SJSU may house Weather Service

Move likely if radar OK'd

By Tom Dunlap

The forecast looks bright for SJSU's Meteorology Department.

The department may someday share a new building on campus with the National Weather Service, under plans for a project approved by the California State University Board of

The trustees gave their stamp of approval to the project at their meeting last month, allowing a new building to be added to SJSU's campus master plan, said Bill Chatham, CSU's chief of planning.

The proposed building will occupy approximately 23,740 square feet located adjacent to Duncan Hall, said Executive Vice President J. Handel

The weather service will move its regional center from Redwood City to the proposed building, Evans said.

SJSU's Meteorology Department will share the proposed building with the National Weather Service, said

Peter F. Lester, chairman of the de-

About 60 percent will go to the weather service and the department will get the rest, Lester said.

Whether the new meteorology laboratory, estimated at $3 million, will exist is tied to the outcome of a series of negotiations, Lester said.

The weather service is currently negotiating with an organization that controls the radar station on Mount Jmunhum, 12 miles south of campus, Lester said.

The weather service won't make the move to SJSU unless it can place a new radar system on the peak because

If the Mid-Peninsula Regional Open Spaces District turns down the National Weather Service request, the service will set up shop somewhere else, Lester said.

If and when those negotiations are complete, SJSU will begin lease negotiations with the weather service.

The SJSU Foundation — an auxiliary organization that raises money for the university — will "float a loan, just like any business," for the construction of the building, Evans said.

The weather service will even tually pay back the loan, he said joint idea that came out of informal meetings held about a year and a half Lester said.

The move will enhance SJSU's department, the only degree program in meteorology in the CSU system,

About 75 students are now weathering the department's curriculum, and "I would expect the new building would certainly draw more students, both graduate and undergradute," he

Lester said he hopes there is some decision on the project by the end of the semester, so that construction can begin by the end of the fall semester

A Christian speaks out

Though that statement may mean many different things to a lot of different people, Christianity to me means living life with a purpose. It means taking into account the philosophies laid down by Jesus and his love for mankind.

What it doesn't mean is passing judgment on other people who may live a different lifestyle or prace tice a different religion. Nor does it mean being inflexible or unwilling to accept change and innovation such as scientific discovery — because it doesn't fit in with doctrines laid down by remote theologians.

Most Americans who would like to openly declare themselves Christians are appalled at the thought of associating themselves with someone like a Jimmy Swaggert who has appointed himself dictator of judgments over the Western World.

Swaggert and his TV colleagues draw their strength espousing passages from the Bible to create fear and submission. But they teach only parts of the sages like: Judge not, that ye be not judged. Matthew 7:1 Bible that fit into their game plan, overlooking pas-

These TV evangelists would like you to think they speak for Christianity, but they have caused people to turn away. Oral Roberts' recent plea for money to save his life from the wrath of God humiliates me as a Christian. I can't blame other people for being embarrassed to profess their Christian

The Christian church has seen its popularity de-cline over the past several generations because of the attitudes just mentioned. Young people in particular are rejecting many of the church's canons because of the hypocrisy.

Most Americans have been exposed to Christianity, and I would be willing to bet that most have a fundemantal belief in Jesus and our Christian God. But so many are also appalled by the attitudes dis-played by people who call themselves "God-fearing

I am a Christian but I don't fear God. How can I fear someone I love?

The term "born-again Christian" is so overused that it no longer means what it's supposed to. Experiencing spiritual rebirth is the most significant part of my life because it is an ongoing process

While I am no sage at age 30, I have pondered a full cycle of spiritual philosophy that ranges from agnosticism to an extreme of atheism. The years of pondering finally brought me to one conclusion - acceptance of Jesus Christ

But spiritual rebirth is a process that never ends; every discovery about the world, the universe and ourselves is a form of being reborn. When we make discoveries, there is a rebirth from the old thought that died. Without rebirth we, and the universe we are a part of, would stagnate and wither away

As modern Christians we can look to the Bible for spiritual guidance and as a way to live our lives, but we must also accept the Bible as a book of history and parables. The Bible may seem outdated and therefore useless to many, and it is if accepted as literal fact. The problem is compounded by those who preach an unwavering fundemental line of bull about the nature of man and the universe.

I interpret the Bible, beginning with Genesis, as symbolism written for a civilization that several thousand years ago simply didn't have enough knowledge about the universe. Man, always an inquiring spirit, has to have some fundemental questions answered before embarking on the path of ultimate questions

Jesus often taught in parables and I believe the story of creation of man and the universe is a parable of the evolutionary processes told by God. In Ralph Waldo Emerson's words, "A

I hope Tom Collins Jr. does not expect Spartan Daily readers to believe his Feb. 5 letter, "Let's Forget the Contras," is based on a true story. It is filled with factual errors and statements that are easily discredited.

The Contras are not the final remains of the Somoza government as he states. In fact they are comprised of many Collins tells us that the Somoza dictatorship was "replaced by the more humane Sandinistas." What is humane about the genocide they commit trying to kill all the native Miskito Indians, the concentration camps they run for polit-

Driving slow causes more accidents

Mr. Bacio's Feb. 9 letter to the editor brings up some interesting points about safe driving.

In a study performed by the National Society of Traffic

Engineers, accidents can be statistically linked only to speed differential, not absolute speed. What kills is not when a car going 70 mph rear ends going 60 mph, it happens when a car is going 70 mph and the other is going 50

According to the California Highway Patrol the average speed in California is about 59 mph. In this instance it was shown that a person going 54 mph is about twice as likely to be in an accident as one driving 59 mph. The same is true for the person going 64 mph. Slower is not better!

You should move with the average traffic speed.

Secondly if speed kills how can it be that the average speed on U.S. highways has risen every year for the last five years, but the number of deaths has fallen every year during that time? The traffic miles, by the way, have also been increasing. There are more people on the road, all going faster, yet we are dying less often.

Chiropractors are not quacks, student says

I am appalled at the ill-informed, dogmatic, outdated opinions about chiropractic, including a letter to the editor that appeared Jan. 26. The let-ter, written by Vaso Brown, objected to SJSU's cooperation with Palmer College of Chiropractic-West on the grounds that chiropractic is "the most successful medical fraud of the 20th century," and by implying that chiropractors are "quacks.

In replying to this unwarranted attack upon the 30,000 doctors of chiro-pratic and their nine million satisfied patients per year, there are several points to make. First, I doubt that Brown, as a business student, has any business at all in judging the validity of any theory of disease, let alone his simple notion of what he thinks Palmer College-West teaches. In fact, chiropractic teaches disease is the end result of a multi-factorial process of pathophysiology, in which subluxation - bral misalignment — can be an important factor. The notion is not exclusive to chiropractic as both the medical and osteopathic professions recognize

Secondly, Brown equates chiropractors with astrologers presumably because both are unscientific. While I can't speak for astrology, this is proba-bly the most ill-advised statement he makes. Consider the 10 or so rando-mized controlled clinical trials conducted on spinal manipulations during the last decade which have proven the effectiveness of chiropractic care for painful back conditions. Consider the many scientific studies funded by the Foundation for Chiropractic Education and Research. Consider the many scientific studies funded by the 52 publications of the faculty at Palmer Col-lege in 1986, which have appeared in peer-reviewed and indexed journals and proceedings. Finally, consider that the American Public Health Association, one of the oldest and largest professional health societies in the world, officially sponsors the Chiropractic Forum scientific paper sessions and has an organizational policy that states chiropractic care is "safe and effective." I think highly credible source when compared to Brown's reference to a poorly writ-ten, poorly researched and obviously biased book "Health Quackery."

Chiropractic education, which consists of at least six years of post-secondary education, is accredited by an agency recognized by the U.S. Department of Health Education and Welfare. Chiropractors are licensed in all 50 states and in many foreign countries. Chiropractic care is reimbursed by Medicare and most private insurance companies. I could go on.

SJSU should be applauded for its role in the preclinical training of doctors of chiropractic. Far from being laughed at, the university will be looked upon as a pioneer in its concern for the health of the nation and for its contribution to the scientific validation of the chiropractic approach to health.

I wonder about the motives of an individual who is so obviously unqualified to pontificate on matters beyond his area of expertise. Perhaps a course in research methodology would help.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A data bank for all prosecutions of adult and child pornography will be central-ized by the federal government to aid law enforcement around the country, U.S. Attorney General Edwin

A hideous new form of the slave trade has devel-Meese told the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday, "one that has expanded with the problem of missing children, generally."

He said runaway children who hang out on the streets of big cities can expect little but beatings, rape

Thus, he said, "pornography hurts people, both by the way in which it is made and the way in which it af-fects people who get hooked on it."

The data bank, known as the Center for Obscenity Prosecution, will include sample indictments and a statistical reference service, he said, as part of a seven-part anti-pornography campaign which also includes the Obscenity Task Force of the Justice Department, Meese

Senator praises trade stance

SACRAMENTO (AP) - U.S. Sen. Pete Wilson praised Gov. George Deukmejian's get-tough stance against Japanese trade barriers Tuesday, but distanced himself from Deukmejian's threat to consider reinstatement of the unitary tax as a weapon against Japan.

"The kind of pressure he was putting on the Japanese is absolutely proper. More (pressure) needs to be put on them. The kind of thing he did fit very well with the efforts of the U.S. trade representatives," Wilson said of Deukmejian's trip last month to Japan to open a California trade office in Tokyo and discuss trade barriers with Japanese leaders.

Deukmejian and Wilson, California's top Republican officeholders, discussed issues ranging from party politics to offshore oil and trade policies in a joint news conference following a private meeting.

Responding to questions, Wilson said he "would be very enthusiastic about it" if Deukmejian is a favorite son candidate for president next year.

Inside hit

bout 10 years ago I won two tickets to see a men's professional volleyball match. It was be-tween the San Diego Breakers (I think that was their name) and some other team. For so reason I went.

After squirming around in my seat for an hour and a half, I decided I never wanted to see another professional volleyball match again

The league folded. The world was just not ready

There were a number of things lacking. First, volleyball was not a very well-known sport at the time. The action was fast and it was hard for specta tors to tell what was going on.

Also, the rules and terminology were not well known. There were double-hits and kills and digs

But things have changed over the last decade. The 1984 Olympics brought both men's and women volleyball into the world arena, and college volleyball has started to become popular as well.

Enter the San Francisco/San Jose Golddiggers of the new women's professional volleyball league.

"I think it can work," Golddigger general manager Art Johnson says. "It's a tremendously exciting The six-team league's principal stock holder is

Robert Batinovich, the CEO of the Glenborough Corporation, a real estate firm in Redwood City. The teams are divisions of Major League Volleyball, Inc

This is a new idea in that if one team does well the whole league prospers — or if one team fails the whole league suffers. It's a new concept in professional sports ownership, and it just might be original enough to work.

For one thing, the league consists of women volleyball players only "Volleyball is more suited as a women's sport because the men are too powerful," Steve Arnold, league commissioner says. "It's like watching two great servers in a tennis match — you never get to see a rally. In volleyball the women have more grace and finesse and they rally more.

Also, the league is spread out across the country There are teams in New York, Chicago, Minnesota, Los Angeles and Dallas, as well as here.

National attention will help the league, and the cable TV possibilities are endless.

The spring schedule is also a good idea. Football is over, baseball will just be getting under way and collegiate volleyball is in the fall, so the competition won't be too stiff.

But the best thing about this league is that San Jose has a team, and the games will be played at the San Jose Civic Auditorium.

San Jose needs a professional team to help its image. The Golddiggers should be competitive.

The team is led by Lisa Ice, SJSU's All-American and the second player chosen overall in the league draft. The team also has Lori Corbelli, coach of the USF women's volleyball team and 1984 Olympian, as well as two other ex-SJSU volleyball stars, Teri De-Busk and Christa Cook

The Bay Area can definitely support a team. Some of the best volleyball in the country is being played in this area. SJSU was ranked as high as No. 1 in the nation this past season, Pacific has been the NCAA champion for the past two years and Stanford and California are also very competitive

If you've ever been to a Spartan volleyball match you know how fantastic the women play. The games are action-packed and thrilling to watch, and the athletic ability of these women is tremendous

I'm sure Major League Volleyball, Inc. will be just as exciting, if not more Midway through their December contest against Oregon, the SJSU basketball team is struggling. The Spartans' offense is having problems getting good shots.

On the bench, SJSU graduate assistant coach Ontario

A year ago as the Spartans starting point-guard, Johnson would have been the one receiving advice. But since ac-cepting his new position, he has been instructed to tell Berry

And on this winter night in Portland, he notices that the offense is entering too low. He believes that if they start from higher up, they will get some easy shots.

Berry listens and quickly instructs his team to do just. The Spartans, much to the satisfaction of Johnson, respond with a pair of baskets.

Yet despite moments such as that one, Johnson still has a hard time believing that he is a coach at the college level.

Until four months ago, Johnson had never even considered the possibility. Since childhood, Johnson had been intent on pursuing a career in professional sports "I had dreams of the NBA and dreams of playing pro-fessional football and baseball," Johnson said. "I played

Then in 1984, he had come to SJSU. But his two years of playing did not materialize as he had hoped. In his first year, he shared the point-guard duties and averaged six points per game. In his second year, Johnson once again averaged six points per game, but missed the first seven games with a stress fracture of his foot.

When the injury hit last season, the coach said I

It was this love for the game that in early November brought Johnson around to the Spartan practices.

Despite a team record of 5-7, SJSU's wrestling team has something to smile about.

Senior team captain Arnold Khanbabian has compiled a record of 19-0-1 this season and a 48-10-2 record over the past two seasons. Khanbabian, 21, has been wrestling for the past 10 years, practicing about 20 hours per week. He came to SJSU in 1983 when he was recruited by former SJSU wrestling coach T.J. Kerr.

Khanbabian said he came to SJSU for its prestigious wrestling background. He feels his recent success can be attributed to being named team captain.

"A week before a match I cut down on my food intake," Khanbabian said. "The key for me is to get down to 123 pounds the day of a match. The remaining five pounds is just water weight which is no problem to lose." Being only 5-foot-4 and weighing 118 pounds has not affected his performance.

"I'm not a pinner," Khanbabian explained.

Khanbabian, an accounting major, said he has enjoyed his time at SJSU. As a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, he has found new friends and team support.

"All the guys stick together," Khanbabian said.

"They not only help me by watching my matches, but they

NEW YORK (AP) — Arbiter George Nicolau ruled Monday that major league baseball teams which failed to sign their free agents by Jan. ot negotiate with those players before May 1, the earliest date those players may rejoin their former teams.

Enrollment in SJSU engineering and computer science programs are not suffering major changes in spite of the stagnant high-tech job market. According to a survey from University of California at Los Angeles, many American colleges and universities have had decreased enrollment in these fields since 1983.

Three SJSU volleyball players have been selected to join a new professional volleyball league, the San Jose/San Francisco Golddiggers. The three women, Christa Cook, Lisa Ice and Teri DeBusk, will be able to continue their schooling because they will be practicing at night and playing their games on the weekend.

SJSU's Forensic Team members were awarded last week as the 10th best team in the Southwest Region. Phil Wander, debate coach and head of SJSU's University Forum said the awards represent the most successful season since the program started 10 years ago.

The completion of a new ramp in the Business Tower will resolve some of the mobility problems disabled students are facing. Finishing touches such as painting and relocating sprinklers will complete the project by this week

Cancer claims the life of SJSU Philosophy professor

Had international reputation for his work

By Julie Laffrenzen

Herman Shapiro, professor of Philosophy at SJSU, died of cancer last month. He was 64.

"He was a rare combination of scholar and teacher, said Jarrett Brock, chairman of the Philosophy Department.

As a teacher he achieved and deserved the reputation of being one of the best teachers in the Philosophy Departas evidenced by the popularity of his lectures. not only with students of philosophy, but with students of many other disciplines as well."

Shapiro was born on Feb. 4, 1922, in New York City N.Y. He graduated from Hunter College in New York City in 1950 with a degree in liberal arts and from Columbia University with a master's degree in pre-med. He earned his Ph.D. in philosophy from Columbia in 1957.

Shapiro began his teaching career at Queens College in New York in 1956, where he remained for a year. He then taught at Hunter College and the University of Connecticut before arriving in California in 1960 to teach at SJSU. He taught here until the middle of October 1986, when his advanced illness forced an emergency retirement.

In 1968 Shapiro received a Fulbright Scholarship to travel to Italy where he researched 16th century Renais sance philosopher Bernardino Telesio.

During his stay in Italy, he was a frequent guest lecturer at the University of Padua.

As a member of the International Conference of Suicide and Euthanasia in Bielefeld, West Germany, in 1978. he contemplated the topic of death.

In 1982, he was chosen to attend the Sixth World Medical Conference at Ghent, Belgium, to consider the question

Professor Shapiro achieved an international reputation for his work on Hellenistic, Medieval and Renaissance Philosophy," Brock said. (Shapiro) was widely known for his work on Medi-

Marine Corps Sgt. John Thomas fi-nally received his World War II medals nearly 42 years after he earned the bronze star for the historic landing on

"I figured I better get 'em...be-fore I kick off," Thomas, 64, joked "I wrote in to find out what I was entitled to about two months

Thomas, a retired florist, received five medals and two ribbons Monday, including the bronze star with combat "V" for the Iwo Jima landing Feb. 19, 1945. The other decorations included the American Cam-

PASO ROBLES (AP) -Former paign medal, Asiatic Pacific Campaign medal with six battle stars, Navy Occupation (of Japan) medal, the World War II Victory medal, the Presidential Citation ribbon and a Navy commendation ribbon

He said he didn't receive his medals by the time he mustered out in San Diego in November 1945 because "I was in such a hurry to get home.

"They were processing us out as fast as they could. They were short-handed on clerks, I guess," he said. The most important information gained, Thomas said, was the need to lay down a metal landing mesh on the beach to prevent vehicles such as tanks from sinking in the soft volcanic sand.

honor of Markham.

Markham wrote the poem in 1886, after seeing Jean Francois Millet's painting of the same name

After he reached the height of success in the Bay Area, Markham moved to New York, hoping to further his career as a poet, Muller said.

He stayed in New York for more than 40 years, writing other poems and essays.

The house is located on a piece of property on Eighth Street that is owned by the SJSU

Foundation, said Richard Still, Director of the Foundation. "Technically, if the University Foundation owns the property, even though it's an auxiliary to the school, if we're using the property, we have to pay the rent," said Richard Staley, SJSU director of news and publication services. However, once the house is moved to the museum site, the land will be available for a numof different things, Still said. The land is now being leased to SJSU for parking.

"We are looking at all possible options for the use of the land," said J. Handel Evans, SJSU executive vice president.

Some of the options include a building in which the lower floors could be used as foundation offices and the upper floors for faculty housing, Sta-

The target date of completion for the renovation of the Markham house is tentatively set for sometime next year. Muller said. The house will then be open to the public.

Dry rush rules for spring semester were in effect Jan. 26 to Feb. 4. The fraternity president expected to file charges may have decided not to

'From my talk with the vice president, I understand the president of the house who is making the charges isn't going to do it," Knoll said.

The names of the fraternities in volved in the allegation will not be released unless charges of dry rush vio-lation are formally filed, Knoll said.

"Our policy is we're not naming names," Knoll said. "But if charges are filed and it goes to the judiciary, names will get out," he said. The dry rush violation is "alleged, nothing has been proven and no charges have yet been filed," he said.

recruiting members and publicity of unproven allegations might hurt recruitment, Knoll said.

The maximum fine for a dry rush violation is $250 per house, he said. Repeated violations could result in the suspension of the fraternity's national charter and a probationary status, Knoll said.
