Future plans for fountain still unclear

SJSU administration and the class of 1988 are continuing efforts to let the campus fountain flow again.

What it will look like, how much it will cost, and when it will be turned back on for the first time in two years remain mysteries.

But Bob Ringe, director of devel-opment and relations at SJSU and Bill Brown from the Pacific Telemarketing group returned to their second straight Associated Students meeting Wednesday to propose a plan funded by the senior class, the alumni and the A.S. to redesign the President Gail Fullerton ordered the fountain shut off, saying an injury incurred by someone playing in it could result in a lawsuit.

Ringe and Brown, in conjunction with representatives of the senior class, have proposed that a telemar-keting campaign be initiated to contact the class of 1988 and ask them for donations as a class gift.

The funds, along with a proposed $15,000 from the A.S., would pay for a new design which eliminates standing water in the current foun-tain, reducing the risk of someone sustaining injury in it.

But though Ringe and seniors on the A.S. board urged the A.S. to approve the plan and move ahead with fund raising, other A.S. board members continued their reluctance to rush into the plan.

"I have a lot of unanswered questions here," Terry McCarthy, A.S. vice president and president-elect,

Muddy truck-pull concerns Gilbert

By Kathy White

A truck-pull on the Spartan Sta-dium field Saturday has raised issues and concerns over the damage it could do, but the promoter and Athletics Director Randy Hoffman say there is no reason for concern.

"Of course our first concern is the protection of the field." Hoffman said. "But we have a clause in the contract that says if the field is permanently damaged, they will have to pay to replace the whole field."

The Grand National Motorsport Spectacular has four-wheel drive vehicles racing as are two-wheel drive and dragster tractors. The races take place in dirt, and sometimes mud, with the trucks following a course.

The promoters, however, protect the field by laying down what is called P.V.C. field covers that pro-tect the surface of the field while also providing a surface for the trucks to race on. "(The promoters) come in quite prepared and we have looked into what's been done at other stadi-ums," Hoffman said.

Claude Gilbert, SJSU's head football coach, is concerned.

"With the concerts, they didn't protect the field and it was in sub-par condition all season," Gilbert said. "However, they have expressed to me that they can protect the field adequately and that in a matter of days the field will be back to its former condition.

Besides the covering, two-by-four boards are laid down along with a layer of plastic before the dirt is put down for the trucks to race in.

The idea of having events in the stadium comes from a debt that is owed on the stadium that must be paid back, Hoffman said.

"Ted Cady, who works at the (SJSU) Foundation actively looks for things to take place in the stamonsters since I was a kid.

Back then, sleeping at night meant closing the curtains to keep bloody red eyes from peering in. Darkness scared me because, along with sleep it imitated death.

When you're in college, sleep equals life. It's the waking hours that bring the demons.

When the semester began, a certain demon managed to find me. Evil and green-eyed, it's the kind of monster that destroys the "I'm OK, you're OK' philosophy we learned in grade school.

Jealousy used to be someone else's problem. It plagued the greedy, the mean-spirited, the insecure—never me. I had no time for wasteful feelings

This was especially true with women. Jealousy, I felt, stood for immaturity, not affection. Unlike other guys, I hardly flinched when ne flirted with my girlfriend or asked her out.

Trust was the key. If she wanted to date others, no amount of Jeal-ousy would change her mind. In What happened to change that is long and emotional. In short, I had slay a monster more dangerous and cunning than even Jealousy. Its name is Denial.

Although I hate Jealousy, at least was honest with me. Denial stayed hidden, feeding on my illusion of uprightness. It crammed my darker feelings into a box, hoping they Suddenly I became an irrational, immature guy who tensed at the thought of my friend dating someone else. I was ashamed and bewildered. I was also in love with her.

In time, that seemed to make everything OK. I came to realize that feelings are never wrong, they just are. They exist and demand expression.

When she and I dated, I denied jealousy, giving it control. When I finally let it run free, the green-eyed monster stopped nagging me. He still visits once in a while, but never for long.

Jealousy taught me that I should never stand aloof from my feelings. And experience taught me that I needn't suffer from them, either.

In the end, confrontation is the key to slaying our monsters. That's how I dealt with Jealousy and those bloody red eyes outside my window. That's also how Evan Mecham was impeached.

The controversy over mandatory helmet laws for motorcycle riders has been continuing for many years across the country. It comes again to California, and to the pages of your paper. The editorializers and letter writers who have so far responded seem to be missing what I think is the central issue. That is, not whether this law should exist or not. but whether there is an effective alternative to legislation.

As with the mandatory seat belt law, a mandatory helmet law is an attempt to deal with ignorance through sanction. I have seen the remotorcycles, both with and without cation helmets. As a result, I never ride without one. I rolled my car in 1983 on Interstate 80, as a result of my seat belt. I am here to write about it. No law is necessary to keep me buckled up. Yet supporters of the seat belt law and the proposed hel-met law would argue that the laws are necessary to "protect the pub-

A 'tough' major speaks

Editor.

Julie Rogers leaves out some de tails when she complains about student apathy. Yes, there is a good deal of indifference at SJSU and other schools on today's issues, but the circumstances are different today than they were in the 1960s, when student protesting was at its height.
One factor is that most SJSU students are commuters, making it much harder for them to get involved in student activities. Another factor is that a great deal of students have to work to be able to go to SJSU. They truly don't have the time to get involved. Julie would have people believe that students have loads of extra time to spend on protesting. This may be true for mentally lightweight majors such as journalism or art, but I know personally that a major such as engineering is very time consuming and challenging, leaving me with little or no extra time. I don't want any sympathy for this, but I don't appreciate being thrown in with everyone else and being called apathetic.

Perhaps another reason students seem unresponsive is that the issues of today are not as compelling as the ones back in the 1960s.

People usually don't have a march in support of something. If students could find and issue that they can all agree on and want to stop, like Viet-nam in the 1960s, there would be more and larger protests.

Old autos are flat-out fun

To some Americans, an automobile isn't just a 3,000-pound object that can take you from Point A to Point B. A car is an extension of their personality. Some like big ones that are spa-cious and offer a comfortable ride. Others like small, nimble ones that are fuel efficient and cute.

For others, their favorite cars are the Americanbuilt autos produced from the '60s to early '70s. The ones with a sporty, aggressive look with a powerful V-8 engine lurking under the hood. Cars known as the "musclecar." Ford Mustangs, Chevrolet Camaros, Dodge Chargers, AMC AMXs and the list goes on.

The musclecar, like baseball, hot dogs and apple pie, is a purely American tradition. The mus-clecar was the king of the road at a time when horsepower was the name of the game. They were all based on just one thing — lots and lots of horse-power. The more the better. And with fuel prices at about 40 cents per gallon, who cared about the 15 miles per gallon highway average.

But as the '60s ended, the government began to crack down on the automakers of these neck-snappring machines. Safety and environmental concerns grew too great to ignore. By the time the 1972 car model year rolled in, the musclecar was a tameddown version of its old self. No longer the street brute it once was. Once the 1973 gas crunch hit, production of these fire breathing properties was production of these fire-breathing monsters was killed. A few more gas crunches and the used car market was flooded with unwanted, gas-guzzling musclecars.

But something happened in the late '70s You remember that time. Life in America had become boring. Nostalgia was big. We had "Happy Days," "Laverne and Shirley," oldies radio and clubs and organizations springing up all over the place dedicated to keeping the past alive. America was thriving on the obsolete, only because there was nothing new to get excited about. The baby boom generation was banging gears to middle age, its hair and teeth began falling out and it wanted nothing more than to get a second chance at youth. Who could blame them?

If you weren't a disco-dwelling advertisement for hair spray and gold chains or a new wave punk rocker, the '70s was a dull time to be alive.

So how did some of those baby boomers recapture their youth and excite their lives. They bought an old musclecar like a Oldsmobile 4-4-2 or Shelby GT-350 and restored it to the way it was when it came off the showroom floor some 15 years before. The Great American Musclecar phenomenon lder, wiser and sometimes more affluent, the '60s baby boomers began to realize how much fun and how well made these toys of their youth really were. A vast majority of the current musclecar owners are replacing a performance machine they unceremoniously sold many years ago. To get back the car that gave them an adrena-lin rush whenever the gas pedal went to the floor.

Others getting into the musclecar resurgence are the enthusiasts who couldn't afford that car when it was new, but now has the income to purchase the car he has always wanted, 20 years later.

Another inviting aspect of owning a musclecar is the investment potential. Here is a commodity that will appreciate as much as 20 percent a year, depending on the car, of course.

A "clean" 1969 Mustang Boss 429 in 1981 went for about $6,000. Now that same car goes for over $25,000. A 1970 Plymouth 426 Hemi 'Cuda worth $4,500 in 1981 now goes for $27,000. What a great way to invest your money!

Have you ever tried sitting in a bank vault watching your money earn interest? Boring with a capital B! Now jump into a 454 Chevelle or a Mustang Mach I powered by a 428 Super Cobra Jet and tromp on the pedal — that's fun! So now you're owning your dream car, driving it for fun and still making money by just possessing it.

Thus, scores of beautifully restored original musclecars have come out of the woodwork in the 80s and flooded cruise spots, hangouts and car shows all across the country. Originality and authenticity became the watchwords of the day. Stone-stock interiors, matching serial numbers, meticulously restored engine compartments and car-owning experience as on-board computers and space-age composites. Old musclecars may well be the best in rolling high performance machinery; quick, stylish and incredibly appealing and simple to work on. They also offer fulfillment for many who are no longer pleased with the offerings from Detroit.

Sure, Ford and General Motors are still produc-

V-8 powered cars, but turbocharged four cylinder, front-wheel drive cars are the future. V-8 engines powered at the rear wheels will soon be a fond memory in dealer's showrooms in the near fu-ture. People still yearning for these types of cars are going out and buying an old supercar with that cer-tain appeal rather than spending $25,000 on a 350 IROC Camaro that will depreciate 25 percent once you drive it off the lot.

As long as people appreciate the supercars of the '60s and early '70s, the musclecar phenomena is bound to grow and become an even more formidable force in the automotive world.

Nelson Cardadeiro is the Sports Editor. If you are still a nonbeliever in the Musclecar Phe-nomena, he asks you to head up to Fremont on Sunday and attend the great "Musclecar Shootout" at Baylands Raceway. There you will see hundreds of pristine examples being shown and raced. "Shifting Gears" appears every other

Bomb blast rips through U.S. club

NAPLES, Italy (AP) - An explosion ripped through a club for U.S. service men in Naples Thursday and killed at least four people, the U.S. Consulate said. Italian authorities said the blast was likely from a car bomb.

Consulate spokesman Tim Randall said that according to prelimi-nary records four to five people were killed and about 20 injured. An Associated Press photo stringer said he saw two bodies covered with a blanket at the entrance to the club for U.S. servicemen.

Randall said an investigation is continuing but that Italian authorities believe the 8 p.m. (2 p.m. EDT) blast was caused by a bomb in a car outside the club.

Spartans' men's tennis falls to tough Utah squad

Roberto DiGiulio returns the ball from the back court in the Spartans' 6-3 loss to Utah. DiGiulio beat his opponent Johan Hogstedt.

ally staff writer After defeating Cal State Hayward 8-1 on Tuesday afternoon, the SJSU men's tennis team (11-13) was unable to duplicate the feat Wednesday against Utah

A balanced team that is ranked among the nation's top-20, Utah beat the Spartans by a 6-3 score.

Utah was evenly skilled in both the singles and doubles to the degree that it didn't have to play exceptionally well in either to beat SJSU who is currently plagued by a number of injuries.

"There're very even," said Gary Peralta who lost to Brendon Bowier 6-3, 6-3. "It's hard to tell who plays where."

Unlike some teams who might have a tendency to lapse men-tally, Utah maintained sound mental stability which proved advantageous in the win, Peralta

Coach John Hubbell was happy with the play of Malcolm Allen, who won 6-3, 7-5 over Jari Koho. Allen is starting to regain the win-ning form which suffered a setback due to an injury sustained in early March.

Tom Sheehan, a winner in his last two matches, was unable to play because of a back strain he suffered Tuesday.

"It's been kind of uncharacteristic for us to have these injury problems," Hubbell said.

The Spartans' only other win-ner in the singles was Roberto Di-Giulio who defeated Johan Hogstedt 6-4,4-6, 6-1.

Paul Carbone and Jeff Neiman are on a tear in the doubles. They've now won six of seven matches after retiring Koho and Jeff Weichers

On Friday, the Spartans will take on Santa Clara.

"Santa Clara will be big," Hubbell said. "They're a pretty ood, solid unit."
Hubbell might be a little worried having to play Santa Clara on their home court.

"Whenever you play a team on the road, there's always the question of whether or not they will be pumped up," he said.

SJSU traveled to Evans Diamond on the Berkeley campus, but it might as well have been in the Arctic circle. There was no sun to be seen or felt through the cloud covering, and the temperature at gametime dipped into the 50s.

SJSU sent right-hander Al Bacosa (3-3) to the mound against right-hander Travis Willis (7-4).

Willis, who missed his last two starts because of tendinitis in his shoulder, didn't seem to be bothered by the weather. Willis no-hit the Spartans in the three innings he pitched, striking out two and walking one. Willis was helped by five other Golden Bear pitchers. With Wednesday's loss, the Spartans dropped to one game below .500 at 23-24. Cal improved its record to 29-15.

Cal scored all the runs necessary for the win in the first inning.

The Bears' center fielder Darren

Lewis led off the first inning with a walk. Lewis went to second on a single by right fielder Brian Scott. John scoring Lewis.

A fielder's choice by Cal catcher Derek Stark allowed the Bears' second run to cross the plate.

A Spartan error gave Cal another insurance run in the third inning

With one out in the third, Scott hit a ground ball to shortstop Steve Anderson, who went down for the ball but couldn't come up with it. The ball rolled between his legs and into left field. Kuehl then came to the plate. Bacosa hung an enticing 3-2 curve ball in front of him and Kuehl took the pitch deep to right-field for a two run homer.

Bears coach Bob Milano told reporters after the game that he was happy to see Kuehl break out of his slump, that it was the first time he hit well in a long time

Following Willis on the mound in the fourth was Willy Warrecker, and an army of other pitchers including Scott Morehouse, Mike Mathews, Dave Stafford and Joe Buckley.

In the last two games, the Spartans have committed a total of eight errors, five Tuesday against Santa Clara and three against the Bears.

Bacosa was relieved in the sev-enth by Eric Cordua, who gave up two hits and one earned run. He struck out two in the innings he SJSU is in the midst of its worse losing streak since the seven-game losing streak back in February. After that streak, the Spartans found themselves and put a string of nine wins together.

The Spartans take on the University of Pacific at Municipal Stadium in a three-game PCAA series this weekend. Friday's game begins at 7 p.m. while Saturday's and Sunday's contests are both slated for 1 p.m

The player, Chris Mills of Fairfax High School, signed a letter of intent Nov. 11 to accept a basketball scholarship to Kentucky, which was repri-manded last month by the NCAA for minor violations after a lengthy in-

SJSU's fountain remains arid while administration and the Associated Students Board of Directors decide its future

Fountain: Spout stays dry while A.S. decides future

'I would hope you would bring in other parts of the university,' she

The plan includes using funds from alumni to initiate the telemar-keting campaign, which Brown said Wednesday could include the tele-phoning of 8,500 seniors.

Ringe again presented the A.S. with a redesign of the fountain which go beyond eliminating the pool of water to reduce liability

Last week Ringe showed the board photographs of a fountain in Los Gatos he described as "very aesthetically pleasing." He said that the fountain, but Wednesday said the Los Gatos fountain was "not necessarily the administration's version.

'I just think she thinks it's a very attractive design," Wednesday. Ringe said Ringe did present the board with preliminary financial projections for basic renovations and also for a new design with enhancements, lighting, landscaping and seating.

The basic redesign would cost about $26,000 and the new design would cost about $65,000.

A.S. President Michael McLennan said Thursday that he supports the less expensive design at this

The Los Gatos design includes a large mound of concrete covered with cobblestones. Water spurts from the mound.

McLennan said he favors moving ahead with fundraising efforts, and determining the design of the fountain later

Dan McIntosh, director of academic affairs and one senior supporting the plan, said he also approves of moving ahead with fundraising.

"I don't see any reason why we can't go ahead with campus fountain

Ringe said Fullerton shares that view.

'The president is eager to go forward with some kind of fountain project," he said.

But with the end of the class of 1988's SJSU careers nearing and many questions about the fountain redesign plan unanswered, it is not known if the administration and the senior class will be able to get the project underway before summer.

In the meantime, except for occasional rains, the fountain will remain

Shroud: Mystery abounds

From page 1 now been reduced to three for some very nebulous reasons, Harbottle

One excuse the Vatican gave was to conserve the material.

"It hardly seems likely that conserving the material could be the real reason," Harbottle said.

At one time, a fire burned holes in the cloth which was patched by nuns. Harbottle said there probably is enough cloth underneath the patches to supply samples to seven labs without ruining the cloth.

'No attempt has been made to see the amount of material underneath the burn patches," he said.

Before researchers can date the shroud, they must launder it to remove layers of soot, dust, dirt and other foreign particles that have accumulated over the years. Each piece is treated with chemicals that won't leave behind deposits.

'Pre-treatment is very tricky," Harbottle said.

Any material left behind on the cloth could confuse the results. For example, in one experiment six pieces of mummies' cloth were sent to six labs for analysis. Most results agreed except one, which came out to be 1000 years off from the other five due to a piece of modern material on the sample.

Harbottle said that even a small thread of some modern material could throw off the results.

He said that with only three labs. one discrepancy could raise ques-tions of the validity of the test.

"How will we know which is right or wrong with only three tests?" he said, adding that the re-sults would be "statistically indefen-

'It seems almost as though the Church is stacking the deck against coming up with a definite answer, Harbottle said.

Originally, all tests were to be conducted as blind experiments the researchers would not know whether they had a piece of the real shroud or another kind of material. When the number of labs participating in the study was reduced from seven to three, the blind portion of the experiment was also eliminated. Each of the three labs will now receive a piece of the shroud. Har-bottle said this presents a temptation for investigators to consult with each other by telephone and deliberately try to make their results corroborate.

Harbottle said he expects the re-sults to date the shroud around the 1300s, around the time of the Cru-

EUREKA (AP) — About 75 protesters opposed to the clear-cutting of ancient Humboldt County redwoods disrupted Pacific Lumber 's logging operations for an hour

No one was arrested or injured in the protest, according to the Hum-boldt County sheriff's office. The demonstration, which included some Earth First members, was billed as a move to stop the "illegal" cutting of the trees on a 54-acre stand.
