A.S. president vetoes club funding

By Edwin Garcia Daily staff writer

Because Clubz Day has been suspended, As-sociated Students President Michael McLennan vetoed a $726 allocation for the proposed event at Wednesday's A.S. board of directors meeting. The board moved to allocate $726 for the A.S. sponsored Clubz Day by a 7-3 vote at the Sept. 9 meeting. By a 9-1 vote, the board agreed to acquire funds from special allocations. But a lack of organization has postponed Clubz Day — scheduled for Sept. 30 — possibly until next semester.

"We weren't organized for that particular date," said Francois Larrivee, A.S. director of sponsored programs and a Clubz Day organizer. The $726 was allocated to cover the cost of 12 club booths and other expenses for groups pro-moting their campus presence to other SJSU stu-

Clubs would also have used their booths rented from the A.S. for $20 - to sell food, and the A.S. would have received some of the money in return.

There are about 170 campus clubs and orga-nizations at SJSU, and a "first come, first served" basis would have been applied for the 12 available booths, Larrivee said during the Sept. 9 meeting McLennan's veto was his first since taking office June 1.

"I vetoed the allocation because the event it-self was postponed," McLennan said. "This in no way applies that they can't come back to the board (to re-submit an allocation request). I didn't want to have the $726 in limbo and not be able to allocate it to other organizations," McLennan said Since Clubz Day is to be rescheduled for the spring semester, McLennan said he felt it was better to place the money back into the $3,000 special allocatons fund

Tom Boothe, director of California State affairs, said that since Clubz Day was introduced earlier this month, it has suffered from weak organization due to the short time frame allowed for planning

Boothe said he was concerned that clubs may not have had a fair chance at renting a space because only 12 were available, and also said lack of publicity was a problem.

"I think that a great number of clubs would be interested, if they were informed," Boothe

When the funds were allocated for Clubz Day at the Sept. 9 meeting, less than 12 clubs had expressed interest, Larrivee said.

Neither Boothe or McLennan foresee problems with a spring semester event.

Board decision on scholarship is postponed

Friday, September 18, 1987

By Charlotte Banta

Daily staff writer Should a person be able to fund position and then help select the person to serve on it?

That's the question the Asso-ciated Students Board of Directors have posed before them, and the de-cision reached may cost SJSU stu-dents a 1,000 scholarship to fund the A.S. Program Board's concert chairman

On Wednesday, the A.S. Board of Directors, with some members still unsure of the intentions of Hector Lizardi, voted to postpone any action until it can obtain more information. Lizardi donated the $1,000 scholarship and wants to serve on the selection committee.

A.S. Program Board Adviser Ted Gehrke indicated that a non-voting capacity for Lizzardi could eliminate the concert scholarship and possibly other scholarship possibilities. "If you want to accept this (scholarship) you'd better count Hector in," Gehrke told the A.S. board of directors

Dan McIntosh, A.S. director of academic affairs, spoke openly against putting Lizardi, tour director for such artists as Bob Dylan and the Grateful Dead and a former A.S. program board concert chairman, on the selection committee.

"In my mind, this person is buying a voting seat," McIntosh said.

A.S. President Mike McLennan also hesitant to put Lizardi on the selection commitee as a voting member.

"We should be honored, but also cautious," McLennan said. "We're setting a precedence with the underlining principle of buying a seat. What's it going to cost to buy another seat?"

Up until two weeks ago when Scott Valor, A.S. Program Board di-rector, first appeared before the board of directors to ask them to include Lizardi as a part of the se-lection committee, board members were under the impression that Lizardi had donated a scholarship and that they would never hear from him See BOARD, page 6

Campus reaction varies on fee hike

Parking rates will change in '88

By Julie Rogers

SJSU students and faculty expressed mixed reactions ranging from resentment to approval of the new $81 semester parking fee which will take effect next fall. "It's ridiculous." said Kristy

"It's ridiculous," said Kristy Weaver, a student. "We're already starving students as it is.

Weaver's friend Cristy Voss said "This is outrageous. First, they raise our tuition, now they want to increase parking fees."

The increase, almost three times as high as the current $33.75 fee to park in one of SJSU's three parking garages, is the result of the California State University Board of Trustees adopting a differential fee hike at its monthly meeting Wednesday in Long Beach.

Under this new fee plan, stu dents and faculty at all 19 CSU schools will pay rates varying from $54 to $81, based on the ratio of garage spaces to total parking spaces on each campus. Because SJSU and San Francisco State University have the most garage spaces in the system, rates for students and faculty will be the highest at $81.

"Eighty-one dollars is not going to kill me," said John Hagele, a student. "I go to school five days a week and if you take the time to analyze (the new fee increase), it's not that much of a difference," he said.

The fall semester consists of 16 chool weeks. If a student attends classes five days a week and pays the current 75 cent parking fee, the student would have paid a total of $60 at the end of one semester.

"What's going to happen is that a lot of people won't want to pay $81 to park (at SJSU). Then there will be enough parking spots," Hagele said. Joe Loos, another student, said that he would rather try and find a place on the streat and nark for fram place on the street and park for free. "I think $81 is a rip-off," he

Presently only students who live in the dorms, take evening classes or classes at the airport and faculty can purchase semester per-mits for $33.75.

However, according to the new plan, these students and faculty will also be affected by the fee increase and will have to pay $81 to park on campus next fall

Air Force ROTC program turns 40

By Kathy Dwyer

Today marks the 40th anniversary of the United States Air Force and SJSU's Air Force ROTC chapter.

A rifle team demonstration by SJSU Air Force ca-dets will be held for the public at Municipal Stadium at 3:30 p.m.

In honor of National POW/MIA, a retreat service will also be held by the SJSU Air Force ROTC at 5 p.m. There are more than 2,400 American POWs and MIAs in Southeast Asia, said Capt. Larry Bouchard, as-sistant professor of aerospace studies at SJSU. The service will be held on the corner of Fourth and

San Carlos streets

A POW/MIA flag will be lowered and carried by a joint-service color guard composed of members of the Army, Navy, Marines and Air Force. Because the annual POW/MIA commemoration takes place at a national level, the date of the event was moved up this year, Bouchard said.

The change was made to accommodate the wishes of numerous individuals and organizations to have local POW/MIA families available for ceremonies and activities in their home states.

According to a recent National League of Families POW/MIA memorandum, public awareness has proved effective in gaining greater support in this country See ROTC, page 6

Student Union gets new handrails

By Brenda Tai Lam Daily staff write

For the first time in 13 years something is finally being replaced on the outside of the Student Union. This week new and improved handrails are being installed and primed. They should be completed by the end of the month.

Bamer Construction Company of Castro Valley won the bid last summer to replace the handrails and the Student Union budget was planned around the $49,000 price tag, said Pat Wiley, Student Union associate director.

The new handrails are made from Alaskan vellow cedar and are replacing the poor-quality wood of the original handrails, which were not made out of cedar.

"If we had let (the old handrails) go another cou ple of years, we might have had an accident," Wiley said.

The old railings had dry rot due to years of expo sure to sun and rain, he said. The new handrails are expected to last a lifetime.

Currently the handrails at the south staircase out side the bookstore are being replaced, Wiley said. Next weekend the north staircase by the Engineering Building will have its handrails replaced. The handrails and planter boxes on the terrace above the cafeteria patio will also be replaced.

This is the first time anything has been replaced outside the Student Union, although the carpeting and upholstery inside have been replaced several times, Wiley said.

We (the Student Union personnel) feel we've maintained the Student Union really well and we're proud of it," he said.

New parking plan unfair

The California State University Board of Trustees' decision to raise parking fees throughout the CSU system unnecessarily burdens SJSU students and employees.

Forcing SJSU students to pay $81 a semester for a parking permit discriminates against campuses like SJSU that have primarily parking garages as opposed to open-air lots. The amount of increase is based on the ratio of a campus' garage spaces to to total spaces overall SJSU and San Francisco State University, which happen to have the most garage parking in the system, are unfairly singled out for the highest increase.

In addition, the board's move assumes that in time a parking-permit plan will be in place at all 19 CSU campuses. Such a plan would probably not work here at SJSU because students, staff and faculty members would be paying in advance for a parking space that is not even remotely guaranteed.

Considering this, a large percentage of SJSU drivers will continue to use the parkingfee machines at the three campus garages. But ache will be added to the parking problem.

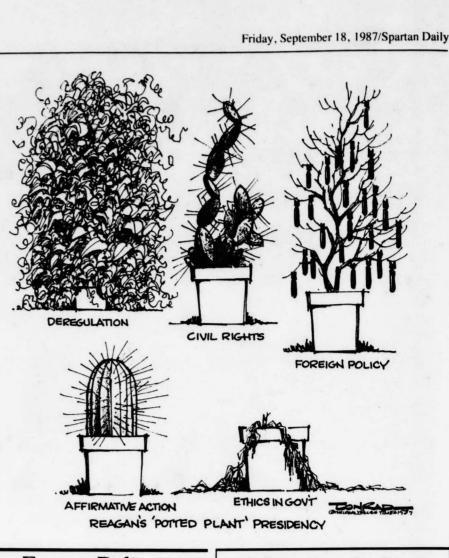

those machines now will have to be replaced, because Parking Operations Manager Henry Orbach estimated that fee would go up to $2 a day

If anyone thought it was awkward to feed three quarters into a slot while braking an idling car, they will no doubt be thrilled finding two prefectly smooth dollar bills to feed into the new machines

It's also hard to swallow the board's reasons for increasing the fee for students who happen to attend schools with a predominance of parking garages. Fall 1988 semester students will be paying for SJSU parking decisions made years ago

If the board's motivation is to encourage students to boycott campus parking then it might succeed. A large number of students, staff, and faculty could theoretically park on streets blocks away from campus and catch a local transit bus or shuttle bus — spending considerably less than the proposed $2-a-day or $81-a-semester rate at SJSU.

It appears that by next fall, another head-

Animal rights respected

Editor

A letter published in the Sept. 11 Spartan Daily, "SJSU should respect animal rights," referred to the live animals that form an integral part of the Science Education Resource Center.

The author took the SERC to task for "large snakes sealed into small glass fish tanks," and turtles in "dirty glass prisons." In fact, the Resource Center snakes are housed in sanitary plexiglas cages that allow the animal

Hello, Vatican? Yes, may I speak to the per-son who planned the pope's United States

Oh, what's that? He's busy working on the Osmond Brothers-Grateful Dead Middle East

Tour," with the main gig in Beirut. Oh well, maybe you can help me. I need someone, anyone, to call the pope back home. Maybe you could tell him that his long-lost cousin has arrived there — that always seems to work here for surprise parties.

No, you say, and that won't work anyway be-cause the pope still has to visit Detroit and see why American cars are so inferior to Japanese cars and he still has to buy shirts for all his staff back at the Vatican which say: "My pope went to the U.S. and all I got was this lousy T-shirt?" Oh, I see, important stuff. What's that? You want to know why he should come home early? Is it, you ask, his health?

o, far from it. He's doing so well and moving so quickly, that I think by last count he had put at least 10 reporters in the hospital due to exhaustion. In fact, everyone's starting to wonder if he's in training for the 1988 Olympic Marathon. So what's that you want to know? Why I'm wasting your time about why the pope should come back home? Well, let me tell you. For starters, the media has run out of stories on him. They've talked about his diet, his clothes, his family, his hobbies, his likes and everything else.

I'm just concerned that if the pope stays any longer, he's going to be so over-publicized that he's going to have to follow in the footsteps of Michael Jackson, buy a bed that pumps in oxygen, and stay in seclusion for three years.

But the main reason for this call is that I'm fearful that if the pope doesn't leave soon, the United States of America will cease functioning normally.

Community Perspective

The pope conducts Monterey Mass

Laguna Seca, Monterey County's large outdoor ampitheater was the site of the public celebration of the Eucharist for the Holy Father's visit yesterday.

Approximately 70,000 people participated in this historical event to see and hear the Mass celebration performed by Pope John Paul II.

I was one of those volunteers who had dedicated time and effort to prepare for the papal visit.

It was an unbelievable sight to see hundreds of people arriving as early as 2 a.m., carrying blankets, lawn chairs, binoculars and food as if they were attending a football game.

Security was enforced to the extreme. Three hun-dred U.S. Secret Service agents dressed in dark suits and sunglasses thoroughly guarded every area near the stage, gates and check-in points

Under a shroud of thick, misty fog, the unfriendly and brutal-looking guards monitored every move we made. Some people felt uncomfortable; however, many people put up with the inconvenience because viewing the pope was a once-in-a-lifetime happening

Unfortunately, there was a major problem affecting thousands - transportation.

Hundreds of buses that were donated by different company's specifically for the pope's visit were not available as had been originally promised.

The Monterey Diocese said they were doing the best they could to somehow arrange tickets to Friday's Candlestick Park Mass for those who didn't attend the Monterey Mass.

Aside from the transportation problems, other preparations for the visit, such as the construction of the pope's stage, decorations and the conversion of the Laguna Seca race track into a glorious holy land, went as expected.

There was a huge cross on the top of a hill, and many thousands of beautiful red petunias flowed down to the cross-shaped stage.

During the dreary early morning wait - some people waited in excess of seven hours — entertainment such as a mariachi band and a Polish folk dancing troupe performed

Despite the actitives, people had come to see the ope. As the 10 a.m. sermon neared, the air began to fill with tense excitement.

Suddenly, a helicopter appeared in the now sunny sky and people started clapping because everyone knew it was John Paul II.

Led by dozens of cars and buses, the cheerfully waving pope was brought to the podium via his bullet-proof "popemobile." At this point, many people were waving small peace flags and cheering the pontiff's arrival

During his sermon, the pope unexpectedly walked toward the crowd, many who were local farm workers, and reached out to hug and bless the people around him. Many cried. It was a very emotional scene.

Having experienced and witnessed such an historical event, this remarkable moment will never be forgotten in my heart.

ample room to prowl and slither. The greenish-brown rabbit pellets used in the turtle enclosures might appear

"dirty" but they are the best bedding available. In the last six months, our facility has been in-spected by the University's Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee (including a representative from the Santa Clara Valley Humane Society), the Department of Agriculture and the Food and Drug Administration. They were all satisfied that the Resource Center animals were getting the best care.

Over the years people have donated animals to the university. Captive animals do not do well when released to the wild, so we have utilized these animals for educational purposes. They are used by the biology and natural science classes on campus, and best of all, they are used by student teachers in the classrooms. To have an animal in the classroom is a sensational learning experience!

The animals are treated very well, both here and when they are with student teachers. We make every effort to see that they get a natural diet. We are as vigilant as is humanly possible about cleaning soiled cages. Have you seen the animals soaking up some rays or grazing in grassy areas adjacent to Duncan Hall? We recognize the importance of sunlight to their health. If you still think we are ignoring animal rights, feel free to discuss your objections with us directly.

A very dedicated, conscientious and knowledgeable crew spends about 20 hours a week to keep the animals healthy and happy. We are, however, open to suggestions that will improve the quality of their life.

The Resource Center is located in the basement of Duncan Hall. The live animals are only one aspect of the Resource Center; we also provide a wide variety of science materials, from ear to eve models to magnets and volcanos. The R.C. supports teacher education with a unique program that benefits SJSU students and our community. Our hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday ought were normal anyway. (Ha! Ha!). Have you, I ask, heard what's been happening in this country since the pope arrived?

No? Well for starters, Dan Rather, who's the anchorman of the CBS Evening News, walked off the set the other day because a U.S. Open Tennis match pre-empted his broadcast. Now, I think the main reason he did it is that he wants Brent Musburger's job as host of the "NFL Today," but I do think the pope had something to do with it. In addition, since the pope's been here, the major media have not reported anything about near-misses by airplanes, pit bull attacks, cheating in baseball or drive-by shootings. Now, this may not seem big to you back in Italy, but here people are going through withdrawal symptoms. Furthermore, they took a poll over the weekend in someplace called lowa (yeah! I know you don't know where it is, neither do a lot of people here) and this guy named Pat Robertson (he's one of those TV-evangelists who spends 58 minutes asking for money and two minutes praying) came out on top of the Republican presidential polls. Can you imagine that guy in the White House

Another thing; have you heard the U.S. and Russia may soon have an agreement on nuclear arms? I mean what's next, selling arms to the Irani-ans? (Oh!, I'm sorry that already happened didn't it.) I mean if Russia and the U.S. became friends, who would the U.S. hate? Canada?

And perhaps most stunning of all is that the San Francisco Chronicle's sports page has gone from green to white, the San Francisco Giants are in first place in the middle of September, and yes, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers won a game.

You've got to call the pope home, I don't know if the U.S. can take any more of 'popemania.

All empties now yield profit

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Next time you drain that beer can or soda bottle, check the label before you toss the empty.

Starting Thursday, a stamp of "CA Redemption Starting Thursday, a stamp of "CA Redemption Value" on the container gives drinkers the option of creating costly garbage or making a penny on each throwaway as California's Beverage Container Recy-cling and Litter Reduction Act, popularly known as the "bottle bill," gets under way. Penny refunds start Thursday for empty beer and off drink bottles and cans, whether metal glass or soft drink bottles and cans, whether metal, glass or plastic

California, where people throw away some 10 billion containers a year, is the 10th state in 15 years to legislate refunds for empty beverage containers. But, true to form, California's recycling law is unique in the pack. "We're setting our goal to have one of the best recycling programs in the nation," said Mercedes Azar, marketing manager for the state Department of Conservation's new Division of Recyling. "We frankly believe it just won't work," said Debbie Bruns, associate director of California Public Interest Research Group, which claims the law is too complex and the container refund too low to encourage recycling.

Most supermarkets, under the provisions of the new law, must make sure there's a recycling center within a half mile of their business to take back the empties and give consumers their penny refunds, plus scrap value

In preparation, colorful "igloo" receptacles and "reverse vending machines" to accept empties are popping up in supermarket parking lots, though not fast enough to meet the Oct. I deadline.

The potential volume is staggering. The state Di-vision of Recycling estimates California produces 10 to 12 billion beverage containers a year, 68.9 percent of them aluminum cans.

Most of those cans are thrown away. According to a recent survey conducted for the state, 40 percent of Californian households recycle nonreturnable beverge containers.

For years, deposits for returnable, refillable bottles — such as many soft-drink containers — have existed in California. But the new "bottle bill" applies to non-refillable containers, and affects virtually every throwaway except wine coolers.

The ultimate goal of the state program is to reach 80 percent recycling levels for plastic, glass and metal cans and bottles

Unfortunately, many people may find their neighborhood without a state-certified recycling cen-ter to give cash for cans and bottles stamped with new labels, "CA Redemption Value."

While the centers are supposed to open by Oct. 1, stores lacking recycling centers in a half-mile ra-dius won't face $100-a-day fines until Jan. 1. The state projects a majority of the centers won't be ready until the end of this year.

"(Grocery stores) may not like it, but they know it has to be done," said Dale Hendren, industrial en-gineering manager for Safeway stores in Northern California.

Cease-fire near

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright said Thursday that conversations with Central American leaders in the past week have led him to hope there may be a cease-fire in the region even be-fore the Nov. 7 deadline established in a five-nation peace plan.

He also said there is broad agreement in the House to go along with a plan to continue "humanita-rian" aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels for at least 40 days past the Oct. I expiration date of the current aid allocation.

"There are powerful individuals and forces in Central America who are trying to work out a modus for putting a cease-fire into effect even before Nov. 7," Wright, D-Texas, told a reporter.

7, "Wright, D-Texas, foid a reporter. "I find on all sides in Central America a deep desire for peace and reconciliation," he said, adding that peace is achievable so long as the process enables "all parties to preserve their dignity." Wright declined to identify the two leaders of Central American countries with whom he had spo-ken in recent days, saying he did not want to jeopardize their efforts to achieve an early cease-fire. And he said he did not know how likely they are to be successful

"I'm going to be content and joyous if it hap-pens by Nov. 7th, or even Nov. 8th," he said.

He said he expected most Democrats to support deal with House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois to provide some $3.5 million to buy food, uniforms and medical supplies for the Contras through Nov. 10, a rate he said was in line with the current aid formula.

House Democratic leaders said they went along with Michel's proposal — cutting it from the $8 mil-lion originally sought and limiting it to humanitarian aid — in part to avoid possible criticism that they had cut off food and medicine to the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

SJSU students celebrate Mass with Pope John Paul II today

By Edwin Garcia Daily staff writer

More than 20 SJSU students, who are affiliated with one campus religious group, have a special reason for not attending classes Thursday and Friday

They will be among the thou-sands of Northern California ticketholders flocking to San Francisco's Candlestick Park and Monterey County's Laguna Seca Raceway to celebrate Mass given by Pope John Paul II during the pontiff's North American tour Catholic Commu-Newman

The University Police Department received a call Tuesday about a "suspicious" man in the men's

The man is not an SJSU student. He was taken to County Jail and charged with posession of mari-

But the 10-seat SJSU section at Candlestick in 's og graat Candlestick isn't so great. "We're sitting behind the pope...I would rather be sitting in front of him but I get to be there and that's the important thing to me," said Robert Schick, a graduate stu-

Like any other devout Roman Catholic, Kirsta Baczynski would love to speak to Pope John Paul II face-to-face. If she could, the elementary education graduate student would ask him one question.

"Why are there so many Christian religions and why can't we unite to form a closer bond with other religions?'

"I think there's a rivalry on campus between the groups,' said.

Baczynski wants to know the answer because she wishes the various SJSU Christian organizations would be closer, since they already share religious beliefs, she said.

Clark looks for improvement in'87

By Nelson Cardadeiro Daily staff writer

After placing eighth out of 12 teams at the Hornet Invitational, Cross Country coach Marshall Clark can't say that he is thrilled with his team's performance

But after finishing at the bottom this past season in the PCAA, Clark is gratified with the improvement

they showed in the season opener at Sierra College Saturday

"I'm pleased with the way the team did," Clark said. "It's progress compared to how we performed last year

The bright spot for SJSU was or Martin Seeber's time of unior Martin Seeber's time of 25:30.6, good enough to finish a fifth on the five-mile course. It also ranks as the 10th fastest time in finishers

Spartan cross country history. Even though Clark is happy with the West German transfer's fin-ish, he said that Seeber might have done even better We didn't get there (at the Invitational) early enough, so the team didn't have a chance to look over the course," he said. "By not knowing the course, Martin didn't know where he could make his move.

"I know Martin is a little disap-pointed," Clark added. "He is a goal oriented kid. Clark said that Seeber gives indication of being an outstanding front runner. Junior Chris Becerra finished 29th with a time of 26:27.3, while senior Steve Scholz, clocked at 26:42.3, finished 35th. The biggest problem Clark saw at the Invitational was the 2:24.9 gap between their first and fifth place

"We must narrow that gap if are to succeed," Clark said. "We just can't have that gap. "Good teams will have only a twenty to thirty second gap between their first and sixth (finishers)," Clark said. "For example, on Saturday, Fresno State's first four runners were within fifteen seconds of each other. If your fifth place guy is way back, your dead.

back, your dead. Clark is hopeful of finishing higher up in the standings this year. "If we stay healthy, we should go up a little," Clark said.

He also hopes that last year's top runner, Tim Williams, can continue to get into shape.

'He should be able to run like he is capable of in about a month,' Clark said.

According to Clark middle distance runners Becerra and Scholz, and junior college transfers Sven Walsted and Jim Reed, need to make adjustments to run the longer dis tances they do now Walsted and Reed ran on four-mile courses at the JCs, while freshman Jim Jacobson only had to run three miles in high school. The Spartans have a tough meet this Saturday at the Fresno Invitational. "All the top teams should be there since Fresno is the sight of this year's NCAA (District 8) champion-ships," Clark said. Clark couldn't make a prediction of how well SJSU will do, "but we'd like to beat a few teams." he Clark pointed out that the possible hot Fresno weather might be a factor on everyone's performance. "Martin, for one, is not used to the high temperatures," he said. Running at ten in the morning should help

Pioneers whip Spartans, 6-1

By Richard Motroni

Just as things seemed to be get-ting better for the Spartan soccer team, they suffered a major setback Wednesday night at Spartan Stadium when they fell to Hayward State 6-1 It's hard to pin-point exactly which part of the Spartan game plan totally shutdown. It appeared to be the entire team that went flat.

SJSU's offense was nonexistant for most of the game and the de-fense, which hadn't surrendered a goal in the last game-and-a-half, alseveral scores that never lowed should have been.

"I was surprised at how poorly we played," said coach Julius Me-nendez. "The letdown that our team had is something I can't under stand

At the start of the game, a letdown wasn't apparent as both teams began by probing and testing each other

The Spartans made the first move offensively, taking two shots on goal. The first attempt went wide and the second went into the hands of Pioneer goalie Mark Lehnert. On the other side of the field, Spartan goalie Jerry Nelson held his own by blocking a few head shots and corner kicks. Then, with 29:29 played in the first half, Pioneer midfielder Vince Martinez took a left side cross pass from Craig Huft and kicked the ball into the right corner of the goal for a 1-0 Hayward State lead.

The Spartans' frustration mounted after the Pioneers second frustration goal. It wasn't so much the fact that it came just one minute and five sec onds later as it was the fashion in which it was scored Forward Keith Switzer with his back to the goal and surrounded by Spartan defenders, decided to try an overhead volley as the ball sailed over his head. It was a desperate attempt, but the kick was true and it soared to the top of the goal well beyond the reach of Nelson giving Hayward a 2-0 lead.

Angered by the Pioneers' quick back-to-back scores, the Spartan offense tried to get the team back into the game with several shots on goal. But, apparent scoring opportuscored Just over a minute later, the Pioneers were able to seal the Spar-tans' fate when Martinez scored again.

nities seemed to just slip away and the first half ended with the Spartans still trailing In the second half, the Spartan defense seemed to be lacking a bit in communication.

The Spartans' inability to score goals wasn't the result of a slow offense or a tough Pioneer defense, but of the fine play by Lehnert.

'He was tough and played hard," said Spartan forward Jerry Montgomery. "The guy had a good Montgomery. The guy had a good feeling for the ball and seemed to know where it was heading, which hurt our chances to score." With six saves on 17 shots Lehnert proved to be almost impossible to score against.

After nearly 85 minutes of missed opportunities, the Spartans finally did get a measure of self-respect. In heavy traffic, inside the Pi-oneer goal box forward John Ragnarsson gave a short pass to Art Garcia who nailed a shot into the right corner to close the gap to 4-1. Unfortunately for SJSU, Garcia's goal seemed to give Hayward State an incentive to play a bit harder. The Pioneers added two more goals in the final three minutes to hand the Spartans their third loss of the season.

It seemed that all the goals came from out of the blue," said Nelson, who had seven saves on 19 shots

"I told the guys at halftime that their goals were pure luck," coach Martinez said. "But, I'm not taking anything away from Hayward State. They recently beat Santa Clara, who is a good team and they deserve to win tonight."

The Spartans, now 1-3-1, play tommorrow at 2:30 p.m. at San Francisco State. Their next home game is Wednesday night against St. Mary's at 7:30. "We may have to juggle our system around in order to get the team back on track." Martinez said. "But L baliaus use will be use 'But I believe we will bounce back

Sandson dives into opponents

By Brent Ainsworth Daily staff write

Larry Sandson plays football the same way a wild-eyed rugby player would dive head-first into a Tijuana bar fight.

Sure, that anecdote sounds a bit far-fetched, but it's an accurate depiction of Sandson's gung-hotemperament. Probably more accurate than you think. Sandson, an undersized nose guard who leads the Spartan de-fensive line, actually plays rugby, grew up five miles from Mexico, and has been known to cause his share of trouble in waterholes south of the border.

Where I grew up, going to Tijuana was the thing to do," a smiling Sandson recalled. "I used to get into a little trouble back then

Head coach Claude Gilbert

A slice of Sandson's playful nastiness is a likely side effect from his rugby playing days. That hobby began seven years ago when one of his high school football coaches suggested that the game might suit his disposition well.

I joined a San Diego team and played with them until I came to school up here," he said. "It actually helped me a lot with my tackling. And it was a good way for me to keep in shape since you're running non-stop for two 40-minute halves."

After transfering from Southwestern College in his hometown of Chula Vista in the San Diego area, Sandson played two years for SJSU rugby club.

'I played during spring ball," he said. "I'd go a couple times a week after football practice. It was great, but I couldn't give rugby my "Most of the new kids don't talk much, and it's imperative that we communicate out there. Larry is the kind that speaks up. In fact, he talks too much sometimes. I have to jerk his chains once in a while.

Sandson said he isn't afraid to be the designated voice if it means his suggestions may help his teammates. "I like that position (being a lander) " he said. "I like to work with the new guys because I know what they're going through. Some people think that last year's line was the best we've had in a long time, and we want to do just as good if not better.

"All the other colleges said I was too small, but I knew in my heart that I could play at this level. There's a lot of guys out there about 6-6, 300-pounds that play Dline. That's the trend nowadays it's size and speed they're looking for.

Yes, he has some mustang Gilbert said "The neat in him." thing is that he's directing his energies in a positive way.

With his rowdiest days now history, Sandson still manages to cause trouble for his adversaries on the line of scrimmage. An oppos ing center poised to snap the ball must face this pink-faced menace before every play. And, although, Sandson's success he's not big. rate against larger offensive linemen is impressive.

Sandson, a senior listed at six feet and 236 pounds, has out-manuevered those centers for nine tackles and three sacks in the seas first two games. He leads the SISU defensive line in takedowns even though his name wasn't listed on the depth chart for the season opener due to injuries.

John Vogt, who coaches the Spartan defensive line, praised his stumpy nose guard for overcoming numerous physical disadvantages.

"He's too small and he runs "Vogt said. "When you funny watch him run the 40 (yard sprint) you can see he's not a fluid, prototype athlete. But he's got great quickness — his 10-yard burst is quickness — his 10-yard burst is great and that's what a lineman needs

Now, Sandson's thoughts are aimed at maintaining his first-team nose guard position, a role he has amply filled at just the right time. Vogt, who lost four starters strong 1986 crew, said he from a has adapted his scheme to more appropriately fit Sandson's strengths. What Sandson lacks in size serves as a hidden edge over mammoth offensive lineman, simply because makes it tough to achieve the desired leverage block him. Sandson, who bench presses 375 pounds, has the inconspicuous strength and quickness that frustrates slower foes. "Larry's not a real good one-on-one pass rusher," Vogt said. "He's going against guys that are 6-5, usually. But he doesn't have to sit there and take some huge guy on because we make shifts along the line of scrimmage to take advantage of his quickness.

"Larry's been a real spark-plug for us. He creates enough confusion to free our other guys up. The opponent will make mistakes and we get the sack."

When Vogt was asked to describe Sandson's personality, the second-year SJSU coach threw back his head and laughed.

"Larry came back from Cal with turf burns all over him. That shows you plays with a lot of heart. He's the kind that just flies around and lets the chips fall where they may. His hustle sets a great example for the younger players.

Ignoring continuous iabs about his size, Sandson admitted that it had always been one of his goal's to play professional football. "....So this scout comes out here to time us in the 40 and he asked me what position I played. When I said noseguard, he basically said 'sorry' right there. Just people like that saying can't do the job keeps me going. I don't have to prove anything to them. Just to myself."

He may lack the raw talent of pro prospect, and being relatively short in a game full of mobile mountains does have it's drawbacks. But the only disadvantage Sandson will admit to is his lack of an extensive wingspan.

'I think my arm reach kind of limits me sometimes," Sandson said. "An O-lineman will stick his hands out and that makes it a little hard for me. I just try to out-quick him. So far, it's been working. "What some centers are saying is that they're going against me. I want them to think they can handle me and take advantage of my size. I don't get intimidated by the big guys. I try to (tick) them off so they get away from their game plan. That turns the advantage my way

The California State University Board of Trustees voted Wednesday to approve a proposal raising parking fees on the 19 CSU campuses. SJSU and San Francisco State universities will be the hardest hit with new rates of $81 per semester. The current rate for permit parking at SJSU is $33.75 per semester.

The plan also raises the current 75 cents per day parking rate to $2. Henry Orbach, manager of Traffic and Parking Operations, said machines that accept dollar bills may be installed. This would al-leviate the problem of feeding eight quarters into the current machines. A proposal which would have equalized the parking rates on all CSU campuses at $63 was not accepted

The plan also allocated $1.8 million to SJSU for structural and lighting repairs in the Seventh Street Garage.

Campus radio station KSJS is disappointed with the agreement made by the Associated Stu-dents Program Board excluding KSJS from cosponsoring university events. The board approved the use of stations KATD out of Los Gatos and KLRS out of Santa Cruz. Dave Yohn, general manager of KSJS, said in the past the board has always allowed the campus station to co-sponsor events with local stations. Competetion with the other station is reduced because KSJS does not accept advertising. Program Board Adviser Ted Gehrke disagreed, saying a radio station spending thousands of dollars promoting an event does not want competition of any kind.

Yohn said that KSJS will sponsor any oncampus organization presenting shows.

The flag ceremony in San Jose is one of hundreds of events held each year across the United States by the National League of Families of American MIAs and POWs. Detachment 45, which includes 152 members from nine South Bay colleges, has 64 ROTC students at SJSU

Detachment 45 "works handin-glove with nine colleges and uni-versities," Bouchard said. Some of the schools involved include Stanford and Santa Clara Universities and six community colleges. The SJSU ROTC is made up of seven full-time Air Force members, including four officers, three non-commissioned officers and one SJSU secretary. Their main purpose is to train leaders and managers to work in the hi-tech world of aerospace, Bouchard said.

Coincidently, Air Force inspec-generals (IGs) are visiting the campus headquarters for their bian-nual inspection during the anniversary

Bouchard said the purpose of the "unit effectiveness inspection" is to check on the management of money, compliance with state and federal laws and adherence to regulations

ROTC enlistment used to be mandatory at SJSU, Bouchard said, but since the 1960s, state universi-ties have made their ROTC programs voluntary

"The parking fee increase is a form of discrimination against peo-ple in the urban environment," Lukes said.

Program Board adviser Ted Gehrke said two weeks ago that when Lizardi donated the schol-arship back in February he was interested in serving on the concert's chair selection committee. However, when Act 50, governing the program board, was rewritten during the spring, Gehrke said the board neglected to include Lizardi on the selection committee.

Safety: Crackdown on students who ignore sign construction progress, Pluta said Since the school year began, the problem with some students violating the signs has increased, said Mike Tefs, electrician for WSB Electrics, the company working at the aquatic site. During the summer student trespassing was not a problem, Tefs said "(The students) should just open their eyes and be aware of the danger," Tefs said. He has seen students walking through the gate with no shoes on, which can be extremely dangerous since there are nails lying on the ground.

blockades were set up on both ends of the sidewalks - one at the intersection of Seventh and San Carlos streets and another near the Student Health Center. These blockades, in bold red letters, warn: "Use Other Sidewalk Across the Street."

However, students ignored the sign and continued to use the sidewalk. As a result, two female stu-

Valor was disappointed at the board's lack of decision at Wednesday's meeting.

"I always thought board members should serve two year terms," said Valor, who last year served as A.S. director of academic affairs. "They're making mistakes over and over every year. The whole issue of Lizardi buying votes is not valid. It doesn't apply here. Lizardi served on the contemporary arts (now concert) chair in 1973-74. During his entertainment career, he was hired by Bill Graham, and served as shows producer for five years. He went on to represent

A tour accountant "goes in be-fore the show and hassles and haggles with the promoter" in deciding on the artist's fee, said Gehrke. "He's probably the best in the coun-try: that's why top artists hire him."

If the scholarship is appropri-ated, Valor believes it will result in an increased competition for the seat. Currently a student filling the position receives $75 per month.
