Crowd burns 30 passbooks

By Beth Johnson

A crowd of more than 70 women and men gathered Friday night to burn ceremonial passbooks at a rally against apartheid in South Af-rica in front of the Federal Building downtown as a part of Women's Week activities.

The passbooks list the name, age, sex, race and occupation of the holder. Whites are not required to carry them.

Joanne Bellizi, founder and leader of the Bay Area Free South Africa Movement, spoke to the auand explained that the passbooks were an unfair require-ment that label South African blacks as second class citizens

Chanting "Women unite to free South Africa," the group protested the struggle of black women in South Africa. About 30 members of the crowd wore banners with the names of South African women who were killed in the apartheid struggle or who are currently impris-

Karen Hester, chairwoman of the event, said the banners were representative of the women who have lost their lives because of apartheid.

Bellizi spoke to the group about her feelings on apartheid.
"In South Africa, apartheid is the logical conclusion to racism," she said.

She said that in 1956, more than 20,000 women of all races gathered at the capital in South Africa to demand the withdrawal of passbooks for women and the repeal of passbook laws

'They had a vision and theme to their movement," Bellizi said. 'We must continue their vision.

She invited people to come forward and burn passbooks, which were symbolic of the ones South African women are required to carry at all times. Bellizi told the crowd that last year, 167 black people died in South African detention camps

'Twenty-two of them were listed by the government as natural-cause deaths," Bellizi said.

The rest, she said, were either killed by other prisoners or the po-

IRA money begin today

The SJSU Instructionally Re-lated Activities Committee begins funding request hearings today to decide how to distribute $270,488 to 10 student programs.

Representatives from the 10 pro-grams are requesting a total of $564,-872 or twice the amount available. The committee consists of four students, two faculty members and two administrators.

Programs qualify for IRA dollars if students participating in the pro-grams earn academic credit toward an undergraduate or graduate degree. Students who participate in the program must also receive a grade evaluation of their performances. Faculty members participating in the program must receive faculty workload credit.

In addition the university president must recognize the program as a qualifying one.

The committee's source of funds is from a $10 fee collected each year from students as part of their California State University fees.

The committee's allocation decisions must be approved by SJSU

President Gail Fullerton. The committee met Thursday for an organizational meeting and decided to hold two marathon sessions in which they will hear requests and decide how to divide the $270,488 fis-

In the past the committee has held two funding request hearings and a separate session to decide how to allocate the money. This year the committee will make its allocation decisions immediately after hearing the remaining requests Thursday.

Associated Students President Michael Schneider, who chairs the committee, convinced the committee to hold the two sessions because he said he wanted the IRA funds allo-cated before the A.S. Board of Directors decides next month how to dis-tribute its funds to the programs.

By allocating the IRA monies first. Schneider said, the board will be better able to evaluate the programs' needs for A.S. dollars

'The committee will deliberate as late in the evening as it takes, Schneider said. "However, if the committee (members) feel that they need more time to deliberate, then we will hold another meeting. This Schedule is not a fixed schedule."

The 10 programs requesting funds are: Men's Athletics, $110,096; Women's Athletics, $113,313; the Theatre Arts Department, $175,270; the Music Department, $100,000. the Music Department, $98,190; the Poetry Workshop, $3,300; the Art

YESS charged with false advertising

A complaint filed by Blue and Gold Party Manager Scott Hartman before the Associated Students Election Board yesterday charges the Your Effective Student Support party with misleading and false advertising in their campaign flyer.

Hartman wrote that the YESS party is misrepresenting facts in its brochure. Hartman points to two items listed under accomplishments of the YESS party. One is the con-struction of the garage at Fourth and San Carlos streets and the other is the implementation of a parking shuttle underneath the I-280 overpass.

Hartman wrote that he spoke with Keith Opalewski in Traffic Management and Francis Masson of the Santa Clara County Transit District and was assured by both of them that the other in front of Clark Library no student figured in with the decision to begin either project.

The charges violate Section IV of Act 9 of the SJSU Constitution. It states that "false or misleading ad-

Code and shall subject the political party responsible to referral by the for an open hearing."

Scott Allen, chairman of the Election Board, said the issue will now go directly to the A.S. Judiciary.

Another issue presented to the board was a request by the Business Study Committee to present a poll to the voters on both election days. The group asked that the people manning the polls distribute the poll to those students that vote.

The request was turned down because a precedent may be set and other groups would try to have polls taken by the election workers.

The election board confirmed the voting places on campus. One will be in front of the Spartan Bookstore and Both will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday. A third voting location in front of Sweeney Hall will be open from 8 a.m. to approximately 2:30 p.m.

The committee will meet at 8 a.m. Friday and the review process should "go into the night," Kincaid

"We're going to chop out about $400,000," he said. Last Friday the final four groups requesting money appeared before the committee. Hillel, the Spartan Daily, Radio-Television and Greek Week committees gave reasons why each should receive funding.

Rhonda Rosenblatt, a represen-tative of Hillel, said the group received $1,000 last year from the Jewish Federation for program support. Hillel will request more funding from the Federation after spring break The group still needs $1,166 from A.S for publicity, which will not be paid by the Federation, Rosenblatt said.

She said the funds the group got from A.S. last year were used for advertisements in the Spartan Daily Hillel requested $950 from A.S. last year, but received $200, she said.

The Spartan Daily requested $31,958. Dennis Brown, chairman of the Department of Journalism and Mass Communications, said the newspaper ended last year with a deficit of $39,000.

'My hope is that after this year we should at least break even and have the prior year's debts paid off,"

not borrow money from a bank, but should have a cash flow reserve to start the newspaper each semester. Last semester, there was no money to start the newspaper up, but the university came through with an emergency fund. The Daily can now with an have a cash flow reserve of $50,000, Brown said

The Radio-Television News Center, which has daily radio news programs on KSJS, and a weekly telenews program on KTEH-

Channel 54, requested $14,875.

Broadcasting Associate Ken Blase said $750,000 of KTEH's budget was cut by the Santa Clara County Board of Education. The station will exist, even with a limited broadcast day," he said. The daytime educational programs would remain intact even if more cuts were made, he said.

The committee also discussed what would happen if students asked to use the equipment bought with A.S. funds. Theoretically, if student fees were used to buy TV cameras, then all students would be entitled to use the equipment. It would only be a problem if students asked to use the equipment, Blase said, because the news staffs constantly need it. Kincaid said the problem could be solved by giving the news center priority over the use of the equipment.

Greek Week requested $3,295 from A.S. for next year's events.

Tests are needed to curb drug use

Urinalysis to check for drug use among employees is long overdue

Workers earning wages from their employers should be expected to perform at the best of their abilities which is impossible when they are on drugs. One way to insure good workers is by testing for drug usage through urinary

It is not the legality of the testing which should be questioned, it is the legality of the drug taking.

It's hard to believe that some people would be upset about drug screening if they weren't taking drugs.

According to a random scientific survey conducted by the San Jose Mercury News, employees in Silicon Valley

Mariann Hansen

believe there are drug users among themselves. Of the 1,-509 workers surveyed, 35.3 percent said they think some of their co-workers use drugs and 43.6 percent said some work under the influence of alcohol.

A 1981 study by the National Research Triangle Institute of North Carolina indicated $65 billion is lost each year in American industry due to drug related accidents, rehabilitation programs, productivity loss and absente-

Administrators should not be criticized for wanting to protect themselves from losing money by instituting preemployment and spot checks for drug usage capitalistic society the best way to gain profit is to have workers who are peak performers. Employees who take mind-altering substances which fog their brains do not work to their potential.

The issue especially is pressing in the high technological industry surrounding the San Jose area. Employees using technical equipment need to be alert — not falling asleep from smoking a joint or getting the jitters from snorting cocaine.

Employees operating automobiles also need to be checked. Those who drive buses, trucks and taxis must be alert when transporting goods and people. Buses and trains move thousands of passengers daily and some trucks transport dangerous chemicals. They are a danger to themselves and others on the road when they drive under the influence of drugs. Testing these employees for drugs will make our highways safer.

Imagine driving down the freeway and some drug-crazed truck driver loses control of his rig and spills trichloroethane or hydrocholric acid. Your life and your passengers' lives are endangered needlessly. If that driver had been detained because of a positive drug test, no one would have been in danger.

Some employees have complained that America will become a police state because drug testing in the work place has become so popular. Some claim it is an invasion of privacy. But if people know they will be tested when they apply for a job and if employees are informed that spot checks will be made, they can be prepared and not Companies, such as New United Motor Manufactur-Inc. in Fremont, have applicants sign release forms indicating they know they are being screened for drugs as part of the physical examination.

Drug testing is also a positive step in curbing the drug problem in the United States. Testing is used as a control in major sporting competitions, including the Olympics, and some athletes have been stripped of their medals.

If there were no drug users there would be no objection to being tested. The employers would be happy to have drug-free workers and employees would feel comfortable that their employers knew they were "clean.

Malpractice may mean mortalities

Doctors' errors can cost lives. In one case, 160 patients in the Bay Area received AIDS-infected blood from the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank in San Francisco. Nine of the patients have died so far. The donors were later diagosed as having AIDS - after the donation of blood, not before. The most recent patient to die from a transfusion was Anne Asaro. Afterward, the Asaros' family doctor re-ported he believed that Asaro's husband had contacted AIDS through her saliva. If true, the information would have a profound effect on the medical world and society in After extensive and exhaustive tests, doctors concluded that Asaro did not have AIDS but was suffering heart problems and other ailments associated with old

Nothing was conclusive before doctors let the story out, causing a probable, major public scare.

In another incident, doctors erred while operating on retired Miami Herald photographer Bob East. The operation was performed to remove malignant cancer that had affected his eye, his right cheekbone, and upper right jaw. There was no alternative, but death

During the operation, an opthalmology resident carried an unmarked vial containing glutaraldehyde, a formaldehyde-like chemical, into the operating room and left it on a tray there. Later a circulating nurse asked what was in the vial and another doctor replied CSF for cerebrospinal fluid. The vial was labeled CSF and injected into East's spinal column. No one realized the error until the opthalmologist came back and asked where his glutaraldehyde was. By that time it was too late. The operation left East brain dead.

This tragedy could have been prevented and was not. Why in the world would a doctor, still in training, bring an unmarked chemical into a operating room and leave it there. Maybe because he didn't think about it?

Another doctor later identified the substance without cking the CSF to make certain it was the right chemical. The substance was later injected into the patient. It was questioned whether CSF should be reinjected after the first vial.

This rare and unfortunate occurrence (East's accidental death) was not that rare because it happened again. This time a six-month pregnant cancer patient was injected with the wrong drug. The drug paralyzed her and is possibly fatal. A 21-year-old woman will probably die because a staff resident misread the label on the syringe. On top of this the doctors told the woman she may not survive, but that the fetus is fine.

What takes the cake, however, is when a Santa Clara County judge awarded $47,000 to a doctor who took care of his own mother for the past three years, mowed her lawn, and paid her medical expenses. He was suing the county's public guardian office for $109,283 because they accused him of mismanaging his mother's property in his own interest and had taken her away from him and put her in an

In this country, anyone who has symptoms of an ailment who can afford to see a doctor will go see him. Because of this doctors are treated like gods. Prospective patients may want to do much careful thinking before going in for any major physical treatment.

Maybe what is needed now in the medical community is strict legislation on medical procedures for medical personnel to follow. Legislation would include reading la bels properly and realizing that unmarked labels should not be injected into patients until they are sure of the substance contained within, or maybe residents should not be allowed to handle major cases or surgery. Perhaps the medical society needs to be sued a couple of times to be

Society need not treat doctors like gods because doctors are human and make mistakes too.

Archaic amendment lives on

Bobby Celestine amazes me with his ignorance of American history along with his grave misunderstanding of the United States Constitution.

America was not born out of British attempts to en-force gun control on the colonists. God knows who told Celestine that. The American Revolution, if one could call it that, was an economic struggle between the colonies and England, and eventually led to war.

People like John Wayne or Bernhard Goetz played no part in the planning of it, so do not get any wild ideas; Bobby. Regardless, doesn't it seem logical for a group of people who don't have a standing army to take up arms when their protectors become the aggressors? The colonists did not do it because they loved guns.

As to the Second Amendment, "The right to bear arms," it is an archaic amendment that has been abused by millions of Americans as our country has grown from 13 East Coast colonies into a 50-state continental union with a standing Armed Forces of several hundred thou-Celestine's argument is pointless. It chugs along in jumbled fashion that inevitably leads the reader into a jungle of hypocrisy, vigilantism and insanity, compli-ments of Bobby Celestine.

Victims of handgun crime would be more than satisfied it the number one murder weapon was to be eliminated because it serves no useful purpose.

I'm also sure that people like Mr. Celestine would be happy if they could still own a 12-gauge shotgun, Uzi submachine guns and other "necessary" private property for their squirrel-hunting expeditions

I say, let us compromise before someone bumps into Bobby Celestine on BART and meets their maker

Greetings

HAVE A confession to make: This may come as a surprise to those who know me, but maybe it will clear up a few discrepancies

I'm an illegal alien. There, it's done. It wasn't so hard after all. Now it won't be so hard to tell you that I was sent to your world as a scout from a planet in a neighboring galaxy.

It wasn't a coveted mission. It was either this, my superiors informed me, or the Kurok front.

San Jose was chosen as the drop site for several reasons - the chief one being that, since this area had experienced a high rate of change in the last 20 years, it would be ready for almost anything. Also, it was assumed that if I could survive in an environment where the quality of water and air resembled that of a bus terminal in New Jersey, my race could also make the transition.

My original wish was to take on the role of a Hollywood casting director, but my superiors felt the temptation would be too great. The decision was made that I would take my place in your society as a student

This decision mystified me. At first glance, the life of a student didn't seem to have all that much going for it. Most students, I observed, sacrificed and struggled to cover the costs of the basic necessities of life — rent, food, tuition and the price of a Prince concert ticket.

I was also disturbed by the fact that most students were so caught up in feverishly working oward a future goal, they had little time to enjoy

Despite these shortcomings, I eventually came around to my superior's way of thinking: The role of a student was endowed with enormous potential. It was easier and often more fulfilling than working swing shift in a can factory. It was somewhat more noble an endeavor than repossessing refrigerators or hosting TV game

In time, I even learned to enjoy certain aspects of this lifestyle, although Jim Gilles and the passage of the Rec Center were a little hard to ILLES WAS JUST a young kid who had a lot of problems and fell in with the wrong crowd. As for the Rec Center, I couldn't figure out why students were being asked to fund a $20 million playground when it was next to impossible to receive decent counseling services on campus or find a table in the Student Union at

In some respects my transition to your planet wasn't so difficult - my world, like yours, is ruled by a small minority of ruthlessly ambitious men who make things tough on the rest of us Joes. Ideologies clash and the energy of generations is consumed in the ensuing conflict.

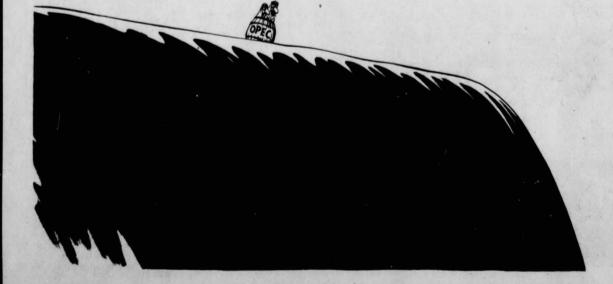

Of course, there were a few things I had to get used to. It became necessary to be informed of events occurring simultaneously throughout the planet, while having absolutely no power to alter

It also became necessary to assume the responsibilities of trying, in some small way, to put as many pieces of the puzzle together as possible, while knowing that the vision would be partial and flawed by illusion.

Even though my life on your world would be greatly influenced by people whose vision of reality was even cloudier than my own, I would have to live with it.

But, as we say on my planet, "Where there is life and death there is hope."

Thursday: The mission revealed.

met by his audience in the same manner — with gentle respect. Smith, a traveling musician and singer associated with Maranatha Christian Ministries, gave free con-certs at the Student Union Amphitheater yesterday and last night at Morris Daily Auditorium.

The singer/guitarist performed in the amphitheater to a receptive crowd of about 50, without any problems of heckling or rain.

Under cloudy skies, started with a parable-type tune about a house of sand made by fools which blew away and a house of stone (symbolizing the Christian life) which remained.

Smith's strong deep voice, sound-ing somewhat like Neil Diamond's, and his strumming of a bass guitar drew more interested spectators. The singer, clad in wool sweater, blue jeans and Nikes, said he had a cold because he had just come from another school where the weather was warmer. I don't know what you guys did to get this cold weather," Smith laughed. "Perhaps I should join the Science Department here.

He told the audience that it was much quieter and "laid back" than the one at the University of California at Berkeley where he performed last "By this time at Berkeley, I was given the privilege of meeting Jesus Christ," Smith said jokingly. "He came up to me and introduced him-self but he didn't look like Jesus Smith's next song dealt with whether Christ was everything he had claimed to be when he was on at Smith's concert. "Luckily he was not intelligent enough to load it," he said with a serious laugh.

Before he was a Christian, Smith was a "burned out doper in a rock band," he told the audience.

Smith said in an interview after the concert that as a teenager in his Louisville, Kentucky hometown, he played in several rock bands. At age 16, a manager from New York signed up Smith's band on a recording con-

"Seeing my manager converted, wanting my marriage to be held to-gether and seeing people sing with real meaning, were the three things that led me to Christ," Smith said.

Smith and his wife became Christians and have been married for 13 years, he said. Since becoming a Christian, Smith has attended Bible college, ministered on the streets, toured with writer/minister David Wilkerson and from 1975 has performed as a traveling musician on 100-120 campuses a year.

"To confront people with the

A member of the crowd expressed his feelings about Smith's music.

Warmerdam Field. The win upped the Bulldogs' dual meet record to 2 1, while SJSU suffered its first loss in its first dual meet However, Spartan head coach Marshall Clark was not disappointed in his team.

"I'm not happy with the score, obviously, but I am really pleased with our overall performance," he said.

Two of the main reasons for Clark's pleasure had to lie in the efforts of SJSU's 400-meter relay team and Spartan shot putter Jim Doehr-

The relay team, which consists of Sherman Jones, Reggie Grimes, Frank Robinson and Craig Arm-strong, blazed to a victory with a clocking of 39.83 seconds That time, the fifth best in SJSU history, not only set meet and field records, but also qualified the foursome for the NCAA outdoor championships on May 28 through June 1 in Austin, Texas. Doehring, who qualified for the outdoors back on March 2, broke his own shot put record for the second time in one week with a heave of 66-212. In the process, his toss also set meet and field records. In that relay win, the two teams were even after the first 100 meters, but Grimes gave the Spartans the lead after the second leg. Robinson maintained the advantage, and the anchor, Armstrong, held off Fresno, which finished at 40.50.

"I didn't think we ran that fast, but when I crossed the tape, I knew we had run much faster," Armstrong said.

Robinson added, "We've been looking forward to this. It was only our second time out, but we really wanted to beat Fresno.'

"Just as bad as I wanted to get around the corner in the Fresno football game," said the former running back, referring to his two-point conversion that beat the Bulldogs 18-17 earlier this year.

Although the Spartans lost the overall meet by 29 points, they did dominate the throwing events. Dennis DeSoto finished second in the shot at 57-0 3/4, while Kjell Bystedt (231-10) and Fred Schumacher (208-4) took one-three in the hammer

Tom McGraw won the javelin throw with a mark of 219-8, and

Dave Sweeney was third at 181-9. Fresno's Paul Bender took the discus with a qualifying throw of 197-3, but SJSU's Fred Struble (170-6) and Doehring (167-7) finished two-three Spartan weight coach Mike Weeks said he expected his throwers to dominate "because of where we were compared to them."

Weeks added, "If you break it down by event, we were a little above average today."

Where SJSU struggled was in the jumping events. Fresno out-scored the Spartans 28½-7½ in these four events despite Larry Weldon's first-place finish in the triple jump

On the brighter side for SJSU, Armstrong captured the 400-meters and Robinson took the 200-meters.

In the 400, Armstrong broke the meet record with a time of 46.92.

"It was only my second quarter (400-meters) since '83," said Armstrong, who did not compete last season. "I felt good, but I didn't suspect I ran that fast. I'll soon be in better shape.'

Robinson edged out teammate

Grimes 21.56 to 21.59 to win the 200. "I didn't feel that comfortable, really. I still have a long ways to go," said Robinson, who also sat out last season

The only other Spartan winner on the day was Dan Gonzalez in the 5.000-meters. Gonzalez won by about 100 meters and broke the meet record with a clocking of 14:15.06.

Using NCAA scoring rules (five scores rather than three), however, SJSU scored its new season best and also topped the Aggies (248.95). SJSU Coach Rich Chew said he was pleased with the new record but wishes the Spartans would have performed better in the PCAA phase.

"I look at it (the record) with mixed feelings," Chew said. "Our top guys really didn't perform that well."

Clark finds life after Candlestick

San Francisco's Candlestick Park isn't exactly Alcatraz, but it's close enough geographically and, for some baseball players, psychologically as Outfielder Jack Clark wanted to escape for a long time but finally decided he wouldn't make it. Naturally, that was when he was swapped to St. Louis, and now he will just have to learn to get along without the wicked winds of Candlestick

There have been some windy days here this spring with stiff gusts sweeping across the practice field Clark, shagging fly balls, never hesifor a moment. These were minor league breezes compared with some of the huffing and puffing he had lived through in the wind tunnel home of the Giants

"This wind is nothing," he said. "It's coming straight at you, right in your face all the time. In San Francisco, you could be standing near three trees and they'd be blowing in three different directions. And 15 feet away from you, it wouldn't be blow-

So Clark spoke out, seeking a

It looked like he had his wish in late 1983 when the Giants made a sixplayer swap with Pittsburgh. The deal died, though, when the Pirates wanted to hang on to second baseman

Thompson for the September pennant push.

Then, last season, Clark got off to his best start with All-Star type statistics before hurting a knee game against San Diego. After play ing on it for six weeks, he learned that he had torn cartilage. His season was over before July

With the Giants out of the race, Clark did not rush his rehabilitation But the time away from baseball mellowed him. "I was at peace with myself," he said. "The thought of being traded was the farthest thing from my mind. Mentally, I was pre-

So then he was traded.

"I heard about it from my little girl's pre-school teacher," he said.

You probably knew it before I did." The deal sent four players to the - outfielders David Green and Gary Rajsich, pitcher Dave LaPoint and shortstop Jose Gonzalez for Clark. It took about two weeks to complete because the Cardinals wanted the knee examined and there Miramontes: Making funding more available to as many campus groups as possible. In the Associated Students, for Special Allocations, if you miss an opportunity to ask for funds, you've got to wait five weeks before you go before the committee (I would) like to make it a weekly opportunity. As it is now, it is very cumbersome. It takes too many hours. Changes would make it easier for groups to apply for Special Allocations and easier on the board.

What about Special Allocations? Miramontes: They provide groups the opportunity to offer pro-They grams that benefit the student body (I would be) Chairman of the Com-

What would you change? Miramontes: What I'd like to change is the BASS outlet. It has lost, up to this time, up to $600. It needs an additional $3,000 in allocations to keep it running. I would like to temporarily close the BASS outlet until the REC Center is built. Until (the REC Center) is built, the BASS outlet could cost the A.S. $20,000 by that time, three years from now. We should have done market studies. Find out where the market is and who it is. We could make the BASS outlet profitable, perhaps, (when the REC center is open) and maybe then it could generate profit.

What about the money that Spartan Shops is giving to the A.S.?
Miramontes: With $35,000 you can start funding for student groups and Special Allocations. RAFI (Revised Automatic Funding Iniative) groups are only getting a small per-centage of what they should be getting and at the same time the A.S. bureacracy here is getting fatter and yet they allocate themselves more dent working on his MBA, specializing in finance. He is running for the executive position of Controller as a Blue & Gold party candidate. Spartan Daily reporter Chuck Carroll spoke with Warren.

What qualifications does the office of Controller require, and what qualifications do vou have which make you stand out as a candidate?

Warren: The office requires omeone who can handle budgets and fiscal legislation. Among the duties of the controller are preparing a written budget to be published each semes

My biggest qualification for the job is that I'm training to be a controller of a corporation when I get my MBA. Although I haven't had any job experience as a controller, I've handled budgets and studied fiscal policy in classes tem received $3,000 to spend in Greek Week. I'm not saving that's not justified, but it's something I'd look at.

Why did you choose to run with the Blue & Gold Party?

We've heard criticisms from some people about the special allocations process. Do you think the system needs revamping?

Warren: I don't know. I haven't been able to get much information from the current administration. 1 think it's because I'm in the Blue & Gold Party Stafford Hebert has said one of the party's goals is to lower the prices of food and textbooks at Spartan Shops. Could you explain that?

Warren: We want to look into having the prices of food and textbooks lowered so the businesses just break even. That's one definition of non-profit. Another definition, the one in effect for Spartan Shops, returns profits back to the students through A.S. allocations. We want the money to stay in the pockets of students instead of spending it on some-thing from which they won't necessarily benefit themselves. This is another example of how we will help all the students

Tim Kincaid: YESS party candidate

Tim Kincaid is the Your Effec tive Student Support party candidate for Controller. Kincaid is a senior majoring in electrical engineering Spartan Daily reporter Mariann Hansen talked with Kincaid.

What do you see as the most important issues facing the office of controller?

Kincaid: The most important issue for the office of controller is the procedure by which allocated money is spent. I feel the current procedure are too restrictive. If elected I will lighten the restrictions on monies allocated by revenue sharing to give groups more freedom in the way they are spent.

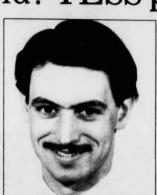

I also will work to make special allocations' monies more available to more groups. I will endeavor to alleviate the useless and needless requirements currently demanded by the special allocations procedures. I will be prompt in signing requisitions to enable groups to have quicker access to their funds.

How do you perceive your role in addressing these issues?

Kincaid: I have worked with Jean Lenart, A.S. business administrator, and Bob Martin, dean of student services, and I have gained their respect. These are two important people that, as controller, I will have to deal with. The rapport I have established with these people will enable me to address these issues.

What do you see as the qualifications for this office and what special qualifications do you possess which make you stand out as a candidate? Kincaid: There are two qualifications: fiscal responsibilities and experience. Speaking to the first one, I do not represent any particular special interest group. I feel that I know the procedures and responsibilities of the job and that one of the responsibilities is to operate the A.S.'s finances in a way that will be beneficial to the most students

I've sat on most of the committees that the current controller sits on. These committees are: special allocations, which is chaired by the controller; budget, which currently I chair; and the business study committee, which I created and chair. I also sit on the board of directors

The business affairs director is the director who works the most closely with the controller and I feel that I know more about the finances of the A.S. than any person currently running for any position. I am currently engaged in making a budget for the A.S. which requires making requests of $850,000 fit into a budget of $474,000. I have, this feel that I'm the most qualified per-son running in regards to fairness. I year, proven my fairness and objec-tivity in dealing with groups for special allocation and the budget. Many groups have commended me for speaking out favorably when, personally, their goals and my personal goals were at odds. Therefore, I feel that I have demonstrated fairness and responsibility and my knowledge of fiscal affairs.

I have authored and pushed for amendments of Act 100, which gave revenue sharing to groups in run-off and special elections, in addition to regular elections. This gives individuals more direct control over their A.S. fees. I have been working with Muriel Andrews of the International House to help give more funding directly to foreign student groups without having to go through the A.S.

I have established the business study committee which will provide more services to the students and more revenue to the A.S. which will enable us to fund more groups and organizations which provide services to the students. The goals of this committee are to establish a new business, review the businesses A.S. currently has, and to seek funding and donations from private sources.

Gorbachev could bring reform to Soviet leadership

aP.

Within the Kremlin's towering old walls, a new man has taken charge, a young Communist Party general secretary who last week sat down to a desk piled high with problems accumulated over a generation.

Analysis

After years of inaction under a parade of elderly, sickly party bosses, the stale Soviet system demands reform, a firm shakeup. And the new boss, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, 54, sounds like a reformer.

Last Monday, when he was named to succeed the late General Secretary Konstantin U. Chernenko, he spoke of a "decisive turn," of find-"creative way" to end the Soviet Union's economic stagnation. Gorbachev looks like a reformer,

"He is a classical party 'apparatchik. said Cornell University "Kremlinologist" Myron Rush, using the Russian word for a career party functionary

The economy and society he inherits are not unrelentingly bleak.

The Soviet Union is still the world's greatest storehouse of natural resources. Last year it completed two gargantuan projects — a natural gas pipeline and new railroad — that will help it tap its Siberian riches.

Trade and living standards advance steadily: Net energy exports to the non-Communist world rose 9 percent last year, domestic sales of color

What do you see as the most important issues facing you in the office of business affairs and how do you perceive your role in addressing these issues?

Jones: I think the most impor tant thing is to take care of essential needs such as textbooks and basic meals. Spartan Shops shouldn't be making a profit on such things. For example, Spartan Bookstore charges more for textbooks than Robert's Bookstore. And Spartan food outlets serving basic meals like breakfast, lunch and dinner shouldn't be making a profit. For the Pub, making a profit might be all right.

Spartan Bookstore should charge students only what it costs the bookstore to buy the book. And Spartan Foods should charge only what it costs to produce the meal.

Another important issue is the Rec Center. It should bring in as much revenue as possible while serving the students' needs. Students should receive a discount on event tickets. A higher price should be

Daniel Downey: YESS party candidate

Daniel Downey is the Your Effective Student Support party candidate for Director of Business Affairs. He is a junior majoring in finance. Spartan Daily reporter Mariann Hansen spoke with Downey.

What do you see as the most important issues facing the office of Business Affairs?

Downey: I believe the most important issue is to establish a new business run by the A.S., which will provide a service as well as generate revenues. The A.S. controls or influences between $7 million and $8 million a year - three-quarters of a million dollars of that being with the A.S., more than a half million with the Student Union and roughly five and one-half million dollars with Spartan Shops. It seems to me that lying in this money is a student business, which will be an excellent way to expand free enterprise on our campus, aid in keeping student fees down equally important, break the S.U. and Spartan Shops monopoly

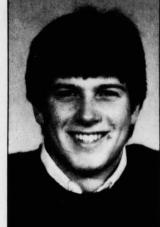

A new business, or possibly businesses, would complement existing A.S. services, which include a print shop, check cashing, and legal and counseling services. Also I would like to ease the red tape which hinders many groups attempting to compete with the S.U. and Spartan Shops ven-

Another very important issue of this campaign is the plus/minus grading system which the YESS party has endorsed as an issue. It is something that we would like to see off this campus.

How do you perceive your role in addressing these issues?

Downey: I have a personal commitment to providing fair enterprise and student services on campus. Other political parties have traditionally found it important to involve themselves with issues that are not related to students and the university community. With attention being given to external affairs, campus awareness decreases. I, as well as the YESS party, hold that it is impor-tant to use student funds only for campus-oriented activities that directly benefit the students of SJSU. What particular business would you like to see A.S. establish?

Downey: During the past semester, a business study committee was established. It had three goals. One goal was polling students to find out what the students want. It has been suggested by the A.S., but none of these are solid because they first want to take it to the students. I'm now working as a volunteer assistant to Tim Kincaid, who is currently director of Business Affairs. He worked quite extensively and he's done a good job with that. What I'd like to do now is take the issue to the students and let them decide.

Justices Byron R. White and Thurgood Marshall dissented vigor-

White said the decision "contin ues this court's dismemberment of congressional efforts to regulate campaign spending." He charged that the court "once again transformed a coherent regulatory scheme into a nonsensical, loophole-ridden patchwork."

Marshall called the invalidated spending limit "justified by the congressional interests in . . . ing political corruption and the appearance of such corruption.

But the majority decision said, "The fact that candidates and elected officials may alter or reaffirm their positions on issues in response to po litical messages paid for by the PACs can hardly be called corruption.

The decision affects only Political Action Committee funds spent independently on behalf of a presi-dential candidate, not direct contributions to candidates or their campaign organizations.

The controversy pitted the Federal Election Commission and the Democratic Party against two of the nation's largest PACs, the National Conservative Political Action Committee, and the Fund for a Conservative Majority.

Congress created the FEC in 1975 oversee the election reforms it sought. The general constitutionality of those reforms was upheld by the Supreme Court in 1976.

The $1,000 spending limit on

PACs was imposed as part of the reforms enacted after Watergate-related revelations of widespread campaign fund-raising abuses

The spending limit never had been enforced, twice having been invalidated by lower courts.

Yesterday's ruling was sparked a 1983 lawsuit by Democrats against NCPAC and the FCM, charging the committees with planning to violate the $1,000 spending limit in the 1984 presidential campaign.

The decision was hailed by NCPAC and the FCM.

The money cannot be used to pay full-time faculty, according to CSU policy.

For the past seven years the athletics programs have received more than 60 percent of the IRA money Last year these programs received 62.42 percent. This portion of the money was divided between 19 different men's and women's sport pro-

The Music Department received 10.21 percent last year of the total IRA dollars. The department divided this money among 12 programs, including the SJSU Marching Band.

The Theatre Arts Department received 7.24 percent of last year's IRA money. The department divided this cash among four programs, including KSJS, the campus radio station.

The other six programs vying for this year's funds received a total of 7.56 percent of last year's available IRA dollars. The remaining 12.57 per-cent paid for the accounting fee for processing and was used for a reserve of $23,768.

Last year's IRA committee de cided to have the reserve in case expected reven fell short of the expected IRA allocation from the CSU. The reserve allows the committee flexibility to provide the program representatives the money that was originally promised them.

Maynard Robinson, associate academic vice president of educational planning and resources and a committee member, told the committee Thursday that the reserve was almost completely used. Student committee members are Schneider, Jeff Petkevicius, Ron Maki and Mark Katches. The faculty members are Biology Prof. Ronald Prof. Ted Montemurro. The adminis-tration members are Robinson and President John Academic Vice

The three presidential candidates - Michael Finley from YESS. Stafford Hebert from BGP and Erin O'Doherty from U.S. - were given the most time to speak and respond to students' questions. They flipped a coin beforehand to determine the speaking order.

O'Doherty spoke first and said she would address the following isparking, a book co-operative, upholding student votes, upholding the Revised Automatic Funding Initiative and ensure the equitable dis-

'You're looking at a slate that's been fighting for students' rights for a long time," she said.

Speaking after Rivamonte was Finley who said he will work toward bringing back tradition to SJSU with an annual Spartigra, improving the campus community and solving the parking problem.

"YESS has four years of substantial accomplishments," he said. We're not only Your Effective Student Support, we're Your Experienced Student Support."

Hebert said BGP will increase the dialogue with city, county and state officials, find ways to cut the overhead in A.S., provide more stu-dents services and try to incorporate YESS and U.S. issues into their own platform.

"No one party has cornered the market on good ideas," he said.

Jeffery Rollerson of BGP was the first vice presidential candidate to speak. His speech was aimed at YESS, the party in power, and he said that it is a personal interest party and that the present adminis tration has done little to help students

"I think they're just running for office to put it on their resume," he

Michael Faber from U.S. spoke about the $35,000 A.S. received from Spartan Shops. He said he would like the money to be distributed more equitably to groups rather than create a new A.S. business such as a hair salon or video tape rental service.

'I personally believe that a person can go get their hair cut or rent a video anywhere within a mile of cam-Faber said. "A student group cannot go anywhere within a mile of campus and seek funds to sponsor an educational program."

Lisa Root, the current A.S. director of Community Affairs, said her experience will help her as vice presi dent. She said she has been active in improving relations between the A.S. and the community. She also responded to Rollerson's accusation that Root did not do anything in her position until two weeks ago.

"I'm sorry but I don't have any control over when toxic chemicals should come to the area, whether it's a week before the elections or not,"
Root said. "I've been very active

Tim Kincaid of YESS was the first to speak for the office of controller. He said his experience as A.S. director of Business Affairs has given him an insight to the office because he sits on the same committees as controller.

Gabriel Miramontes of the U.S. party said the special allocations process must improve and the Revised Automatic Funding Initiative that the students voted on must be upheld. If the university could equitably distribute its funds, then the RAFI groups would not be as dependent on A.S. funds, Miramontes said.

James Warren the BGP candidate addressed the board's, specifthe YESS leaders', handling of A.S. funds. He said A.S. will be wasting $1,000 sending two student representatives to Washington, D.C. to fight financial aid cuts. The issue is dead, he said, adding that he contacted Rep. Norman Mineta, D-San Jose, who said he had not talked with any A.S. representatives regarding financial aid cuts.

Khmer Rouge survivor tells of bloody regime

Daily staff writer Thida Mam survived. Her native Cambodia has been ravaged by a war and a communist takeover which at last count has resulted in the extermination of more than 2.5 million people. One was her father.

She has lived in the United States since 1980 when she and her family were able to escape a form of government which was systematically mur-dering anyone who opposed the government's politics.

Mam was at SJSU last weekend to be interviewed for a film which is to be used by the Anthroplogy Department as part of a "social inequality" lecture series conducted by Anthropology Prof. James M. Freeman. Today Mam is a computer program-mer in Silicon Valley and a student at Mission College in Santa Clara.

The story of Mam's life is one of living in the face of virtual genocide every day of her life between 1975 when the communist government, Khmer Rouge, took over Cambodia and 1980 when she and her family escaped the country.

"They (the Khmer Rouge) were afraid of any resistance and killed anyone which opposed them," Mam

That fear of resistance meant death camps and brainwashing by the government in an attempt to stop any thought against the communist

"You had to play dumb and pre-tend not to be able to know things or you would be killed. The younger gen eration in Cambodia are all brain-washed. They are all like robots because they have no thought of their she said.

Life for Mam was what she calls "normal middle class" until she was eleven when Cambodia went to war

'I was a typical city girl and my family and I used to go on trips to gether. Life was very pleasant," Mam said.

When the Khmer Rouge took over her father was sent to one of their death camps where he was killed and Mam was forced to work in

"I had never even known where rice came from before when I went to work their. It was very hard work and it was terrible because every where there were leeches. I used to have terrible nightmares about leeches." Mam said.

Several of Mam's friends were murdered by the government. One in particular bothered her very much.

A girl friend of mine was raped, beaten and murdered by soldiers After a while I didn't care about dying. I made up my mind that if they touched my skin I would kill myself," Mam said

Mam herself was chosen to go to a death camp but through the help of a man she was able to escape certain death. "They were loading all these people on a bus and it was dark. We were going to be the last people on when a man whispered to us to leave," Mam said.
"I don't know how we survived.

We were just lucky. So many people were killed."

On two different occasions Mam and her family walked more than 250 miles to try and escape to Thailand. After the first time they were sent back to Cambodia and faced a hit squad which gunned down a group of people a few feet away from her

"Again it was only luck which kept us alive," Mam said. After five months they escaped again and were able to come to America through a sponsorship program by the Mormon and Lutheran Church in Davis, California

Mam also had family in the states who had escaped and were raising money for their passage. 'I didn't believe we would really make it until we were on the plane. When we left I said to my mother 'we made it.' "Mam said.

Mam said that it is difficult for her to speak of her experiences, but she feels it is beneficial.

"I almost start to cry when I think about it. The reason I did this was because I want people to know what happened. It is the business of the world to stop this," Mam said.

She said she thinks the officials of the Khmer Rouge should face trial. the way Nazis did for crimes against humanity.

"I don't know how people could do this to each other. I have a lot of revenge in my heart." she said.

"I still have nightmares about

SEEING YOUR POTENTIAL

Just as a master diamond cutter can see the potential in an uncut stone, NEC can see the potential in the individual about to graduate from Putting that belief into action has enabled us to become the third largest semiconductor manufacturer in the world. And we're growing stronger all the time.

For the emerging graduate we offer an environment that develops new facets to your current capabilities, which will take you from the novice to a top professional in the semiconductor field.

For instance, the growth opportunities at our Roseville facility (just outside Sacramento) are exceptional. This state-of-the-art VLSI manufacturing plant is the largest and most advanced wafer fab operation in the U.S. It supplements our successful Mountain View, California operation as well as our Technology Center in Natick, Massachusetts. This center, with over 80 engineers is a unique institution where semiconductor technologies developed in the U.S., Japan, and Europe are combined, enhanced, and applied to the needs of the U.S. market

We're looking for dynamic people who respond to the challenge of putting their scholastic skills to the test. This is the opportunity to become a polished professional in the diverse world of NEC

On Thursday, March 21, NEC will be holding INTERVIEWS at the Career Planning and Placement Center, Building Q (next to Business Tower) for the fol-
