Groups will ask A.S. for funding

By Diane Bejarano
Daily staff writer

SJSU students representing several clubs will ask the A.S. special allocations committee for $3,124 today to fund the effort for a demonstration march for a better educational policy at the state Capitol in Sacramento.

The goal of the group's protest is to "put education back to a top priority and put Gov. Deukmejian on the spot," said Martha Borja, vice president of MEChA.

The group wants the money for publicity, transportation and a rally on March 30.

Universities and community colleges statewide are participating in the march, she said. The "March on Sacramento for Education" will occur on April 6 to coincide with the state legislature's vote on education policies.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, state Sen. Art Torres (D-Los Angeles), and Assemblywoman Maxine Waters (D-Los Angeles) will speak.

The group's demands include more funding for education, reinstating funds for bilingual education, strengthening community college transfer rates and funding, increasing minority enrollment and retention and including ethnic studies as a graduation requirement.

If the A.S. committee agrees to the funding, the proposal will go to the A.S. board of directors on Wednesday.

The group is recruiting students to appear at the A.S. board meeting and will follow up with a strategy meeting that night.

The students involved are united under the title "Third World Coalition." They are members of the Black Coalition, Asian Students in Action Now, the Black Alliance of Scientific Engineers, the Society of Latin Engineers, the SJS Ultimate Club, El Concilio and MEChA.

The group is actively recruiting SJSU students to join the march.

"It's an issue for all students (and a chance for) first hand experience in dealing with the legislature," Borja said.

San Francisco State University organizers received $3,080 from their Associated Students board to set up a march communications center, Borja said.

The march was organized statewide by the African/Black Student Statewide Alliance, MEChA and the Asian Pacific Student Union.

The march organizers have received numerous endorsements from more than 100 politicians, universities and community groups.

UNLV trounces Spartans in tournament heartbreaker

Last-second win over Santa Barbara puts team in PCAA final

By David Barry
Daily staff writer

INGLEWOOD — For most teams, simply reaching the final game of the PCAA tournament would have been enough.

But as the SJSU basketball team entered the Forum Saturday afternoon to face the University of Nevada-Las Vegas before 11,681 screaming fans, they wanted more.

Fresh off a 70-69 victory over University of California at Santa Barbara in Friday's semifinal, the Spartans wanted to knock off UNLV, the No. 1 ranked team in the nation. They wanted to capture the Pacific Coast Athletic Association title. They wanted to leave with an invitation to the 64-team National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament.

"A lot of teams just want to make it to the championship game," SJSU forward George Ptiou said. "We wanted to win it."

But to do so, the Spartans were going to have to get past UNLV's incredible team. They were 33-1 for the season, 18-0 in PCAA play, including two victories over SJSU, and in their two previous tournament games they had annihilated Long Beach State and Cal State-Fullerton by scores of 105-70 and 99-65.

SJSU couldn't do it. By the time Saturday's finale had come an end and UNLV had claimed a 94-69 victory, all the Spartans wanted was a plane home. Simply put, The Runnin' Rebels had been incredible.

"They're a great basketball team. I knew they would be," said SJSU coach Bill Berry, whose team finished the year at 16-14 overall barring a selection to the National Invitational Tournament, which didn't seem likely.

"But giving us credit, we're not nearly as bad as we played today," Berry said. "We're a pretty good basketball team, but they just took us right out of everything we tried to do."

UNLV's performance had been so grand that even their coach, Jerry Tarkanian, couldn't believe it.

"I'm totally shocked," Tarkanian said. "The way we played in this tournament is incredible. How hard we played is incredible. I don't know if I've ever seen a team play as hard as they play as often as they play."

SJSU and the rest of the PCAA would readily agree. Everyone had

Record shop plan requested by board

By Judith Faught
Daily staff writer

The Associated Students Board of Directors asked Paul Morris to return to Wednesday's board meeting with a formal resolution proposing a campus record store.

If the resolution is presented this week, the board may vote to accept it and place it on the general election ballot, thereby avoiding the expense of a special election, said A.S. President Tom Boothe.

A special election would cost roughly $400, according to A.S. adviser Jim Cellini. He said that figure covers only material costs such as the printing of ballots and not the time and effort of the election board to set up the election and polling place.

Morris told the board that he would "try his best" to develop a resolution by this week.

He had been scheduled to present a resolution at the Feb. 25 board meeting but decided instead to make separate proposals over three weeks concerning the size, operating budget and final location of the store.

"I believed that it would be more efficient to address each issue one by one," Morris said.

Morris said he had wanted to give the members time to study his proposals and research. Since that time, he has decided it would be better to present everything at once.

Board members voiced concerns over whether part of the print shop should be used for the record store.

"I think members of this board have been convinced that it would be neither productive nor desirable to subdivide the print shop space," A.S. Vice President Roger Wert said.

Morris stressed to the board members that they should support his record store proposal because it would "provide a service for the students by the students."

Wert then asked Morris if he knew that a general election was scheduled for March 25 and if he had considered the possibility of including the record store on that ballot instead of reverting to a special election.

"I must confess I didn't expect this election to come up so early and I'm not fully prepared for an election. Therefore, it appears a special election will be held," Morris said.

Boothe said although he doesn't believe the store would be an advisable venture, the issue should be brought to a student vote.

"I believe it is a question for the voters to decide," Boothe said. "I am perfectly willing to go to the mat with (Morris). Let's put it to the test."

After the meeting, Wert again expressed his concern over Morris' proposed location of the record store.

"I really don't think there's room in the print shop. They are really doing a good job and I wouldn't want to see them give up any of the space of the print shop to put a record store in there."

"I don't think Mr. Morris has convinced (the board) that he can operate in that space or that this thing is even going to be a success," he said.

"All indications are that it would not be successful," Wert added. Morris disagreed.

"The probability factor of success is so great that it would be a shame not to try it," Morris said. "It's easy to be pessimistic and to simply say this will not work."

Wert said that he favors a student vote if it can be placed on the general election ballot rather than having to hold a special election.

"If Mr. Morris wants an election, it should be in March, instead of waiting," he said.

As of Friday, Morris said that he is seeking assistance from others to help him prepare the resolution, but he has not decided if he will present one at Wednesday's meeting.

Magazine burning instigates confrontation

Anti-pornography marchers scrap with bookstore employees

An anti-pornography march which began at SJSU Thursday night ended in a scuffle near campus on South First Street.

At least four of the 19 women participating in the "Take Back the Night" march as part of SJSU's Womyn's Week celebration burned adult magazines in front of the Oasis Sex Arcade and Bookstore.

In her report to San Jose police, Dianne Kelly, a San Jose City College student, said she was holding a burning magazine in front of the store and a worker in the shop, identified as Charles Martin, came out and turned water on her from a fire hose.

The burning magazines were put out by the workers with the fire extinguisher during the altercation.

Kelly then told police she was grabbed by another man, choked and pulled into the bookstore.

Other protesters pulled her out of the building, she said.

"She had an aggressive attitude," said Geno Zertuche, a junior majoring in radio and television who attended the march.

"But when the guy came after her, she protected herself," Zertuche said.

"It's not clear-cut," he said. "Maybe she took it as an opportunity to let go of some of her aggression."

Martin claimed Kelly threw burning magazines into the store.

"We don't have any violent movies against women here."

After the incident, Kelly walked away and said, "I feel good about it. If I don't like the way I'm treated, I speak up."

Kelly denied putting a burning magazine in his store. But she said somebody should stand up to the bookstore owners. "If the man would have said we had a point, then it would have been better."

"But you can't justify a fight," she said.

Perhaps jail time will motivate them

The Santa Clara County Board of Supervisors is determined to defy the court order imposed by retired Superior Court Judge Spurgeon Avakian, who has ordered the board to build a new jail facility that will furnish approximately 100 new individual cells.

Judge Avakian has threatened the board with a $1,000 fine and five days in jail if they fail to comply with his order.

The board has until March 13 to make up their minds. At that time they face final sentencing before Judge Avakian for contempt of court.

Avakian originally said that he wanted 96 new individual cells by Dec. 1. He has recently relented somewhat and conceded to the possibility of giving them until Feb. 1, 1988 to comply with his order. His original bold stand has been modified to allow the board a couple extra months to provide the cells.

The controversy stems from a suit filed six years ago by jail inmates against the county. The suit complains of drastically overcrowded conditions, and calls for more cells to hold individual inmates.

New jail facilities are being constructed by the county, which will greatly ease the overcrowding problem, but the completion date for the $64 million project is not until sometime after the first of next year.

This is not soon enough. The situation is one that needs immediate attention. Inmates are cramped right now.

While politicians argue over the matter, tensions flare inside the jail, sometimes resulting in fights among the inmates who remain jammed into an area too small to hold them all comfortably.

The County Board of Supervisors should either provide the new cells to ease the problem of overcrowding at the county jail, or they should take their lumps and see first-hand what it is like to spend time in jail.

Santa Clara County Sheriff Robert Winter has had to release prisoners in the past as a result of overcrowding, a temporary measure that does no good to alleviate the problem, and only deals with a symptom. The board should comply with the court order. By not doing so, they flaunt the system of checks and balances that is the basis for our form of government.

Avakian, who was appointed in 1964 by former Gov. Edmund G. Brown, has taken a stand on a case that numerous Santa Clara County judges have refused to hear. The last judge to hear the case, the late Bruce Allen, withdrew in frustration when he was unable to rectify the situation.

The time has come for decisions to be made in this long-running dispute. As politicians argue, inmates remain crammed into a jail that is filled past capacity.

On the road

At McCluer Senior High School in Florissant, Mo., like most of its suburban St. Louis counterparts, a young man was judged by a number of things — looks, athletic prowess, the friends he kept, the young women he dated, the clubs he was in — but none were as important as his car.

His automobile was his character.

Paul "Scum" Remmert had about the coolest car on campus — a shiny red 1966 Mustang convertible.

Remmert certainly had no monopoly on hep; by California standards, he was actually something of a nerd — his biggest accomplishment being his spot as lead trumpet in McCluer's marching band.

But he had plenty of girlfriends and his own parking space — not given to him by the school, but nobody was about to park in the spot he had reserved for himself.

My friend Jeff Ryals was one of two McCluer students to drive a hearse. His modified black 1966 Cadillac was no doubt inspired by the film "Harold and Maude," although he'll deny it to this day.

But now Ryals has grown up, got married, owns a house and works as a graphic artist for a major aircraft manufacturer and defense contractor. He drives a 1984 Honda Accord.

My first car was a 1971 Plymouth Fury III, a vehicle with which I never got along.

Gertrude — yeah, we all named our cars — got about three miles to the gallon and loved to skid on icy St. Louis streets into other vehicles. We lasted about six months before I finally sold her.

About a year and far too many cold mornings waiting for the bus later, I bought a 1976 Volkswagen Dasher. Rainer, as he quickly came to be called, was no better than Gertrude.

True, the car was practical — 30 miles to the gallon — and fit the professional young journalist image I was trying to project. But about once a month, it would overheat, bursting the radiator. Four months and several hundred dollars later, it was good riddance.

Freeways, back streets and mountain roads are part of the California way of life. Here a car is more than just one's character, it's a second home.

But, particularly here in the Bay area, there's a growing subculture that does without. It's possible to live without a car in California. It's just not easy.

Santa Clara County's transit system is one of the best in the country, considering the wide geographical area it has to serve. Even so, you lose a lot of freedom if you have to rely on it. And in a few parts of the county, you have to put up with a lot of people you probably wouldn't.

It still seems amazing, though, another entire big city is only a few hours and dollars away by Bay Area Rapid Transit or Caltrain. In St. Louis, the idea of even taking the bus to school was a little too much.

I've spent less than a year of my life as an automobile owner, but some of my most memorable moments have taken place inside a car.

California is riding in the back of my friend's hearse over the hill to Santa Cruz, traveling south on U.S. 101 from San Jose to Los Angeles, speeding on the Pacheco Pass Highway, gawking at the orange lights of east San Jose from the top of the gargantuan U.S. 101/I-280/I-680 interchange or renting a car with some friends and driving through San Francisco and across the Golden Gate Bridge.

Even so, I don't regret my decision to live without a car. It's helpful to have the extra money automobiles tend to eat up. Downtown, it's easier to get around on foot.

Occasionally, it's a pain I have to rely on friends too much. By the time I graduate, I'll probably give in and join the rest of the 20th century. Let's face it, this is an automotive world.

Limit campus noise or else

Let me begin by stating that I do not require absolute silence to study. Nevertheless, I do have noise limits. The pile driving on campus, added to the amount of noise on and near campus, is not simply a minor inconvenience, it is a source of anxiety and leads to lower productivity.

At one time, SJSU was considered a haven for students situated in the middle of a big, ugly, noisy city. Now, the boundaries between city and campus are not so well defined. I say, let President Gail Fullerton face the "music" when students turned by the noise and mess, choose a campus other than SJSU.

And speaking of mess, when is someone going to do something about the pool of rain water near the women's gym?

Don't look now but Big Brother may already be here

Have you ever taken an extra minute or two on your break at work, thinking no one would know the difference? Think again.

A growing number of businesses are monitoring employees with high-tech instruments being billed as security systems.

According to an article in the March 3 San Jose Mercury News, business owners are spending billions of dollars each year to make sure employees don't cheat them out of precious seconds that could be spent working.

"Productivity monitoring is most prevalent in jobs that can be broken down into specific tasks: telephone operators, data processors, airline reservation agents, insurance processors, law clerks, credit card verification workers," the article said.

One of the tools employers use to track employees is a barrier system.

"The top of the line barrier system can be programmed with detailed information . . . if any security breach occurs, the system can identify suspects such as all blonds or all people over six feet tall," the article said.

Similar employee surveillance systems masquerading as security devices are doors which are opened with magnetic cards. These systems are used by employers to find out who is late for work and who leaves too early and tabulate printouts on employees at the end of the week.

Larry Aragon

For employees who work with phones, business owners use the "Integrated Services Digital Network, which can be programmed to listen in on employees and pick up key phrases from their telephone conversations," the article said.

Employer spying has become so common Assemblyman Tom Hayden, D-West Los Angeles, introduced a bill Tuesday which would make it illegal for employers to:

- ✓ Monitor workers with computers, telephones and other forms of auditory and video display terminal devices without telling them when the surveillance is occurring.
- ✓ Flash subliminal messages on VDTs to affect employees' behavior.
- ✓ Install VDTs in a business without giving employees three months notice of the change.

Hayden considered drafting a stronger bill which would have made the whole process of electronic spying on employees illegal regardless of employee notification, said Judy Corbett, administrative assistant to Hayden.

But the assemblyman chose instead to go with the weaker version outlined above because he thought it would have a better chance of being signed into law, Corbett said.

Either version of the bill would be a welcome change to the present situation, which is reminiscent of George Orwell's 1984.

The comparison, although cliché, is valid. In 1984 the protagonist Winston Smith is manipulated by his paranoia that he is constantly being watched by Big Brother.

An employee who knows he is being monitored by his supervisor, but who has no idea when and for how long, will suffer from the same paranoia as Smith.

Business owners have either forgotten the numbers on their productivity graphs represent human beings or they truly believe productivity is more important than their workers' sanity, that the end justifies the means.

Treating employees like enemies can only lead to hatred and an even wider gap between workers and management.

Employers should work with employees not against them. Productivity is important, but not at the expense of workers well-being.

Let's not let Orwell's nightmare be a reality.

Letters to the Editor

High fees reality for foreign students

Editor,
 Recently there has been many arguments on the Spartan Daily editorial page on the tuition fees for foreign students. Some say it is unfair, and some say foreign students should pay more for school in the United States.

The fact is that SJSU is a state funded university, and its main objective is to help Californians to get higher education.

Mahesh Jethanandani suggested in a March 4 letter that foreign students should attempt to become Californians after a year to reduce their fees. This is a very impractical solution because as long as you stay here with a foreign student visa, you can not become a Californian since your visa shows that your home is abroad.

I am not against foreign students at all. I came from a foreign country as well. I did try to seek a solution in the international student advisory committee. However, with the current conservative "America" trend, along with President Reagan's insistence on cutting school aid, I cannot see any financial aid being provided for foreign students on a regular basis in the near future.

I am sorry to say this, but I will advise any foreign student to fill up his or her pockets with cash before coming to the United States for higher education.

Foreign students get America's rage

Editor,
 "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free . . ."

This quote welcoming foreigners is written in the Statue of Liberty. Even though the statue is a symbol of American society, that message couldn't be the furthest from the truth. Poor people could certainly not pay for a college education in the United States if they happen to be foreigners.

The rationale behind tuition is that we haven't been taxpayers so we are not entitled to the benefits of cheaper education. This seems all right for the first year, but after that period of time out-of-state Americans become residents and their fees drop drastically. In fact, foreign students are taxpayers because for every non-food product we consume we pay an extra 7 percent in sales tax, and if we get an on-campus job we pay taxes also. So then, what makes us so different?

In one letter I read a student suggested that if we want to pay less fees we should become citizens, which many students do, but most of the time requests for citizenship take many years and often the requests are refused.

Another letter from Lydia Zapatha was totally anti-foreigner. For me she is the product of the Reagan-Rambo-ultranationalist culture that has arisen in the 1980s. For her SJSU should focus its efforts on the problems of American students rather than the few of a foreign student. This attempt to antagonize foreigners and Americans reminds me of Hitler's policies toward the Jews: Minorities don't count and become the object on which majorities unload their rage.

All of us came here to get an excellent education, but it is not easy for us to stay. A little reminder for us is the popular bumper sticker that says, "welcome to California, now go home," something that many of us will do after our education is over.

And for the record. . .store

Editor,
 Regarding the March 3 articles about a record store at SJSU there are some factors that need clarification and therefore put it into perspective.

In the article discussing campus record stores that "fopped" two of these suffered from the most damaging ailment possible — major competition in a nearby area. Professionals in the retail record industry are the first ones to point out the dangers of this, and up until some six years ago SJSU itself was served by a privately run record store at Fourth and San Fernando streets before Bank of America bought out their land. This seems to explain why SJSU never opened one long ago. Now that there is no nearby competition to speak of — an average of four miles in each direction — we have a unique opportunity to serve our campus with such service.

Union gallery displays work of young artists

By Deborah J. Kaplan
Daily staff writer

The Union Gallery is hosting a new art show opening today entitled "Director's Choice — Two Young Artists." It is scheduled to run until April 11.

The showcased artists are Jose Guzman, 27, and Hanneline Rogeberg, 23.

They were chosen by Union Gallery Director Ted Gehrke in an attempt to get some sort of balance in the show, he said.

"Rogeberg's paintings are so intense, and Guzman's are not. I tried to find two artists whose works can be shown together," Gehrke said.

Rogeberg, a native of Oslo, Norway, arrived at SJSU in 1984.

"Rogeberg is a red-hot artist," Gehrke said.

Rogeberg wanted to attend the Norway School of Art, where the average age of acceptance is 26. At the time she was only 20.

"I came to the United States to find a good art school," she said. "I found one at SJSU."

"SJSU has a very good reputation. I learned a lot about my work and myself when I was there."

"The best part about the program at SJSU is that I got feedback on my work," Rogeberg said. "A lot of it was critical and it helped me to take a critical look at my own work."

Randall Sadler, professor of painting and drawing said, "Hanneline's work in the SJSU Art Department was exceptional. She produced from a relatively realistic, objective, but expert, use of the human figure."

The Union Art Gallery is showing seven of Rogeberg's oil-on-canvas works.

'Rogeberg's paintings are so intense, and Guzman's are not. I tried to find two artists whose works can be shown together.'

— Ted Gehrke,
gallery director

There is a distinct autobiographical basis in Rogeberg's themes, which includes the midnight arrest of her grandfather during the Nazi occupation in Norway, Sadler said.

"She focuses on the grimmer aspects of deception, coercion and seduction," Sadler said.

"Her vehicle for this is the human figure in anonymous environments, either singularly or with another," he said.

"I haven't seen the work that she will show in the Union Gallery yet, but I expect the content to be the same, with exciting developments in her expansion of her theme," Sadler said.

Rogeberg transferred this semester to the Art Institute in San Francisco.

"At the institute I can work on my art all of the time. At SJSU I had to take some general education classes. Also, in a year I will have my own studio at the institute," she said.

Rogeberg expects to graduate in May 1987. Her tentative plans include a master's degree and she is a candidate for a scholarship at Yale University.

But she misses home. "Eventually I will go back to live in Norway. I miss my family, my friends and my dog," she said.

Guzman graduated from the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland in 1984.

Eleven paintings were contributed to the show and Guzman describes them as street scenes. These paintings are in the main gallery.

"My paintings are simple, both in the colors I chose and in the lines," Guzman said.

"But it is this simplicity that makes it complex, because it allows the viewer to find the meaning," he said.

Guzman is a professional artist in Albany, a town north of Berkeley.

"This is the first time my work has been shown in a university. I've only shown in small art galleries," he said.

A reception for the artists is scheduled for March 17 from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m.

"Everyone is welcome to come and see the show. The artists will be on hand to answer any questions," Gehrke said.

Union Gallery hours are Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The gallery is also open Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturdays from noon to 4 p.m.

Suspicious hinder arms treaty

By Barry Schweid
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Ronald Reagan struggles to emerge from the Iran-Contra affair, there is renewed hope for an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union. But his long-held suspicions about Moscow's good faith could deprive him of his first major treaty.

The agreement, for which there already is a general understanding between Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev, would eliminate all U.S. and Soviet medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe. Each side could retain 100 warheads — the Soviets in their Asian territories and the United States at home, possibly in Alaska.

Jack Mendelsohn, the deputy director of the private Arms Control Association, sees such a treaty as primarily a political and not a security accord. If everything works out, he says, 1,500 warheads will be taken out of commission — a mere 3 percent of the 50,000 nuclear arms stockpiled by the two superpowers.

Still, it would be the first weapons reduction agreement with Moscow since President Carter signed the SALT II treaty in Vienna in 1979 with the late Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

That's the same treaty candidate Reagan denounced as "fatally flawed" and last year decided could be abridged by the United States if it served U.S. security interests to surpass the ceilings imposed on various kinds of long-range nuclear weapons.

Reagan based that decision partly on his allegations that the Soviets had violated the unratified accord. He claimed in a report to Congress they developed an illegal intercontinental ballistic missile, disguised telemetry information from missile tests and exceeded the overall limit on missile launchers and bombers.

The Soviets disputed the charges, and a number of arms control experts agreed with them.

James P. Rubin, of the Arms Control Association, said the administration has not provided persuasive evidence for any of the three allegations and is relying on an ambiguous interpretation of extremely complex provisions.

For example, Rubin said, "The reason the Soviets are being charged with exceeding launcher limits is that the Reagan administration refuses to discuss procedures for converting 45-year-old bombers into allowable fuel tankers."

"This is a way of creating a compliance issue instead of seeking to resolve it," Rubin said.

Reagan, meanwhile, is in the midst of deciding whether to authorize new experiments with "Star Wars" anti-missile technology. A number of arms control experts worry that such experiments could imperil the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty with the Soviet Union.

While candidate Reagan campaigned against all the major arms control accords, and as the president challenged the Soviets' compliance record, he is in principle in favor of eliminating medium-range missiles from Europe.

But Reagan says important issues remain to be resolved, and that "none is more important than verification."

Zhivago invades Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko says the ban on Boris Pasternak's epic novel "Doctor Zhivago" more than 30 years ago resulted from intrigue in a misguided Kremlin and from what he called provocations in the Western press.

The novel will be published in the Soviet Union for the first time next year.

"We are now righting a tragic error with regard to a most honest writer, a man who never in his life would have thought that he could become the object of political speculation," Yevtushenko said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Yevtushenko, who in the past has clashed with Soviet authorities and the literary establishment, is a member of an official panel created to honor Pasternak.

Pasternak died in 1960, five years after finishing the book, and Yevtushenko said plans call for the novel to be published in installments in the literary monthly "Novy Mir" beginning next January.

That will be the first opportunity for the vast majority of Soviets to read the moving story of the doomed love of a Russian doctor for the beautiful Lara during the years of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution and the Russian Civil War.

Pasternak won the 1958 Nobel Prize for literature after "Doctor Zhivago" was published in the West. The work contains a political theme as well, accusing the Communist system of having corrupted the age-old Russian way of life.

Oil glut may hurt pipeline

BAKERSFIELD (AP) — The nation's longest oil pipeline soon will be ready for business, but producers of California's cheap, heavy crude haven't yet signed up to use it.

The $1.2 billion pipeline was built across the Southwest on the premise that an anticipated glut of West Coast heavy crude would be able to compete in East Coast and Midwest markets.

But an expansion of offshore production has been delayed by environmental controversy, and inland producers are wary because of the collapse of oil prices.

Its 1,225-mile underground All American Pipeline stretches from the Pacific Coast near Santa Barbara to McCombs, Texas, where it connects with other pipelines, allowing oil to move on to Gulf Coast refineries.

The All American Pipeline is twice the length of the Trans-Alaskan Pipeline. It has a capacity to carry 300,000 barrels a day and is the first oil pipeline from the Pacific Coast to the Gulf Coast.

Producers are cautious, though, when discussing the line's value.

They are concerned because of the continuing worldwide oil slump, an unresolved per-barrel shipping tariff, questions about timely delivery and the several years' delay in a major expansion of production off California's coast.

Special to the Daily

Spartan forward Reggie Owens attempts to block a shot by UNLV forward and PCAA Player of the Year Armon Gilliam in Saturday's Rebel victory, while SJSU's Ricky Berry, 21, and Dietrich Waters, 42, look on.

Turnovers, quick tempo aid UNLV in 94-69 rout

expected UNLV to win the championship, but many thought they would struggle. How much incentive could there be when you've already assured yourself a top seed in the upcoming national tournament?

As those gathered at the Forum and in front of their television sets learned, there is a lot of incentive — especially when 7,000 of your fans, dressed in red and yelling "Rebel" travel to see you play.

How the Runnin' Rebels did it was almost as impressive as the scores. For they did not win entirely with their run-and-gun offense, rather they also used defense.

Against SJSU, they forced a PCAA-tournament-record 26 turnovers. Yes, that's right, the Spartans threw the ball away 26 times. By the end of the first half, when UNLV led 54-27, SJSU had already committed 16 turnovers.

"I thought the defensive pressure really hurt us, especially when we went to the bench," Berry said. "I don't know who some of our guys were passing to. It seemed like they were trying to get assists for the other team."

This was most evident after the 13:12 mark of the first half. At that time SJSU had managed to cut the lead to four at 18-14 on a Ricky Berry 18-foot jumper.

It would be the Spartans' last breath. Over the next 11 minutes, SJSU would throw the ball away, get called for traveling and score only one field goal — that being a Dietrich Waters layup at 11:32 of the half. By the time Anthony Perry had hit a layup with 2:14 left in the half, UNLV had outscored the Spartans 31-13.

"We got out of sync and started going a little individual and turning the ball over," Berry said. "We went for a dry spell of nine minutes. That's a hell of a dry spell for any team, especially against Vegas."

"I think, honestly, they're probably the most explosive offensive team in the country," he added. "You really have to try and limit their spurts and we didn't do a very good job of that."

SJSU senior guard Bobby Evans, who was making his last appearance for the Spartans, agreed with his coach.

"In order to win, we needed to play smart and play hard," he said. "When we started off, we didn't keep our tempo."

The Spartans' had also hoped to capitalize on the absence of Mark Wade. The 6-foot point guard, who set a record for the most assists in NCAA history in Thursday night's win over Long Beach State, suffered a sprained knee in their victory Friday night and was unable to play.

But in his place, Gary Graham scored 11 points and Stacey Cvijanovich scored eight points to pick up the slack.

Tarkanian was once again amazed.

"For our guys to win like this without Mark Wade is really incredible because Mark runs our ballclub. He's the heart of our defense," Tarkanian said. "When we found out Mark couldn't play today, I legitimately felt real sick about this game. I thought we'd have a very difficult time winning this game without Mark."

Obviously, he was very wrong. For in addition to Graham and Cvijanovich, the Rebels got outstanding performances from Gerald Paddio, who scored 18 points, all-tourney selection Armon Gilliam, who scored 15 points and tourney MVP Freddie Banks who had 20 points.

Ricky Berry led the Spartans with 19 points but hit just six of 15 shots from the field.

However, a night earlier, the scene for the Spartans had been much better. In that 9 p.m. contest, SJSU battled down to the wire to eliminate UC-Santa Barbara from the tournament by a score of 70-69.

The Spartans were actually fortunate not to have been eliminated themselves. For the Gauchos did indeed have a chance to win the game.

With 10 seconds left and the score 70-69, Evans, who had just made two free throws to give the Spartans the lead, missed one. Santa Barbara then promptly got the ball upcourt where Brian Shaw launched a 14-foot turnaround jump shot. The ball bounced off the rim and Kris Fortson attempted to tip it in, but that too missed and the game was over.

"We got the shot we wanted," Gaucho coach Jerry Pimm said. "I thought it was an excellent shot."

The game itself was back and forth all night. SJSU, behind a 13-4 run at the end of the first half, had managed to go into the locker room with a 34-32 advantage. In the second half, the pace continued down to the wire.

There was a sense of retribution for the Spartans. On Feb. 19 at Santa Barbara, Carrick DeHart had nailed a 15-footer with five seconds left that gave the Gauchos a 53-52 victory.

"Just a great college game," Berry said. "Two evenly matched teams. It was just like the game up at Santa Barbara, except the score was reversed."

The Spartans were led in the contest by Ricky Berry who came through with 26 points, including SJSU's last five field goals. Puou added 14 points and Evans, who was helped off the court in the first half with what was thought to be another injury to his left knee, came on to score eight points.

"It was a great win for us," Coach Berry said. "I think we deserved it and I think we earned it. It's a shame somebody had to lose, but I'm glad it was them."

The lease for the Washington Square Federal Credit Union may need changes. An assistant general counsel for the CSU system, Bruce Richardson, told A.S. President Tom Boothe last week that several amendments should be made.

A.S. President Tom Boothe announced Wednesday that he will not run for re-election.

Boothe said he is seeking the position of director of California state student affairs.

Freshman Monica Cushing has been appointed the new A.S. Director of Business Affairs.

Cushing, who was selected by a 10-0 vote by the board of directors, replaces Scott Davies, who resigned Feb. 11.

Sports

The SJSU basketball team won its opener in the PCAA tournament, defeating New Mexico State 71-54. With the victory, the Spartans advanced to the semifinals against UC-Santa Barbara Friday night.

Spartan guard Ricky Berry was named first team all-PCAA for the 1986-87 season.

The Spartan men's tennis team dropped to 2-1 in conference play after losing to UC-Santa Barbara 6-3 on Wednesday. SJSU's top two seeds, Malcolm Allen and Tom Sheehan both won their matches.

The SJSU baseball team took a nine-game winning streak to San Luis Obispo this weekend for a series against Cal Poly.

Lieutenant George E. Stallman, 27, of the Army Air Corps, has been reported missing after a raid on Berlin on February 26.

Lieut. Stallman is the brother of Miss Josephine Stallman of the San Jose Health department.

Before entering the air corps in 1941, Lieut. Stallman studied here in physical education.

His mother, Mrs. George E. Stallman, received a telegram from the War Department Saturday night reporting her son's failure to return from a bombing raid on the German capital.

Are fraternities and sororities in the California State College system doomed? Is a battle to be fought between the trustees and the Greeks?

These questions may arise next fall when a ruling by the State College Board of Trustees goes into effect.

The ruling, popularly known as the "64 clause," calls for an end to all discriminatory covenants, ritual and practice by fraternities and sororities.

The penalty for failure to comply with the ruling is withdrawal of official recognition by the college.

Malden won't leave home without it

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It happens quite often, Karl Malden says, when he is dining out with friends.

"I ask for the check, and I notice that three or four waiters or waitresses are hanging around," he said. "I bring out my credit card or even a traveler's check, and they say, 'We were wondering how you would pay for it!'"

The reason, of course, is Malden's role as TV huckster for American Express traveler's checks. He is also subjected to the repeated refrain from strangers: "I hope you didn't leave home without it."

"I enjoy every minute of it," the 72-year-old actor admits. "I've been with American Express for 14 years, and I have two more to go on this contract. It really has given me the luxury of picking other things." He chose "Billy Galvin."

"When I read the script, I thought it was a nice father-son story," said Malden. "Then the young people who were making it came to me and said they had half the money to make the film. They claimed if I would agree to come aboard, they could raise the other half.

Protesters burn magazines, dispute ensues

'Take Back the Night' marchers find the night fights back, but rally continues through downtown

the store as the women were leaving. Edmondson said he noticed one woman, whom he could not identify, leaving the shop with bruises and scratches.

He also said he collected cups and candles from the sidewalk and ashes from remnants of a magazine that had been thrown into the store by an unknown person.

San Jose police Sgt. Dwight Messimer said burning magazines in an open space is against the law.

Kelly, an SJSU graduate, held a magazine in her hand yelling, "This is what we're fighting against," Zertuche said.

Kelly has filed an assault and battery report with SJPD.

The case will be investigated to see if it warrants prosecution, Messimer said.

Kelly said when she participated in last year's march, she entered the bookstore during that march and bought one of the magazines.

"I picked out the most violent magazine (with) a girl crouched on a Coke bottle. I bought the magazine and I burned it outside, and the man came out enraged," Kelly said. "There was no fight that time."

After leaving the bookstore, the marchers began chanting and moved on to the Pussycat Theatre. There, a woman wearing tight red pants and a low-cut top came out.

The woman asked Kelly if she was a lesbian, and Kelly asked her if she was a hooker, Kelly said.

When the woman's picture was taken, she began yelling and threatening the photographer.

Another man standing with her said, "We're going to burn those lesbians."

The woman followed the marchers down the street yelling for the man to get the pictures.

March coordinator Biegun said Kelly and the 18 other marchers were protesting against pornography and unsafe streets.

"We see a direct link between violence against women and pornography," she said.

The marchers began at the Student Union Amphitheatre and went west on San Fernando Street. Heading south on First Street, they passed the bookstore and the theater and returned to SJSU.

The marchers held hands in the Amphitheatre and sang "We Shall Overcome."

Allison Kelsey, co-coordinator of the Women's Center, said she was stunned but happy they stood up to the man.

"It takes guts for you people to be here," she said.

Biegun said she didn't expect it to happen and was scared. "The man could have easily been carrying a club or a gun."

"The (woman at the Pussycat Theatre) couldn't understand that we were fighting for her rights.

"We are doing so much good out here," Biegun said.

"I'm committed to non-violence," one marcher said. "Maybe she shouldn't have gone in the store or burned the magazine. But she had no protection."
