AVP candidate speaks at forum

A candidate for academic vice president addressed higher education issues during an open forum Thursday week.

Leslie Cochran, acting president and provost Southeast Missouri State University, was the first AVP candidate to visit the campus

'Higher education is on the brink, and that means issues need to be discussed and alternatives explored," Cochran said

"You can probably make a ten-to-fifteen-percent difference. Even though it is a small amount, it is a critical component. The way to approach higher education is to say 'I can modify or improve it,' 'he said.

An essential objective for educational institutions is to find a balance between access and excellence, Cochran said to an audience of about 20 faculty members and administrators.

The forum began with a 30-minute open statement from the candidate. The remaining time was devoted to questions from the audience.

One area Cochran said needed balance is outside agencies' view of the university

The few remaining candidates will be asked to visit the university to meet with President Gail Fullerton, the AVP search committee and other appropriate people, said Jose Colchado, chairman of the AVP search committee.

During their visit, candidates are offered at least one opportunity to address the SJSU com-candidate stressed was a well-developed general education program. He said most institutions don't have a program, but only a collection of

An aspect of the AVP job Cochran said was essential is knowledge of the budget.

If an institution's president and the executive vice president don't know where the money is, then the AVP should, Cochran said. The legislature will not vote in more money, so the institu-tion has to be smart enough to bring in three to five percent more of the budget.

A few of the responsibilities of the AVP in clude directing the activities of the eight schools under the direction of the president, helping form campus policies, encouraging faculty research and explaining campus and California State University policies to faculty and staff.

One question from the audience raised concerns about the diverse minority population on in dealing with different ethnic gruops

"I deal with all groups in a humar don't single out anyone. Southeastern Missouri State isn't homogeneous. Our student population is seven percent black, the largest number in the state. We have some issues, but they may not be the same volatile ones," he said.

As a closing comment the candidate spoke on what he called the "spirit of September."

"At the beginning of the semester everyone is fresh, but administrators need to figure how to extend that for nine months. It can be vibrant work, not everyday, but you have to have that ex-citement," Cochran said.

After the forum, the candidate was sched-uled to meet with Fullerton. Throughout his visit, different faculty members escorted Cochran around campus in order to meet him in a less for-

Alpha Tau Omega fraternity sponsored a Volleyball-A-Thon Thursday from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. with proceeds benefiting the Spartan baseball team. This event was an effort to get other fraternities involved in supporting Spartan athletics. Each ATO member had to raise at least $10. The fraternity hoped to reach its goal of $1,000. The money could help the sluggers travel to a tournament, if needed.

Lorentz site cleanup plan to be devised

Investigation may take years

A contractor for the state health department will begin an investigation Friday to discover the best way to clean up polluted soil and groundwater at a local drum recy-

Some of the hazardous substances at the Lorentz Barrel and Drum Co. site at 1515 S. 10th St. are cadmium, chromium, lead, nickel, organic pesticides organic solvents and polychlorinated bi-

An in-depth investigation and cleanup plan by CH2M Hill — the only contractor for the job — may take as long as two years to complete and could be a complete and could be a second or the plant of the plant cost as much as $4 million, said Howard Hatayama, health department supervisor for the Lorentz site.

The contamination poses a "direct threat" to local wells, including an SJSU well which provides water to Spartan Stadium, the report said.

The county health department tested the stadium well March 12 for "volatile organic chemicals and it was clear," said Glenn Hildebrand, a county environmental health specialist.

The test was done after a state health department official met with an SJSU representative March 9 and requested the university test the well more frequently

Before that time, the well had not been tested for eight months. It will be tested quarterly now, Hildebrand said.

Hatayama said he could not estimate how much actual cleanup will cost or how long it will take to complete until the investigation and plan are finished.

Before the "comprehensive cleanup" begins, the health department will present its findings and cleanup plan to the public as required by law, Hatayama said.

Although the owner of the property, Ernest Lorentz Jr., is responsible for cleanup costs, the state may end up footing the bill.

Lorentz has already spent about $300,000 cleaning up the site and removing about 50,000 steel drums, and he still owes about $200,000 for other cleanup costs, said Lorentz' lawyer, Harrett Mannina Sr.

The land is all Lorentz has left, Mannina said. Once it is sold, "He's

California in trouble, rep says

An assemblywoman believes the state of California should be more like IBM and Ford Motor Co. and adopt long-range plans to solve the state's current economic problems

"You need to spend money to make money," said Rep. Delaine Eastin, D-Fremont. "Ford Motors didn't stop spending money when it had problems and (International Business Machines) never would consider not planning ahead . . But California is living on investments made by our fathers and grandfathers in the 1950s and 1960s."

Health official presents facts about AIDS

By Paige C. Borgel

A history of AIDS — its causes, victims and prevention — was discussed last week in Washburn Hall, a SJSU

In the past two years 34,000 acquired immune deficiency syndrome cases have been diagnosed in the United States, said David Burgess, a representative from the Santa Clara County Health Department.

Of those cases, 204 are in Santa Clara County — double number diagnosed last year — Burgess told the 40 people who attended the Thursday presentation.
Burgess said it isn't known how AIDS got to the U.S., but one theory is the disease may have started in a remote area of Africa where approximately 10 million people are infected with Visitors to Africa may have picked up the disease and Safety shouldn't be compromised on the Guadalupe light-rail project

The most important criterion for a transportation system is its safety. Increased costs be guaranteed. can never justify putting safety second.

Delays in the San Jose Guadalupe Corricounty $2 million. Delays could push the service start date of the northern half of the 20-mile system past Dec. 31, costing the county a loss of $10 million in federal funds. If they don't meet the deadline, they won't get the funds.

This week a review of Santa Clara County Transit Agency records revealed project electrical inspectors have complained in their reports a result of time-pressure-induced shoddy of "ill-inspected" equipment, too little time to workmanship, shortcuts or design flaws will do their jobs, lack of plans and drawings to add unimaginable future costs to its total price. base their inspections on, interference by contractors and quality control problems.

Los Angeles

I live in a town with a bad reputation,

- lyrics from a song by the band Translator

the movie "Annie Hall," New Yorker Woody Allen makes fun of the sprawling city that makes up much of Southern California. What's the difference between yogurt and Los Angeles? we can hear him joking. Yogurt has culture.

The film's title character, on the other hand, is attracted by the success Los Angeles has to offer. A singing career that goes nowhere in New York blossoms in California. Allen, the quintessential Easterner, loses his love to the lure of the West.

Los Angeles is fast on its way to replacing New York as the cultural and economic center of the world. The entertainment industry moved west long ago; a bur geoning art and theater scene now calls Los Angeles home. As we enter the age of the Pacific Rim, the city is taking the lead as a center of banking and trade. The city's major newspaper, the Los Angeles Times, is perhaps the best in the world.

Despite its many faults — smog, congestion, traf-fic and an often smug insincerity — Los Angeles feels like an important place. It's the kind of city San Francisco used to be and San Jose so desperately wants to be cople used to say Los Angeles was a collection of suburbs in search of a city. That may have been true, but it looks as if they've found one.

Although the concept of urban sprawl was invented in the southern half of the state, the big-city core of Los Angeles stretches about 10 miles from the multicultural downtown, through Hollywood, the Wilshire district, Beverly Hills and out to Westwood. In that area, there's all the intensity and diversity, ranging from the civilized to the eclectic to the downright perverse, that anyone could ever need.

Part of the attractiveness of living in a big place is the fact that however specific your taste, there's someone out there among the millions who shares it. There are few places where that's true, but Los Angeles is one

San Jose, on the other hand, hasn't reached that point and probably never will. This valley's attitude is then, you're just out of it.

Los Angeles accommodates almost all kinds, from the greedy to the concerned, the pragmatic to the unreatistically ambitious, the free-spirited to the down-to-

The city is almost hostile, though, to those thatdon't share its worship of the automobile. Southern California, in contrast to the San Francisco Bay Area, lacks an efficient mass transportation system. Although short trips, particularly in Santa Monica, West Los Angeles and parts of Orange County, are possible by bus, for any real travel, you either drive or you're pretty much out of luck

Los Angeles is thinking about entering the modern world with its Metro Rail subway that will eventually link downtown with Hollywood and the San Fernando Valley. San Jose's regional planners are far more progressive with their plans to link the city to the Bay Area tapid Transit system and criss-cross the valley with light rail

Los Angeles, though, will continue to be dependent on and possibly strangled by its overloaded freeway system, until it builds rail transit that links south Orange County with the San Fernando Valley and Santa Monica with San Bernadino. That's unlikely in this century, if

Southern California and its biggest city may very well be the place to be right now and should hold that status at least until the end of the century, but don't tell anybody you read it here.

Northern California will probably always take a back seat to the southern half of the state and in many ways it shares its problems. But that's no reason to hop the next plane south. Compared to the rest of the world, this is an important place, too. Like stress, most people can't take urban intensity for very long. And as far as the basics, particularly just getting from here to there, we'll always have Los Angeles beat

Protesters, demonstrators the bane of U.S. society

Perhaps the most revered component of the United States Constitution is the First Amendment, which guarantees citizens the right to free speech and freedom of the press. Nothing

But the largess of the amendment doesn't stop with these essential rights. It also grants people the right to peacefully as-semble to protest whatever they so desire.

Historically, Americans have done just that. Organized labor, the suffragette movements and Vietnam War demonstrators all relied on protest marches to publicize and persuade the masses of their particular cause.

But most individuals who were, or are, involved in protests Viewpoint have been manipulated by irrational, self-serving extremists who sometimes abuse their constitutional rights.

Recently, this type of activism has been on the upswing Groups protesting everything from the CIA recruiting on col-lege campuses, proposed cuts in California educational funding to a scheduled speech by El Salvador's President Jose Napo-leon Duarte have made front-page headlines.

Idealistic Amy Carter, the daughter of former Utopian President Carter, was acquitted of trespassing and disorderly conduct in a campus sit-in at Brown University aimed at CIA recruitment on that campus. Forget the fact that the intelligence agency was at Brown legally: the verdict was ridiculous. Carter and her codefendants should have been fined for their political

Closer to home, about 5,000 students, activists and thrillseekers converged upon Sacramento April 6 to protest Gov

Deukmejian's proposed cuts in educational funding.

On the surface, their actions were positive because the state educational fund will receive in excess of $900 million next year. Youth are thereby guaranteed a quality education, right? Don't hold your breath — simply spending money is not the solution to some considerable educational shortcomings.

Duarte, who was to have been the keynote speaker at the World Affairs Council of Northern California's annual conference this Friday, canceled his appearance amid speculation that up to 2,000 opponents — a local police estimate — of Duarte and U.S. policy in Central America would protest the Pacific Grove session. Apparently, the beleaguered president feared for his actual and political life.

The problem with protesting against the perceived lack of education funding or Duarte's speech is that the protesters are being manipulated by special-interest groups who, in their mind-set have a cause, but in reality are the modern version of the goldfish swallowers or phone-booth stuffers of yester-year — they participate just for the sake of doing something.

Granted, there are undoubtedly sincere individuals behind the machinations of the masses, but they are in the minority. On the whole, individuals who participate in these marches are in life. Placing blind faith behind a political activist movement is only detrimental to the individual and society. But, you may wonder, how can supporting increased funding for public schools be injurious to a society whose very survival is contingent upon the enlightenment of the masses?

irrational, idealistic young people trying to "find" their niches

While spending money is required to educate people, sim-appropriating money will not ensure educational quality.

But that is the message being sent: "Spend money or lose spu-Education is certainly more dynamic than people are being led to believe. But money alone will not bring about the long overdue changes in public education. For real change, people must change. There are numerous factors — the critical roles of family, the individual, values and self-discipline — involved in genuine education. Certainly, the real strength and health of this nation depends on the education and character of In usually peaceful Pacific Grove, just the threat of violent demonstrations was enough to bring about change this week.

The conference will go on as scheduled, only without Duarte. Other politicians and specialists will speak about Central America, but Americans have lost an opportunity to hear the other side of the story; the ideological-right or centrist side which receives minimal media coverage. Obviously, American citizens will continue to protest whatever they perceive as unjust, and in some cases peaceful demonstrations can facilitate meaningful change, as was the case with the civil rights movement.

However, as long as political activists advocate change on visceral level, and use idealistic goldfish-swallowing students to bring about that change, the omnipotent First Amendment will continue to be trampled upon

Review deals Nick Lowe low blow

Covering presidents still risky

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hazards of covering presidents on vacation may have changed since the days of Theodore Roosevelt, but reporters accompanying President Reagan to California still can boast of some hair-raising mo-

Take last week, for instance, when a pool of reporters was flown by helicopter from the Santa Barbara airport to the president's ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains for a briefing on arms talks.

At the ranch, Reagan and Secretary of State George P Shultz made their statements and answered a few questions.

There were no incidents, other than Secret Service agents pointing out four large fake boulders in the lawn around the ranch house, which they said contained alarm

The previous day, an agent said, a large brown bear had been seen in the woods behind the house. When the reporters were there, however, all they saw were four dogs, two cats, six horses, one duck and a rabbit.

Back at the airport, however, things got more exciting. While the pool of reporters, broadcast technicians and photographers sat in a pair of vans just off an airport runway awaiting Shultz' arrival by helicopter, the nose of an Avi-anca Airlines 707 attempting to land at the airport suddenly emerged from a low-lying fog.

Reporters said the plane was headed straight at the vans. At the very last moment, the Avianca pilot banked his plane hard to the right and ascended to try another landing, leaving reporters sitting in stunned silence.

As for how it was in TR's day, consider this account which appeared on page one of The New York Times for April 10, 1903, while Roosevelt was vacationing in Yellowstone National Park.

Under a Cinnabar, Mont., dateline, the Times reported, "Notwithstanding that numerous notices had been given to the outside world that no newspapermen would be allowed in the park while the president was there, one enter-prising reporter tried to force his way in yesterday."

"He rode a horse and had a dog with him," the news-paper reported. "The man was arrested before he had pro-ceeded far, and the dog was shot. Later, the correspondent

At a press conference in 1953, not long after he took office, Eisenhower was asked if he was satisfied with the cooperation and treatment his legislative program was getting from the Republican majority in Congress.

"Well, I don't think that is much of a question," Ike shot back. "I must say I think that is pretty general.

The general then went on to give a general answer, saying the important thing was to "get a progressive, eeded program out before the people for their guidance and

At Eisenhower's 193rd and last press conference as president, he was asked whether he thought the press had treated him fairly

Ike flashed his famous grin and gave this reply: "Well, when you come down to it, I don't see what a reporter could do much to a president, do you?"

port runway that has become heavy with jet traffic since American Airlines opened its hub here last year. Hartman and his wife were one of the first residents of Airport Estates when they arrived in 1948, at a time when you wouldn't have but one or two planes a day

Standing on the doorstep of his small woodframe house, Hartman waits to make another point while another jet roars over the rooftops, drowning out passing cars, chirping birds and children at play nearby.

"My wife can't hardly stand it — she's had a stroke and heart trouble — especially when they line up six, eight, 10 at a time," he said. "They're so close, you can even

"You can throw the alarm clock away," said Hartman, 64, a retired bakery salesman. "It's my waking up he threw out their wooden picnic table after the hub opened last April.

"We no longer have eatouts outside — we gave that up last summer," said Rocco, 43, a systems analyst who lived there for 16 years. Tom Giles, president of the Airport Estates Homeowners Association, says there is a $2 million airport plan to buy 25 homes in the tract, but he claims the plan does not go far enough. Giles wants the entire tract purchased by the airport authority 'They should have bought the estates out long ago,'

That plan would include a buyout of more homes, but not necessarily the entire development.

One group, NOISE, or Neighbors Organized to Insure a Sound Environment, says it represents 300 households. It filed a federal lawsuit seeking to halt construction of a $105 million terminal and plans for a $75 million runway until environmental studies are completed.

The airport says it has complied with all federal regulations. The suit goes to trial next month

Reagan gets close to media

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan will be interviewed by six reporters for 15 minutes in the Oval Office on Tuesday as part of a White House campaign to increase the president's contact with the media.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater pledged Fri-day that more such sessions would be held in the future. Fitzwater said the president did not plan to hold a formal, broadcast news conference in April, but that other types of meetings with the media were under consideration.

6 "We're looking for alternative ways to provide access to the president . . . press conferences, individual interviews, trip press conferences," Fitzwater said.

Access to the president was severely limited in the months of the Iran-Contra affair, and Reagan's new chief of staff Howard Baker has pledged to make the president more available during his last two years in office. The president told White House correspondents at their annual dinner Wednesday that "in spite of our disagreements, I have a positive opinion of reporters."

"I'm sure we get exasperated now and then with each other, but that's just the friction of freedom," Reagan said.

One reason for this problem is Proposition 4, Eastin said.

Proposition 4, called the Gann Initiative, limited government spending to population growth plus the consumer price index. This has set a spending limit at 1.7 percent, she said.

The result has been less spending for such items as education, transportation and toxic cleanup, which have grown in need since the initiative passed

However, the problems are not limited to the Gann law, she said.

Spartan defense new test for Rea

Donnie Rea may be new to the SJSU coaching staff, but he isn't new to head coach Claude Gilbert.

"I recruited him when I was coaching at San Diego State University," Gilbert said. "I'm partially responsible for him being a coach. I encouraged him to be a graduate assistant coach, then I hired him to be a full-time assistant

Rea is taking over as the outside linebacker coach, replacing Dan Hen-son, who is now the SJSU quarterback

Rea coached the outside linebackers at the University of Southern California for the last four years. He will still be coaching the same position here, but the hilosophy of the two defenses is vastly

"We never blitzed at USC in four years," Rea said. "We still ranked in the Top 10 in defense in the country."

The Spartans, with their "46" de fense, offer Rea a new challenge.

"I've never been involved with a defense like this one," Rea said. "This is the type of defense that tells the of-fense on every play, 'We're coming after

In the "46" defense, one outside linebacker sets up in front of the tight end and the other lines up in front of the tackle. On the snap, both linebackers will attack their opposing players in an attempt to get to the quarterback or the running back.

"We want every tackle," Rea said. "We want every opposing quarterback, running back, tight end and offensive lineman to know that we're coming after

'He wants us to be intense on every play, but at the same time know when not to be intense," said SJSU linebacker Chris Alexander.

Rea, 38, coached some top notch linebackers at USC, including All-Americans Jack Del Rio, now a member of the New Orleans Saints and Duane Bickett of the Indianapolis Colts. Bickett was the 1984 Pac-10 Defensive Player of the Year and 1985 AFC Defensive Rookie of

He considers current USC linebacker Marcus Cotton one of the best players he's ever coached.

"He can outrun some running ss," Rea said. SJSU linebacker Bill Alcantara feels that Rea's coaching ability is the reason behind his players achieving

"Coach Rea brings the best out in every player," Alcantara said. "He tells us exactly what he wants us to do." The first time the Mount San Antonio Junior College transfer saw Rea, he thought Rea would be a tough coach.

"He looked like a coach who runs everything by the book," Alcantara said. "But as it turned out, he was easy to get along with."
The first meeting occurred after the team ran the ramps in Spartan Stadium

fort of running the ramps.

"He went on to say that we looked like a good bunch of guys to work with," Alcantara said. "He also said 's looking forward to working with us

Gilbert got in touch with Rea after was fired at USC at the end of the 1986 season. Rea is still bitter about how

'I've never been involved with a defense like this one. This is the type of defense that tells the offense on every play, "We're coming after

Women cagers sign four recruits

SJSU women's basketball coach Tina Krah announced last Wednesday that four high school seniors have signed letters of intent to play at SJSU

Two of them, La Tasha Causey and Dana Jones, come from Los Angeles, with a third recruit, Pam McNelis, hailing from Portland, Ore. and the fourth, Patty Meiner, still playing her season in Prescott, Ariz.

Basketball

"We are very excited by the re-s," Krah said. "With them, plus Joyce (Stewart), Johnnie (Thomas), Tamara (Tigue), Teddi (Johnson) and Mary Beth (Ledesma), I feel that we have nine quality people that can help move us up the ladder.

The Spartans can only go up after finishing last season with a 1-17 record in PCAA play, 3-23 overall. They closed out the season with a 15-game losing streak

Krah said that there is a possibility that one more player may be signed.
"We are still waiting for other results like SAT test scores," Krah said. "We'll also have a few players who will try out for the team."

Causey, a 5-5 guard, averaged nine points for Lynwood High last season. She was a member of the Los Angeles Times all-South Coast team. She made the all-tournament team for the McNelis, another 5-7 guard, averaged 14 points and six rebounds for Sunset High. She was a first team allleague and third team, all-state se-lection. Sunset High finished fifth in the state

'We have lots of spots open which makes coming to SJSU very attractive.'

Los Angeles city tournament

Jones averaged 20 points and 10 rebounds for Reseda High. The 5-7 guard was the West Valley League's Player of the Year and the Division 3A

Since Arizona high schools have their women's basketball schedule set for the spring, final statistics were not available on Meiner, a 6-1 forward. Krah said that Meiner is currently averaging 15 points and 10 rebounds per

"The people we got wanted to make a contribution in their freshman year," Krah said. "We have lots of spots open which makes coming to

SJSU very attractive.

That includes the guard position, because April Gafford and Patty Duke won't be returning because they are graduating this year. Of the five returning players, two are in the process of recovering from surgery they had near the end of the Krah said Tigue, who tore ligaments in her knee in the Spartans' 97-60 loss to Fresno State on Feb. 19, is a little ahead of schedule in recovering from her surgery.

'We're not pushing her for a quick recovery, she is pushing her-self," Krah said. "It's a day-by-day recovery for Tami."

Thomas, who finished night in the PCAA in scoring with a 14.3 average and eighth in rebounding with an average of nine per game, cracked her knee cap in the Spartans' final game of the year against San Diego State.

"We hope to have Johnnie going at full speed in three months," Krah he and the rest of the Trojan coaching

What was done to (former USC head coach) Ted Tollner and the rest of the coaching staff was wrong," Rea said. "When a team wins seven games and its coaching staff gets fired, something's wrong."
But it's a different story at SJSU.

"I like the coaches, the players and the school," Rea said. "I couldn't be
