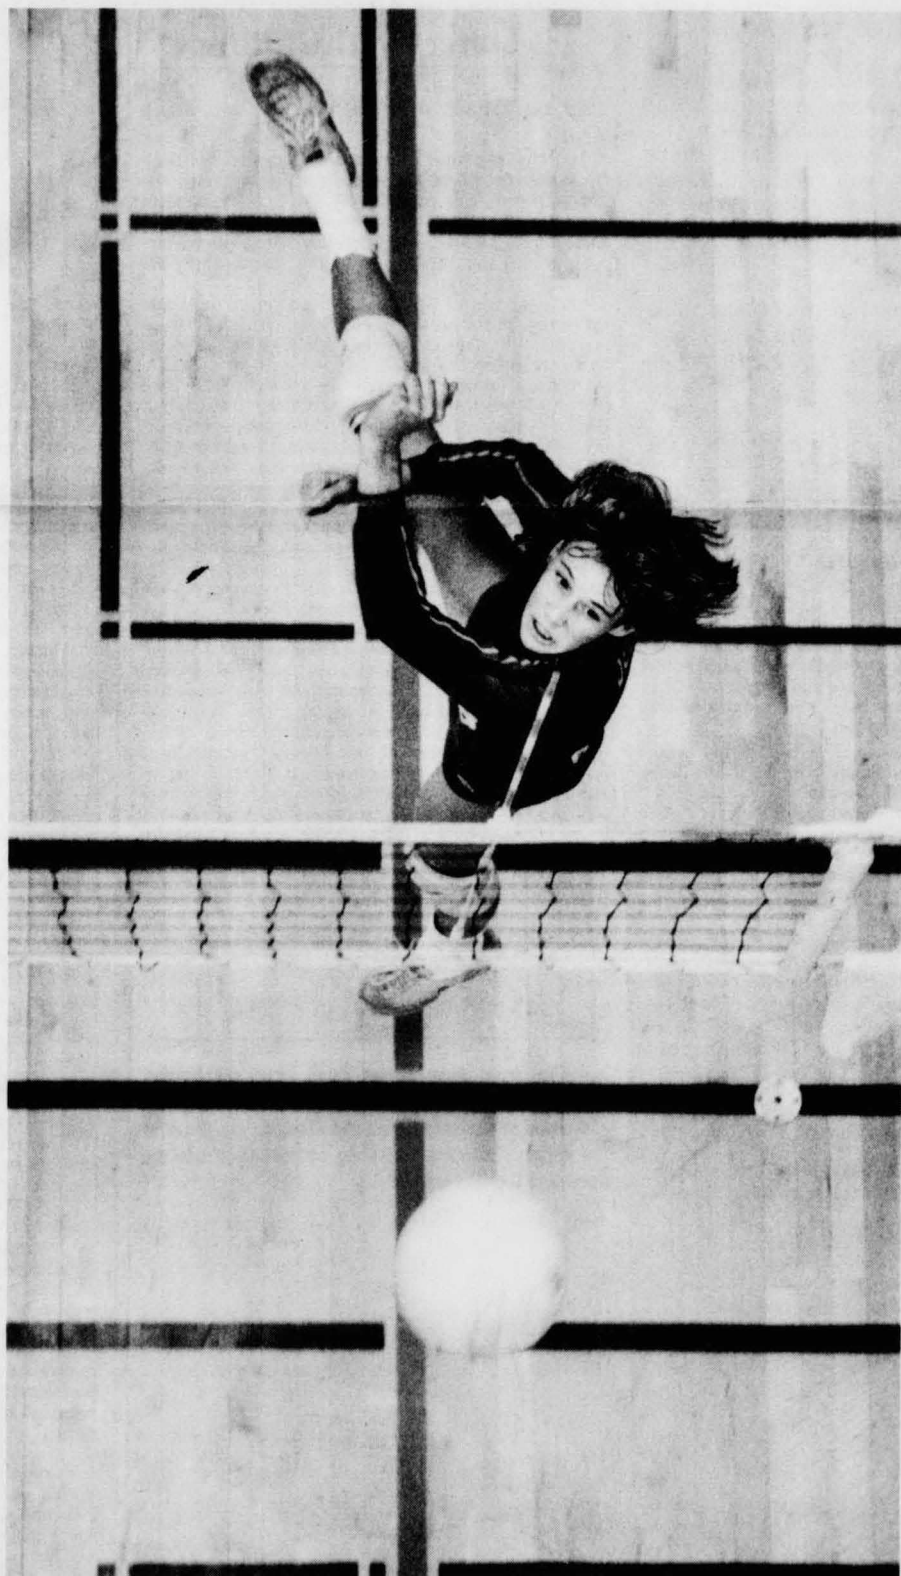

"The potential for free-lance (writing) is endless," she said.

Eugene Swigart, SJSU associate English professor, spoke to the group about creative writing.

He encouraged students who want to write not to think of technical, manual and public relations writing as "selling out."

"Any opportunity you have to use your skill, you should take advantage of," Swigart said.

REC outcome draws cheers from SUBOD

Chairman burns losing statement upon hearing student vote tallies

By Mary Green
 Daily staff writer

Just after the results of the Recreation and Events Center were announced in the A.S. Executive Office, a group of Rec Center supporters uttered a heavy sigh of relief following it with loud cheers of happiness.

Shortly after the announcement was made, SJSU President Gail Fullerton, Executive Vice President J. Handel Evans and Alumni Association members Alex and Sandy Stepovich paid a visit to the A.S. Office to congratulate the Rec Center supporters.

"I think the students on this campus will be pleased with what will be happening on this campus in 10 years," Alex Stepovich said. He said he was speaking from the viewpoint of an alum and he felt that current students would not realize the impact of this decision until many years down the road.

During the election, Jeff Coughlan, chairman of the Student Union Board of Directors, was not sure whether the Rec Center would pass. In his preparation for the outcome Coughlan had written two election statements.

Once the vote was known, Coughlan pulled out his "YES" statement for the media and burned the "NO" statement in a beer mug.

In it Coughlan said the SJSU students had demonstrated a great deal of insight and an open-minded, optimistic view of the future by voting for the Rec Center.

At the Spartan Pub directly after the results were released, S.U. Program Director Ted Gehrke reacted with surprise to news that the Rec Center had passed.

"Damn we won. I'm overwhelmed. I was scared to death we were going to lose this one," Gehrke said.

"I knew we lost the commuter-student vote. If it wasn't for all the volunteers who worked on this campaign I believe we would have lost," Gehrke added.

'I'm overwhelmed. I was scared to death we were going to lose this one.'

— Ted Gehrke, S.U. Program Director

A.S. President Michael Schneider said the SJSU Rec Center is the first of its kind in the California State University system and will set a precedent.

"(California State University at) Long Beach and San Diego State (University) have similar recreation centers pending, but SJSU's is the first," Schneider said.

Curtis Richards of the California State Students Association said four state universities are planning Rec Centers but that SJSU is the first to actually begin one.

"(California State University at) Sacramento, Long Beach State, San Diego State and (California Polytechnic State University at) San Luis Obispo are all planning similar projects," Richards said.

Architects working for Long Beach State have drawn up plans and Richards said the fee that students will pay at that school will be substantially less than fees paid at SJSU.

Michael J. Long, A.S. President at Long Beach State, is optimistic about the recreation center plans for the university.

"Our student newspaper polled 500 people last week and 61 percent were in favor of constructing a center," Long said.

Student fees at Long Beach State would increase $15 per semester prior to completion of the facility and $25 in 1987, the expected completion date.

SJSU student fees will increase $10 this spring and an additional $18 next fall. Construction should begin in six months and completion is estimated for March 1987.

Schneider may sue SJSU REC opponent

By Kevin Mendoza
 Daily staff writer

Angered over the remarks made by Recreation and Events Center opponent Larry Dougherty, Associated Students President Michael Schneider is considering filing a lawsuit against him.

Schneider announced his possible intentions at the A.S. Board of Directors meeting Wednesday.

"It's only an idea," Schneider said. He said he contacted an attorney to decide whether the matter merits legal action. Schneider said he refuses to release the name of the attorney to the press until he can obtain the lawyer's permission.

Schneider said Dougherty's continual complaints against the conduct of the A.S. board and the A.S. Judiciary Committee have cast A.S. activities in a negative light.

"I think it's just a bluff," Dougherty said. "I feel he doesn't have a case."

"All the charges that I've filed are valid," he said.

During the past month, Dougherty has filed several complaints against the A.S. board and the Student Union Board of Directors alleging that both committees have violated A.S. constitutional procedures concerning campaigning.

On Nov. 12, Dougherty said he may seek civil action against the A.S. for violating his right to a fair trial after the judiciary committee dropped nine of his charges at the Nov. 7 judicial meeting.

"This is a direct reaction to Lar-

Complaint against REC opponent dumped

By Kevin Mendoza
 Daily staff writer

Recreation and Events Center opponent Larry Dougherty does not have to stand trial for the complaint lodged against him stating he violated confidentiality provisions of the Associated Students constitution.

At a preliminary hearing yesterday, Greg Mack, chief justice of the A.S. Judiciary, ruled that the complaint filed by Diana Garcia, A.S. director of student rights and responsibilities, does not warrant a judicial hearing.

Mack was acting as the judicial delegate, a member of the judiciary who determines whether there is sufficient evidence to merit a hearing. The delegate also attempts to arbitrate a solution to the dispute.

Garcia's contention that Dougherty broke the confidentiality provision was negated because a reporter from the Spartan Daily attended the meeting, Mack said.

Garcia's complaint, filed Nov. 9, was two-fold.

One section of the complaint stated that Dougherty publicly announced the judiciary's verdict of its Nov. 7 meeting thereby violating Act 36 of the A.S. constitution. This act states that all discussions transpiring during judicial deliberations is confidential.

Garcia's complaint also contended that when Dougherty appealed to the A.S. board Nov. 7 to investigate the judiciary's actions, he announced the committee's decision before the proper people were in-

Trustees plan will help students

THE PLAN under consideration by the CSU Board of Trustees to change admission requirements for freshman entering the CSU system in fall of 1990, is a sound one.

Submitted by the CSU Academic Advisory Council, the proposal seeks to combine requirements of the California State University, the California Legislature, the State Board of Education and the University of California.

Currently, all four institutions have different requirements.

It would require entering freshmen to have completed four years of college-preparatory English, three years of math, two years of science, three years of social science, two years of foreign language and two years of visual and performing arts.

The council stated in a February report that, if adopted, "the mission of California high schools would be clarified, the task of academic counseling would be simplified and there would be far greater student and parental understanding of what one should be prepared to encounter in university study."

Many students enter the CSU system from high school with minimal language and mathematical skills. Before they can even begin to fulfill some of their lower division general education requirements, they must take remedial English and math courses.

This is a waste of time and money for the student. The instructor as well as the university, also suffer.

So much of success in college depends on good language skills. The ability of a student to read and write relates to almost all areas of study. Students who are weak in this very important area, enter the arena of higher education with one hand tied behind their backs. Being handicapped at this stage of the game, because of substandard reading and writing skills, can be academically fatal.

The report also indicates a majority of CSU students pursue programs which require calculus and/or statistics. If these students haven't completed at least three years of preparatory math, their program completion date will be delayed.

The danger in a plan which seeks to prescribe a uniform standard of academic preparation is that it can become exclusionary. Access, a very important feature of the CSU system, can be diminished.

Fortunately, the council's plan does make necessary provisions for the admission of non-traditional students — older students, those who have been educationally disadvantaged, and individuals who possess particular talents but whose overall preparation is uneven.

Minority student access and ability to succeed once in college, will hopefully increase by improving the academic preparation of entering CSU students.

The plan is well thought, comprehensive and flexible. Its adoption will help insure that entering students are prepared to take on the college curriculum, and are prepared to succeed in perhaps one of the most important endeavors of their lives.

Liberalism must not die in our time

On Reagan's landslide victory night, college Republicans predicted a continuous wave of conservatism to spread across the SJSU campus and eventually overtake it in the semesters to come.

"No longer is the campus going to be the center of liberalism," said former College Republicans president Tim Kincaid.

Associated Students President Michael Schneider said to expect more students "working within the system

But this does not mean students have stopped fighting U.S. intervention in countries such as Nicaragua and El Salvador.

Recently local churches and peace groups, including the SJSU Students for Peace, planned a civil disobedience effort to protest escalation of U.S. intervention in Nicaragua.

In the event of increased American hostilities toward either of the Central American countries, an army of non-violent protesters would move out and demonstrate their concern at various military bases and federal and Congressional offices in the Bay Area.

But organizer Kathy Lynch, of the San Jose Peace Center, said the plan would never work unless the public actively showed a great response to it.

This is a chance for students to show that, sure we're happy about the economy, and yes, most of us voted-in a pro-defense president, but no, we are not going to just stand by and watch the development of another Vietnam.

One does not need to be a Democrat to be concerned, or a Vietnam veteran to protest.

A Students for Peace member said earlier this month that she believed students on this campus are too apathetic and would probably not protest as they did in the '60s and '70s unless they felt there was an immediate threat to their lives.

College students would be the first ones drafted to fight in another war.

We do not need to be like the Vietnam veterans who were only recently consoled by the American government for their years of pain as a result of their involvement in a needless war.

The fate of liberalism on this campus is in our hands.

Can we really afford to bury it as we did with the reality of Vietnam?

Letters to the Editor

Where was our newspaper?

Editor,

On Monday, Nov. 12, the Executive Council of Business Students and the School of Business welcomed Mr. Robert Huber, vice president of AT&T, to the Student Union Ballroom for a question and answer session with students and faculty. Approximately 160 people participated in this significant event — the Spartan Daily did not.

This paper is not doing its job. It is a paper that should represent campus character and report on student issues and activities. Non-campus news is adjunctive and better left to professional dailies.

Instead, browsing through the (Nov.14) Daily, we read AP headlines from Anaheim, Ukiah, Burbank and Kenya: "Trust in doctors waning," "Pot growers protecting their crops . . ." "Sally Field continues push for artistic films" and "African fashion scene may face revolution." All of these articles undoubtedly are interesting, but inappropriate when they displace news which highlights a large number of SJSU students interacting with distinguished members of the community. So what rationale was used to dismiss this annual event, the Distinguished Bay Area Executive Day, from coverage when you were informed of it one week in advance?

Is it insignificant that a vice president of one of the largest corporations in the world commits his scarce time to answer a variety of questions about the AT&T breakup, satellite and fiber optic transmissions, new telephone/computer technology and job opportunities? Is it insignificant that 160 students representing a diversity of majors came with interest to ask these questions? Is it insignificant that this interactive event promotes the integrity of the university to the students and to the community? And is it insignificant that the event was sponsored by the biggest school on campus? The Daily's attitude toward these questions is implicit.

Now, if the "flying nun" donned African beads and turquoise and became a pot grower, the story might make good copy, but still not in this paper. You missed a fine show, as did the readers of your paper. And I emphasize "your paper." At this point, it does not appear to be ours.

The 5:15

I SAW HIM the other day. He was standing against a wall, his weight on one shoulder, legs extended slightly and crossed. He was somewhere between well dressed and personally stylish. He had his hands in his jacket and was staring at his shoes. As was his trademark of late, he looked confused.

"You don't look so good," I said.

"Must be the tears," he said. "They always do something strange to my face."

We exchanged a couple of quick understanding glances and looked away. I put my hands in my jacket and bobbed slowly up and down on the balls of my feet. I was looking into the distance, watching my breath disappear in the cold-evening air.

His face was heavy. Too heavy to let small talk make it smile. He wears a lot of faces. They go laughter and tear with his changing moods. Of his many looks, the sad face seems most out of place — like a tuxedo with tennis shoes.

"If I stay like this much longer," he said, "I'll find the meaning of life. I've been thinking too much lately. It's got me crazy — got my mind in a vise grip. I try to laugh sometimes, but the phronesis of my attempt only chokes up a tear."

Usually, because we know each other so well, we don't waste time trying to get at the problem. But the aura of this problem seemed different. I kicked a small stone and watched it careen wildly on the ground. I shuffled until he began to get annoyed with my movements. "It's been two weeks like this," I said. "I'm not going to let you get away without purging that knot from your stomach."

"Damn it hurts," he said, turning away. The skin on his face tightened as he stared harder at his shoes. He was leaning with his back to the wall, crossing his legs undecidedly and shifting his weight. "Sort of feels like I swallowed a rusty tin can and my stomach is eating away at it," he said.

His eyes were watery, and his hands were clenched inside his jacket. I dropped the pleading approach and said, "If it hurts so bad, tell me about it."

His face got tighter. He said nothing.

I TURNED ANGRILY and threw some change I had in my pocket. Far off, I heard one of the coins hit the ground. "What the hell do you want me to do?" I said. "Just stand here and watch a guy who's normally happy, go crazy with depression?" I swore at him and started to walk away, then returned to try and reason again. "Look, you've been disturbed for too long now. If I let you continue, you're going to drive me crazy with guilt and worry."

"Disturbed?" he shouted. "Disturbed? You don't know what the hell's wrong with me. Disturbed is when you break a pencil lead during a test. It's not that simple. I'm even past being blue. Blue is when you've gone three days with nothing but problems. You flunk a test, your car breaks down, you can't make rent and your girlfriend hates you. That's blue. But I'm depressed — you know what that is?"

"When your world feels like a derailed freight train," I said, like I knew it well.

"Pretty close," he said. He was sweating from his outburst and the wild arm movements that went along with it. "But it's worse. Do you know what was on that train? My hopes, dreams, and most importantly, my motivation. I can't change a thing without motivation. I feel like my world is collapsing on top of me, and I don't even have enough motivation to get out of the way."

He had his hands outstretched, in a begging way, trying to show me how terrible he felt. I could see it in his face. The same face that used to make people laugh. I was the only one who had seen his other sides. People think they know him, but they only see the special face he wears just for them. This one was different — even I hadn't seen it before.

We stared at each other for a while, saying a lot without any words. I walked home, and when I went inside, I saw him again.

The only thing that separated us was a mirror.

rather than outside."

But is the age of protest dead at SJSU?

At this same time of year in 1970, hundreds of students gathered on Seventh Street for a rally and picketing demonstration to protest Nixon's continued escalation of the Vietnam War.

This week the Nicaraguan people changed their homeland into an army camp and prepared for what they believe to be inevitable — an American invasion.

Students on this campus are facing once again a situation similar to Vietnam, but are they reacting as students did in 1970 and during the decade of the 60s?

No, they are not.

SJSU comeback stuns Fresno in NorPac championship game

By Eric Rice
Daily staff writer

The Spartan volleyball team got what it wanted Saturday — revenge and the NorPac championship — by beating Fresno State University, three games to one, in the conference title clash Saturday at Spartan Gym.

SJSU snatched the NorPac crown by playing excellent defense and using a powerful offensive attack in a come-from-behind 14-16, 15-6, 15-13, 15-8 win.

It seemed the Spartans' main incentive for winning came on Nov. 9, when the Bulldogs beat the Spartans in straight sets.

"We wanted to pay them back for that," SJSU's Danielle Spier said.

And pay them back they did. But it wasn't easy. The Spartans trailed 9-0 in the third game, and were a hair away from trailing two games to one.

"Instead of dwelling on things not going well for us in the front court, and our passing and serving," Spartan coach Dick Montgomery said, "we started playing defense and that kind of took our minds off that and got us into the flow. Once we got into the flow, everything else started to click for us. That was the key."

SJSU, which shared the regular-season title with Fresno, qualifies for a first-round NCAA game, to be played in two weeks. Fresno, which finished second in the NorPac tourney, will have to wait to see if it gets an at-large berth for the NCAAs.

The University of Oregon placed third in last weekend's tourney by beating Oregon State, 15-4, 8-15, 15-10, 15-9.

The Spartans experienced some shaky moments at times Saturday against Fresno.

Fresno opened the match with four straight points from setter Kathy Sullivan. The Spartans got the sideout on a dink by outside hitter Julie Braymen and scored the next seven points to take the lead, 7-4. SJSU increased the bulge to 14-9, seemingly having locked up the game. But the Bulldogs scored seven points to win the first game.

SJSU began the second set by serving two straight aces. The momentum continued into the game, as the Spartans mounted leads of 8-3 and 13-5. Braymen later finished off the Bulldogs with a kill.

The pivotal set of the match was game three. The Spartan offense sputtered, as they seemed intent on using a new play, a timed set from Teri DeBusk to middle blocker Felicia Schuller.

"Maybe we should have gone back to what was working for us instead of trying to change (the offense)," Montgomery said. "But we've got to do it sooner or later and it didn't cost us too bad."

But because of the change — and some power hitting by Fresno's Ruth Lawanson and Barbie Snyder — the Spartans trailed 9-0.

It wasn't over yet, though. Spurred on by defense from Spier and tough serving by Christa Cook, the Spartans narrowed Fresno's lead to 11-9.

Trailing 13-10, Spartan setter Teri DeBusk stepped to the serving line. The Spartans got a freebie point on an error by Denise Fowler, scored another on an out-of-bounds kill and tied the score on a slam from Cook, who had 14 kills.

An error by Snyder made it 14-13 Spartans. Then, a set by Linda Fournet to Christa Cook gave the Spartans the game and capped an incredible 15-4 spurt. Spier kept the momentum going in the fourth game by rattling off seven consecutive points, three of them aces.

"Danielle helped a lot. (She) played outstanding defense," Montgomery praised. "Danielle might have turned the match around by her defense and her serving."

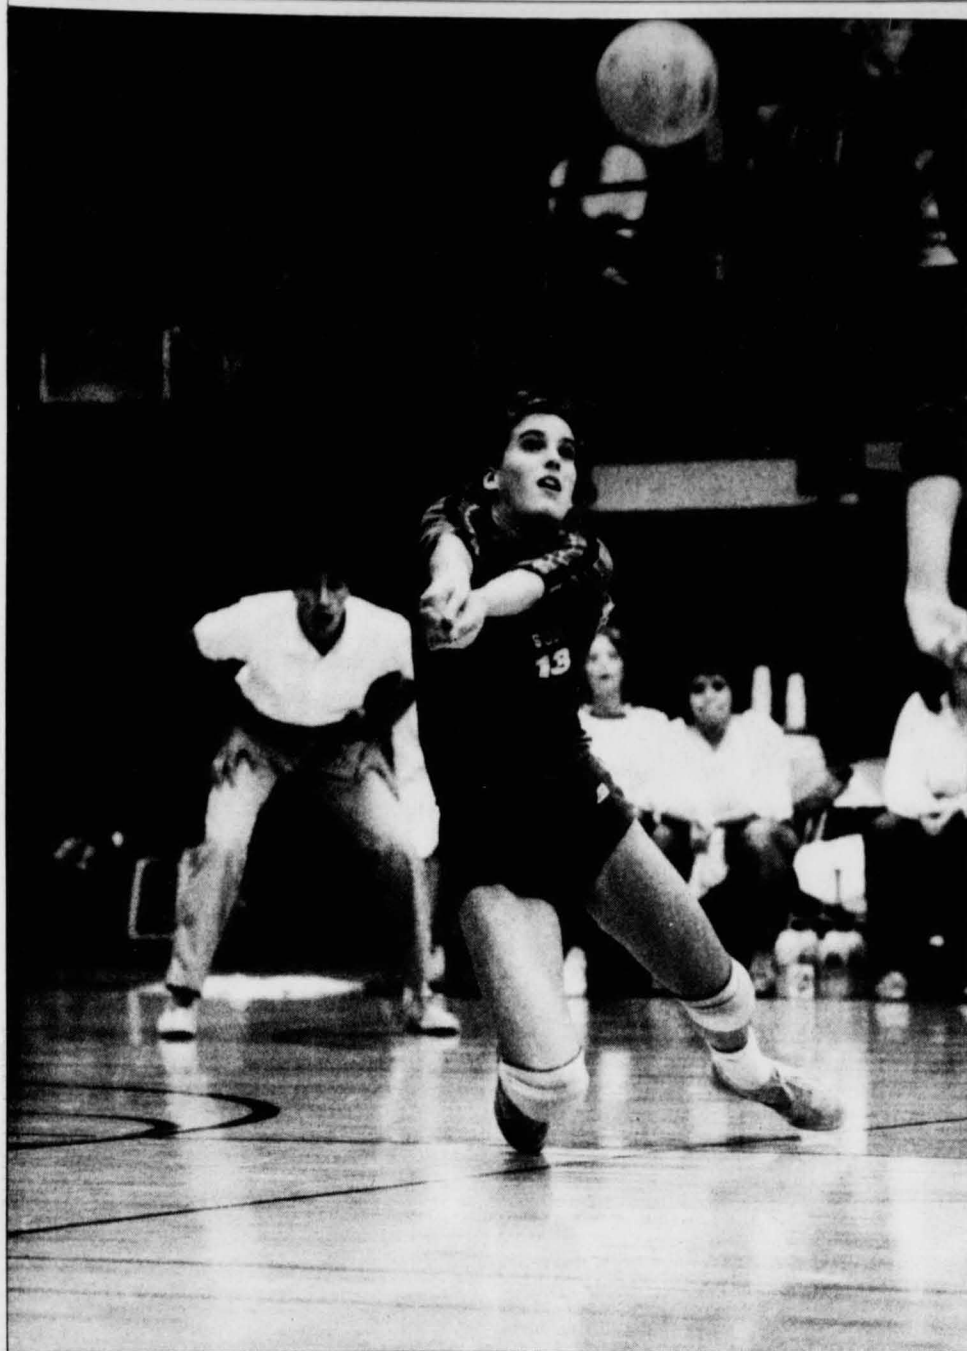

The Spartans increased their lead to 12-2. Lawanson, who had 16 kills in the match, helped bring the Bulldogs back, 12-8.

But the Spartans have a big hitter of their own in Fournet, who hammered down a couple of her 10 spikes she recorded to give SJSU a bigger cushion.

The Spartans finally won it, 15-8, when Fowler's spike attempt went wide.

That put the crowd of approximately 600 into a frenzy. "I felt like the crowd and the support we had from our fans probably was a big difference for us," Montgomery said. "Had we not had that support when things were going badly for us, who knows, we might not have been able to put it back together."

On Friday, the Spartans qualified for the finals by beating Oregon State, 6-15, 15-11, 15-5, 15-4, while Fresno beat Oregon, 15-9, 15-11, 15-9.

SJSU's Barbara Higgins saves a shot against Fresno State in the NorPac volleyball championships Saturday. Higgins helped lead the Spartans to a four-set win, 14-16, 15-6, 15-13, 15-8, to wrap up the conference title and qualify for a first-round NCAA game. Higgins, a freshman, was also named the NorPac Newcomer of the Year.

Spartan wrestlers edged by Chico State

By Marty Picone
Daily staff writer

The Spartans lost a dual-meet match Thursday night to Chico State University, 23-21, in Chico.

The Spartans led 21-17 entering the final bout of the evening, but because they don't have a heavyweight and Chico does, they lost the match by forfeit.

"Giving up the six points definitely hurt us, no doubt about it."

Wrestling

Spartan wrestling coach Dale Kestel said. "But there is really nothing we can do about it."

The Spartans jumped out to an early 21-8 lead, winning four of the first six bouts, but the Wildcats fought back, winning the last four matches.

Arnold Khanbabian (118 pounds) began the night for SJSU on a positive note, beating Oscar Ontiveros, 16-1.

In the 126-pound match, Dave Ciprian beat Aaron Jackson, 15-5.

"Dave's opponent came right out at the beginning of the match and was determined to beat him," Kestel said. "He (Jackson) was definitely the most feisty wrestler on their squad, but his aggression didn't stifle Ciprian's performance."

The Spartans' early lead proved to Kestel that his young Spartan squad clearly out-conditioned the Chico team. And even though the Spartans lost their last four bouts, the difference in each of those losses was no more than three points.

"We were definitely the better conditioned team out on the mat," Kestel said.

Kestel used the Shannon Felix-Tod Wagner match as an example. Chico State's Wagner led the 150-pound match, 9-4, in the second period, but let Felix score eight points. The match ended in a 12-12 tie.

SJSU's Paul Bockoven was the only Spartan to suffer a major defeat, losing 19-4. Bockoven, according to Kestel, was a casualty of non-conditioning.

"Paul has been sick and hasn't been in practice for the last two to three weeks," Kestel explained. "Because of this, he wasn't as in good of shape as he could have been."

SJSU rains points on Pacific, wins 33-0

By Dan Fitch

Daily staff writer
Saturday night was grim for the UOP football team, fans and vendors alike.

The Tigers spent much of the evening in Stockton picking mud out of their face masks after getting slammed into the sludge by Spartan defenders.

And the 12,900 fans spent much of the evening watching Tiger players pick mud out of their face masks, while the vendors had to peddle in a monsoon that turned their hot dog buns into Cream of Wheat.

The rain and mud didn't bother the Spartans, however, as they frolicked their way to a 33-0 win for their third straight victory, finishing with a 6-5 mark for the season.

"I'm very pleased with the strong finish," said SJSU President Gail Fullerton, clad in heavy rain gear. "And I was pleased with our fans."

The Spartan football players were also pleased with the 100 or so Spartan fans who braved the went over them."

Smith's two receptions for the game lifted his season total to 50.

The Spartan defense held the Tiger to 207 yards of total offense, sacked the quarterback four times and intercepted four passes, returning one for a touchdown.

"I knew I had to put together a good game, seeing as it was my last one," Spartan safety Frank Witherspoon said.

And a good game it was for Witherspoon, who intercepted two passes and recorded five unassisted tackles.

It wasn't defensive tackle Robert "Chris" Cross' last game, but he made a play in the fourth quarter he won't forget. Cross, a junior, picked off a Paul Berner pass at the UOP 25 and rammed into the end zone for the Spartans' final score.

"I was in the right spot at the right time," Cross said. "He threw the ball and it landed right in my arms."

Berner ended up in Terry McDonald's arms twice as SJSU's senior defensive end led the club in sacks, unassisted tackles (seven) and total tackles (nine).

The Spartans dominated the Tigers defensively, allowing only 73 yards on the ground and 134 through the air.

UOP running back James Mackey had rushed for 857 yards in 1984, but was held to 28 on 10 carries Saturday. Ron Thornton led the Tigers with 56 yards on 17 carries, a 3.3 average.

"They were a little hesitant," SJSU linebacker Vyn Goodman said. "We shut down the middle and I expected them to bounce outside, but they didn't. Maybe we scared 'em."

The UOP defense certainly didn't frighten SJSU's Frank Robinson, who ran for a career-high 109 yards on 12 carries, including a fourth-quarter scamper through the mud for 59 yards.

"They ran a defense where they had only one linebacker in the middle most of the time," Robinson said. "So we ran over the middle."

The Spartans picked up 223 yards on the ground, and accumulated 414 total yards, the third straight game they have cleared the 400 mark.

Frasco's favorite target was freshman running back Randy Walker, who grabbed six passes for 65 yards. Kevin Bowman caught five passes on the for 69 yards, which gave him 55 receptions on the season.

Senior running back Donnell Hawthorne made his first collegiate reception a big one, as he got the Spartans on the scoreboard in the first quarter with a two-yard TD toss from Frasco.

"I'm so proud of them for the year they've had," SJSU's head coach Claude Gilbert said of his players. "To finish with such a positive feeling and spirit of togetherness is great."

"I survived the season," safety Lou Patrone said. "But don't ask me how I feel Monday morning."

SJSU cruises by Alberta

Daily staff writer
Basketball teams that shoot 39 percent from the floor and 63 percent from the foul line normally have a tough time winning.

Not only did the Spartans win with those figures in their first game of the season Thursday night, they won by 24 points.

Skeptics may point out that the Golden Bears of the University of Alberta, are not the Pac-10 Golden

Basketball

Bears of Cal. But skeptics may not be aware that Alberta played Cal Wednesday night and lost by only six points.

At any rate, the Spartans won big by scoring 16 more field goals than Alberta and grabbing 19 more rebounds on the way to an 88-64 victory at San Jose Civic Auditorium.

"Offensively, we did fine," Spartan head coach Bill Berry said. "There was an overanxiousness on our part — we were explosive for short spurts — but we have better offensive players than last year."

Guard Ontario Johnson is one of them. In his first game for SJSU, Johnson led the team in scoring with 17 points and also contributed three assists and five rebounds.

"He creates a lot of problems for the other team," Berry said. "He was a little down on his game, but played well."

A junior, Johnson was 5 of 10 from the field and 7 for 8 from the foul line.

"I was expecting a better game out of myself," Johnson said. "But I demand so much."

Johnson's roommate is guard Ward Farris, who scored 14 points in only 11 minutes and also grabbed four rebounds.

"I was anxious to get the season started," Farris said. "We're still competing for starting positions."

Center Dan Curry made his debut Thursday night and tied for the team lead in rebounds with 11. A 6-8 freshman, Curry also scored 13 points, hitting 4 of 8 shots from the field and 5 of 9 from the foul line.

The Spartans tallest player, 6-9 junior forward-center Lance Wyatt, scored eight points and grabbed seven rebounds in a starting role.

Stony Evans, last year's PCAA Freshman of the Year, contracted what Berry calls "coachitis" and played only 18 minutes. He made the most of his time, however, by tying Curry for the team lead in rebounds.

Alberta's Mike Suderman was the only player who stayed on the court for the full 40 minutes, leading with 22 points. Suderman scored most of his points from the foul line, where he hit 14 of 16 free throws.

While Berry was satisfied with the Spartans play offensively, he wasn't so thrilled with their defensive work.

"We overextended ourselves and were out of position defensively," Berry said. "Our intelligence factor was not too hot."

Berry saw the opening game of 1984-5 as a test for his players, one they didn't fare too badly on.

Spartan women's hoop team finishes second in tournament

The Spartan women's basketball team opened its season with a second-place finish in the Cal Poly Classic Tournament at Cal Poly San Luis Obispo Thursday and Friday nights.

Led by Spartans' Roberta Law-

Basketball

son and Dana Foster, SJSU defeated the Gauchos of UC-Santa Barbara, 79-61, Thursday, but lost to the Ant-eaters of UC-Irvine, 58-48, Friday.

Lawson and Foster, both voted to the all-tournament team, combined for 57 points in the Spartans' two games.

Lawson, a forward-center, led Spartan scorers with 33 points, 22 against Santa Barbara and 11 against Irvine, and collected 30 rebounds.

"Roberta totally dominated the boards with her rebounding on defense," SJSU head coach Sharon Chatman said. "She was also one of the key scorers for us throughout the tournament. She was one of two pivotal players for us."

The second pivotal player for SJSU was Foster.

Foster, a junior guard, was 11 of 18 from the field and 2 of 2 from the foul line for 24 points during the tournament.

"Dana was the best point guard in the tourney," Chatman said. "It's very unusual to see guards on all-tourney teams, very unique. It's not that they're not contributing to the team, but it's a case of just being overlooked. But Dana's play was outstanding."

Center Rhoda Chew began her fourth season for the Spartans with a 12-rebound and 26-point performance in the two games. A 6-1 senior, she was 10 of 19 from the field and 6 of 7 from the foul line.

Even though Chatman said she was pleased with the team's offensive performance, she would like to see progress on defense.

"We have a young team, and I think that was indicative of the mistakes that we made," Chatman said. "We really need to play better defense as a team and we need to do a better job on the boards."

Chatman has an 11-women squad with only four seniors and juniors. Even though she will be working with a young team, Chatman is looking forward to a successful season.

"I feel real positive about this squad, and I only see good things coming out of this season."

Gunman kills one in Dallas bar

DALLAS (AP) — A man walked into a bar and opened fire with a semi-automatic rifle last night, killing one person and injuring at least five others, police said.

The gunman, who was apparently carrying an AR-15 or an M-16 military assault rifle, fled after the shootings, which occurred about 5:50 p.m. at the Webb Lounge in north-west Dallas near Love Field, police Lt. David Bonicard said.

One witness told police the suspect said something about having cancer, "but we don't know the reliability of that statement," Bonicard said.

A police broadcast, however, described the man as having a cancerous growth on one side of his face and a scar on the other side.

The man was drinking in the lounge earlier in the afternoon, Bonicard said. Witnesses told police he left and returned about 45 minutes later carrying a bulky paper package.

Witnesses said he pulled the rifle out of the package and opened fire. One of those injured was the bar's manager, Bonicard said.

Bonicard said police know of no motive for the shootings, noting that witnesses said the man hadn't argued with any patrons before leaving the first time.

About 15 people were in the bar when the shootings occurred, Bonicard said.

One of the victims, Clifford Smith, 54, of Lewisville, died after he was brought to Parkland Memorial Hospital, hospital spokesman Claude McCain said.

Two other male victims taken to Parkland were in critical condition, while a fourth was in fair condition, McCain said.

One woman and one man were taken to St. Paul Hospital's emergency room, where nursing supervisor Joyce Clemence said both were in stable condition.

Three killed in helicopter fire

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Fire broke out aboard a helicopter as it lifted a piece of artillery during a training mission yesterday, killing three Marines, injuring at least 11 others and leaving three missing, officials said.

Seventeen servicemen were aboard the $22 million CH-53E helicopter — the Marines' newest and largest — including five crewmen and 12 passengers, and rescuers were combing the area Monday night for the missing, said Lt. S.B. Jack of Camp Lejeune, who provided the casualty figures.

The helicopter was lifting a 155mm howitzer when the craft caught fire, said Capt. Craig Fisher of Camp Lejeune's public affairs office, but he said he didn't know if the copter had crashed or landed normally.

Jack termed the accident a "hard landing."

Anthony Rothfork, spokesman for the Marine Corps in Washington, D.C., said the helicopter did crash, but Lance Cpl. Greg Fedorev of New River Air Station just south of Camp Lejeune, where the craft was based, said he couldn't confirm that.

"There was a fire on board ... but as far as I know it hasn't been confirmed that there was a crash," said Fedorev.

Reporters were not allowed near the site where the helicopter went down.

Some injured men had been taken to the U.S. Naval Hospital on base, Fisher said. A hospital spokesman refused to comment on their conditions.

The fire broke out around 2:30 p.m. while the craft was over "Landing Zone Penguin" at Camp Lejeune, Fedorev said.

Fisher said the helicopter was on a routine training mission to support the 1st Battalion, 10th Marines.

The occupants of another helicopter flying nearby radioed the air station about the fire, and the burning helicopter went down shortly thereafter, said Capt. Norma Stewart of the New River Air Station.

The CH-53E Super Stallion helicopter is the "largest type in the free world," said Rothfork. It can carry 55 troops or 32,200 pounds.

It couldn't be determined how severely the craft was damaged, said Sgt. Ann Purcell of New River Air Station.

Ms. Stewart said she had no identifications of those killed or injured.

High voter turnout for the REC's narrow victory

Spartan Daily's exit polling draws criticism from Barrett

"A margin of 111 votes cannot be considered a mandate and I think the election will be considered invalid," Dougherty said.

Dougherty says that the pro-REC groups campaigned unfairly with help from non-student groups, such as people from the Alumni Association. Additionally, he said poll workers were visibly pro-REC.

"They had pro-REC balloons at the polls and were wearing 'support the REC' buttons while they worked," Dougherty added.

Campaign expenditures added up on both sides before the election. But the pro-REC groups outspent the anti-REC groups by a wide margin.

SUBOD allocated $1,000 for campaign materials and $5,000 for what they called informational material. Prior to the election period, SUBOD spent $4,500 for information packets on four Rec Center plans. Dougherty said his group spent approximately $400.

Dougherty believes the $9,500 SUBOD spent beyond the $1,000 allocated to the pro-REC campaign should be included as part of the campaign spending because it did not give both sides of the issue and was visibly pro-REC.

"Students don't realize that the money SUBOD spent came out of student fees. Essentially, their fees were used to tell them how to vote," Dougherty said.

Dougherty is checking into legal action to see if he can get a free trial from the A.S. Judiciary. The judiciary two weeks ago threw out nine of Dougherty's campaign complaints.

"If my complaints are found to be valid then the election surely will be found invalid," Dougherty said.

Last week's election represented the third Rec Center vote that SJSU students have participated in. In the first election, which was held in Spring 1982, students approved a Rec Center. Last spring students voted down the idea.

Student Union Director Ron Barrett began working on the project in fall 1981. Friday Barrett said he was extremely pleased that the Rec Center issue won.

"I was not surprised the Rec Center passed. I was hopefully optimistic all along," Barrett said.

Barrett said he believed the Spartan Daily exit poll in Thursday's paper was manipulative.

"I think the exit poll was unfortunate because it seemed it was a prediction," he said. "That's a good way to get a NO vote to come out to the polls. I believe the exit poll was an extension of the editorial stand into the news content."

Spartan Daily Editor Mark Katches said the Daily planned to announce the results regardless of the tallies.

ry's lawsuit," Schneider said.

"It's wrong that Larry can continuously make unproven, reckless charges," Schneider said. He said Dougherty's contentions wrongfully give people the impression that the A.S. is continually involved in illegal government conduct.

"It's like when someone gets accused of raping a small child," Schneider said. The accusation may be untrue, Schneider said, but the question of the person's innocence has been raised.

"Still you're always going to wonder," he said. "Is that guy guilty or not?"

"I think someone needs to teach Larry a lesson," Schneider said. "He can't point the finger and raise the question of someone's character."

Dougherty's many charges creates a negative attitude for the school and for him, Schneider said.

"The frivolous filing of charges damages the character and reputation of the Student Union Board of Directors, the A.S. Board of Directors, and the school itself," Schneider said. "These things that he states gets out into the community media and gives us a bad reputation," he said.

By possibly filing a civil suit, Schneider said he hopes to end Dougherty's pattern of contesting student government actions.

"I'm not the type to normally pursue something like this," Schneider said, referring to the possible lawsuit. "Larry needs to find out this isn't a healthy way of doing things."

Dougherty said he is not worried about Schneider's legal threat. Although the rest of the board members declined to comment on Schneider's proposed lawsuit at the meeting, they undertook some legislative action of their own.

The board named SJSU students Sean Lyndon, Frank Martin and Scott Allen to the A.S. Election Board for one-year terms.

A.S. won't hear complaint

formed. Dougherty made his appeal to the board four hours after the judiciary meeting adjourned.

A stipulation in Act 36 states that the A.S. board and president will be informed of the judiciary's decision if the case involves A.S. regulations of its constitution. When Dougherty appealed to the board at the meeting, it marked the first time several board members had heard the outcome of the judicial meeting.

After hearing presentations from both parties, Mack ruled on the complaint.

"In both cases," Mack said, "I ruled in favor of the defendant."

Mack also said that Dougherty could not be held responsible for knowing whether the board was informed of the judiciary's decision.

"It's not either parties' responsibility to inform the A.S. of the decision," Mack said. "That falls upon the chief justice."

After yesterday's hearing, Dougherty said he submitted a letter to the judiciary and the A.S. Election Board requesting the A.S. board and the Student Union Board of Directors postpone action on the Rec Center until judiciary hearings concerning election code violations have concluded.

Dougherty said it is conceivable that last Wednesday and Thursday's special election could be ruled invalid if the judiciary rules on the pending complaints in his favor.

Dougherty said Mack has agreed to pursue the matter.

Fraternity helps in remodeling center

By Paul Ruffner
Daily staff writer

Kurt Mackey, Housing for Independent People staff member, was looking for a service-oriented group of hard-working people interested in getting the job done.

The job was to convert a carport into a classroom/office. The group he found to get the job done was SJSU's Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

Housing for Independent People is an 11-member program started in 1981 in San Jose to help developmentally disabled people, also known as "slow learners," to care for themselves through a two-year process.

Mackey, a psychology graduate of Creighton University in Omaha, Neb., recently came to California to work as a Jesuit volunteer with HIP.

"I volunteered my time for a year to help with these people," he said. "I had a list of 80 different positions to choose from and I chose this one because I wanted to see California."

His first assignment at the center was to find volunteers to perform the carport conversion.

Mackey, a Phi Kappa Psi alumni, immediately thought to call some fraternities for help.

"I got a list of fraternities and ATO was the first on the list," he said.

ATO has a "help week" every year and Mackey offered the project to them as a way to fulfill their community service requirements.

"This was just an option for them and they accepted it," he said.

The center located on Page Street near Meridian Avenue and San Carlos Street, consists of two buildings with a carport sandwiched between them.

Mackey said HIP's philosophy is based on normalization.

"It was started because the disabled were treated as if they had to be taken care of, but the philosophy of the program is that they can take care of themselves," he said.

Mackey said many relatives of "slow learners" are still very insecure about allowing their loved ones to live on their own.

"But we're trying to convince them that this is the way to go," he said.
