Local Iranian group details homeland horrors, fears

Daily staff writer SJSU students demonstrated at a local television station Saturday to draw attention to alleged mass executions carried out by Iran's Islamic government

About 40 demonstrators gathered outside KNTV Channel 11 on Park Avenue waving placards that read "Stop mass executions in Iran" and "Media, break out the news about the killing fields in Iran."

The demonstrators were part of an organization called The Committee Against The Violation of Human Rights in Iran, a recently formed group made up of local Iranian-born citizens. The participating SJSU students asked not to be identified. fearing retaliation by the government of Khomeini Avatollah Ruhollah against their families back home.

The group wants to publicize charges by Amnesty International, the United Nations Human Rights Commission, and Iranian opposition groups that the Islamic regime has been carrying out mass executions of Iranian citizens since the cease-fire with Iraq last July. The victims were political activ-ists opposed to Khomeini's govern-ment, according to a Dec. 12 New York Times article. Khomeini's regime is allegedly retaliating against political activists amid battlefield setbacks preceding the cease-fire, Amnesty International said in the article.

Casualty estimates range from 300 to 12,000 dead.

The Iranian Embassy in Ottawa, Canada, could not be reached for comment.

According to some students, no one in Iran is safe from the executions.

Daily staff writer A mediator is likely to determine within two weeks whether SJSU fac-ulty members should pay the proposed $81 parking fees. Both California Faculty Association and California State University officials presented their cases during the last two weeks and are now awaiting a decision, said Scott Rice, president of the SJSU chapter of the CFA.

This comes after the A.S. adopted a strongly worded resolution at its Wednesday meeting asking faculty members to pay a higher fee.

"We're already paying too much for parking," said Leigh Kirmsse, director of California State Affairs, who sponsored the resolution. "Students cannot afford to subsidize for the faculty.'

Faculty members currently pay $33.75 for a semester permit. Students had their parking fees raised to $81 last year

A.S. to distribute 7,000 condoms

Samples for survey encourage response

By Steven Musil Daily staff write

National Condom Week is here and SJSU is getting involved.

This year, the Associated Stu-dents will distribute 7,000 condoms to students interested in participating in a survey. The survey is the Third Annual Condom Rating Contest, sponsored by the Stanford AIDS Education Project.

"We want people to become more aware of condoms in the area of AIDS prevention," said Jen-nifer Jo Kessler, director of stu-dent rights and responsibilities. "I'm not encouraging students to go out and have sex, but if they're already having sex, they should be protected."

Making people more comfort-able with condoms is the goal of the survey, according to Kessler.

"This is like putting a jar of condoms on the coffee table," she said. "Eventually, people are going to talk about them."

National Condom Week is an annual event traditionally held during the week of Valentine's Day.

In the past, students have partic ipated in giveaways and special events. The A.S. will distribute free condoms today and Wednes-day morning in front of the Student Union

The A.S. hoped to get student organizations involved in events to help promote the week, but got little response, Kessler said. "Unfortunately, the Greek community is involved in Rush right now. They said they would be interested in participating next year."

"We're starting real light to make people more comfortable with condoms and more aware of the AIDS virus," sa A.S. vice president. said Ron Lynch,

The project to distribute 80,000 condoms to Bay area colleges is sponsored by the Pharmacists Planning Service in Sausalito, according to Daniel Bao, the proet director.

Condom companies use survey results to improve their products, Kessler said.

"Some people have told me they would like flavored con-doms," she said. "Cotton candy was suggested.'

Survey participants rate their preference of seven condoms. The packet includes information on proper use of condoms. Surveys should be returned to the Student Union Information desk or the A.S. director's office by February 28.

Not for lovers only

The morning sun broke through my bedroom drapes and warmed the room, making it difficult to continue sleeping much longer. It was a Sunday and we didn't have to be anywhere today. Besides, we were in heaven. Last night, we made up after six months of agonizing separation. The romance begun so many years ago would continue. I lay in bed remembering the joy we had shared together. She wasn't exactly a morning person and I didn't want to disturb her sleep. I didn't want to get on her had side co activ didn't want to get on her bad side so early.

It had been a long time ago that we were last together but it seemed like yesterday. the remember classes we had together and the vacations we took to Napa, Carmel and Los Angeles. Steven Musil

We had fun together. We were miserable apart. We were from different status levels but that didn't seem to make any difference. I made her laugh and she made me think think. God, it felt right. Last night made all the the other reconciliation attempts look like just dream talk. Sure, we talked last night, but for the first time we also listened. We were doing it right. I dreamed about her angelic, childish face. I wanted to see the expression on her face when I awakened her with a gentle kiss. With anticipation growing inside, I rolled over to fulfill my fantasy. What L saw frightened me. The hed was

What I saw frightened me. The bed was empty. I leaped to my feet and searched the living room, the bathroom, the kitchen. She wasn't there. She'd left me-must have snuck out in the middle of the night like a coward. I felt like I'd been used, again.

Sigh. After all we said last night. Maybe it was all just talk. But I believed it. I believed every word of it. Love makes you believe stupid things. Walking back into the bedroom, I could smell the sweet scent of her perfume lingering on the pillows. The pink ribbon from her red hair was still on my night stand.

I resolved myself to my demise. She was gone. I wasn't going to dwell on it for the rest of my life. This had happened before. Not always her fault, though. But this would be the last time. Last night would never happen again. Not between us. There was no way I was going through it again. I was tired of the lies. Hers and mine. I stumbled to the kitchen to make some coffee.

I picked up the pot and wondered if I really wanted to wake up. No, I thought, replacing the pot on the counter. I wanted a beer. Held by magnets to the regrigerator door was a list of reasons why beer was better than women. Grabbing a Michelob Dry, bed the arms corrected with second purchased and I had to agree, especially with reason number 31: "Beer won't get up and walk out on you." reinforced the pain. The people who write love songs really know what they're talking about. Stepping from the shower, I wrapped a towel around my waist and smelled the aroma of coffee in the air. Good, that meant it was almost ready. I reached inside the shower and grabbed my beer. Wait, I thought, I hadn't made any coffee. I walked into the kitchen to the sound of siziling bacon. There she was

The day for romance and ruin

"I'd like us to be Valentines." The big V-day is supposed to be a day for people to share romance—ha! It's more of a burden than a help. The only people it's special for are the people who receive something. Do you think it's special knowing that the person to whom you sent candy is probably laughing and calling you a 'hard-up laughing and calling you a 'hard-up nuisance?' They will still munch on your five-pound box of See's candy, though.

I don't know which is worse, having no one in your life to call your valentine or calling someone your valentine or calling someone that and getting laughed at. Valentine's Day is a setup. You know how much trouble I would get in if I sent out all the mushy valentines I wanted? How am I going to find enough to go around? At last count there were 10 or more women I wanted to send my love women I wanted to send my love

(Mom included). I can picture the scene now. All of them are sitting around the table and one says, "I also received a valentine from Matt..." Before you know it, everyone at the table would be saying "...so did I."

Think of all the problems it rould cause. How do I explain that want all of them to be my alentine?

It's a no-win situation. If I send something to one woman, how do I explain myself to the one who didn't get anything? You have to do a lot of talking to convince each woman she is the only one you want as a valentine. A problem I encounter on Valentine's Day is when I send my valentine a bouquet and she proudly puts it on display in her room. The next thing you know her Editor, I am writing in response to the article on shelter for the homeless, and in particular to the ungrateful view of one Mr. Russel Neeley, an inhabitant of the San Jose armory's housing. He was quoted as saying being required to leave the shelter at 7 a.m. is "sort of cruel and inhumane."

Editor, I consider it painful to watch my hard-earned tax dollars being squandered on shiftless freeloaders. What is truly "cruel and inhumane," however, is to hear them actually complain about, in Mr. Neeley's case, free housing for a month! If he would take time to look around him, the underpriveleged and mistreated Russel Neeley would realize he's one of the fortunate few getting something for nothing in our society. Furthermore, I am equally convinced that, whether or not current legal thinking views serial rape, torture, and murder as sufficient proof of exculpating insanity, or state-of-the-art behavioral science discovers these sufficiently, or state-of-the-art behavioral science diagnoses these acts as the irrepressible symptoms of severe psychopathology, Ted Bundy could not have done what he

Past meets present

n the center of the British city of Bath is a jewel of incredible beauty. It's known simply as "the Abbey, and it stands at the social and historical hub of the Georgian town of 85,000.

Walking around the great church, I was transported back to the Middle Ages, the time when the building was under construction. Gargoyles and apostles peered down at me from their high vantage points. Flying buttresses anchored the walls of the church firmly in place. Inside the Abbey, I gazed at a kaleidoscope of intense colors as sunlight streamed through the stained glass windows.

At night, the Abbey is lighted bright enough to be seen for miles. The late evening is the best time to visit the church, I discovered. The plaza surrounding it is empty of tourists and the bells are rung at this time, the notes of their somber hymns cascading down from the central tower.

On a small bronze plaque in an innocuous corner of the church is a short message of great historical importance: "Edgar First King of All England was crowned by Dunstan Archbishop of Canterbury in the Saxon Abbey on this site on Whitsunday A.D. 973. hat historical note seemed to be of such relevance that I thought it should be written across the side of the church in blazing neon. But here I found it in a spot that gave me the impression the English considered the fact a historical yawn.

But history seems to be crammed into every little nook in the British island. I guess the English are so accustomed to all the historical tales of royalty and battles fought that there's really no point in getting excited about the spot where the "First King of All England was crowned."

After living here in England, I'm beginning to see that Americans are an excitable bunch. In the states, we make a big production out of the grand opening of a new McDonald's like it's some kind of shrine. Maybe it's because we're such a young nation and don't have the sense of tradition and history the English have developed over their lengthy past.

As one of 31 SJSU students spending the spring semester in England, I find myself constantly comparing the United States with its "Mother country." How sterile the Silicon Valley seems beside the ancient city of Bath. The glitz and high tech of San Jose will seem shallow when I return after staying four months in this quiet city where every home and shop seems like a historical monument.

I constantly come back to the Abbey. When I gaze at the splendor of this building, I think of it as a time capsule from the Middle Ages. England is rich with the heritage of its past. What gifts, I the apartment. Don't you eat eggs anymore?" "Did you go to the store for all this?" I asked. She nodded. "How was your shower?" she said, admiring my towel with a smile. I thought you had left. "I could if you want me to," she teased. I stood in the kitchen feeling like a fool. Love makes you believe stupid things.

Players deserve more

Editor,

Some important points are being obscurred in the continuing series of articles on the basketball dispute. It's a matter of a lack of focus on such essential questions as: Has Berry been abusive to players? Did SJSU Director of Athletics Hoffman know of the charges? Did he investigate? Were the charges substantiated? If yes, why is Berry still on the payroll? Assuming the allegations of abuse to be true why are the abused recent execution of Ted Bundy has revived, in these pages and elsewhere, the perennial debate over capital punishment. Nevertheless, I have noticed that many of those who traditionally oppose capital punishment appear reluctant to express that opposition in the extremely unpleasant case of Mr. Bundy. However, isn't it odd that almost

However, isn't it odd that almost everyone who says Bundy deserved to die also says he must have been very sick to do the awful things he did? This impresses me as oddly paradoxical because of my simple yet overwhelmingly powerful conviction that if an individual commits terrible crimes out of commits terrible crimes out of mental illness or disorder, a

BERKELEY (AP) - An earthquake with a preliminary magnitude of 3.6 was felt over a wide area of San Francisco early Monday, the sixth temblor in Northern California in less than 24 hours, according to the University of California Seismology Station. No damage was reported in any of the quakes. The latest earthquake took place at 12:01 a.m. and was centered west of the Golden Gate Bridge, in the same area as two earlier ones, said UC seisomologist Anthony Lomax. "We had several calls from all over the city but so far no reports of damage," said a San Francisco police dispatcher who declined to give his name.

"It shook my house and scared me," said Mary McGrath.

The first quake, which measured 2.7 on the Richter scale, struck at 11:49 a.m. Sunday and was centered about five miles west of the Golden Gate Bridge, reported.

Within two minutes, two more quakes, measuring 2.6 and 2.4 on the Richter scale, were felt in south-ern Marin County, he said.

At 10 p.m., a quake that measured 3.0 on the Richter scale struck the same general area off the Golden Gate as the first one, Lomax said.

Another quake that measured 2.9 was centered near San Leandro, about 10 miles south of Berkeley, at 10:41 p.m., he said.

We received quite a few calls but there are no reports of damage," said San Leandro police dispatcher Tina Prieto.

SJSU judokas denied same status at home as abroad

Unknown lacrosse team sticks it out

Steven Musil

Daily Staff Writer Originally, the idea began from idle talk over beer at the Spartan Pub. Even though the SJSU lacrosse club is winless in its season, the inexperienced team is not getting frustrated. Yet.

The club is suffering from more than just inexperience. As evidence, the club dropped its third straight game to Chico State, 28-1 before just 30 people at South Campus.

The loss dropped the team to 0-3, but more than the poor start, apathy and fan support seem to be the team's main problems. "Lacrosse is a relatively unknown sport on the West Coast," said Iliad Rodriguez, a senior majoring in art. "On the East Coast it's more popular than football."

The problem seems to be that people on the West Coast aren't interested in lacrosse because they haven't been exposed to it like other sports, such as football or basketball. "You such as football or basketball. "You don't see it on T.V. like other sports," said Rob Floyd, an unde-clared sophomore. Floyd played goalie during the first half and allowed 18 goals.

In the interest of a better understanding of lacrosse, it is necessary to have a better grasp of the game. Lacrosse began with the Plains Indians many centuries ago, according to Rodriguez. "They use to play to prepare for battle," he said. "They played for their lives."

Lacrosse is a mixture of basketball and hockey but is played out-doors like soccer. according to John Hagele, a senior majoring in English and the club's captain.

Participants use sticks about fourfeet long with a netted pocket to maneuver a hard rubber ball around the field. Ten players use "lines' and strategies that resemble basketball plays to get the ball in the oppo-site team's net. The goal is six-feet tall and six feet wide

Lacrosse uniforms resemble football uniforms as the players wear mesh shirts, shoulder pads, and hel-Hagale said not all players mets. wear shoulder or rib protectors, but they all wear gloves and forearm pads At the end of the game Saturday, Hagele limped off the field muddied and bloodied. Legs go basically unprotected as players wear shorts, but no thigh or knee pads.

The club is in its second year at SJSU. Hagele and Joel Dibble organized the club in an effort to compete with clubs formed at other schools in California. Many of the members have played lacrosse before. "I've been playing for six years," said Rodriguez. "I played on a high school and a junior college team before I came here," said Hagele. "Many of the muse get intersted through become guys got interested through soccer."

Hagele said he began by organizing lacrosse meetings for people interested in lacrosse. "We had about 40 guys show up," he said "But most of them were just curious as to what lacrosse was all about. He said many people dropped out after a few practices. Clubs at Chico and Santa Clara are larger than SJSU's, said Hagele. "Santa Clara has about 50 players on two teams," he said. "They've got so many players, they have to split them up. We've got about 17 or 18 players " or 18 player:

Most of the players are from the Greek community, Hagele said. "There are four or five Kappa Sigs, four or five TKE's and a guy from a business fraternity." He said that it isn't limited to just Greeks but while

By Joel Beers Daily staff writer Judo may be considered merely a minor sport by the SJSU administra-tors who control the funding and terminology. But for the eight SJSU men scheduled to participate in the World Trials competition next weekend in Colorado Springs, judo is quite major SJSU's judo program has never received the attention reserved for the big sports such as football and basketball. But if you want to mea-sure pure domination and consisten-cy, no sport in SJSU history comes close to judo's success. And it would be difficult to find a better place than San Jose to practice judo than San Jose to practice judo. Anywhere.

Anywhere. "San Jose State is probably the strongest place in the United States to practice judo," head coach Mike Swain said. "We have a world-wide reputation as being the best in the country. We've had better results than anybody else in world competi-tion and there results in the say other tion and there really isn't any other school that comes close.

Swain is one of the six players from SJSU who will attend the world trials next weekend. He is also the defending world champion in his weight division, (71 kg, 156pounds) and a three-time Olympian. At the Games in Seoul, South Korea, Swain captured a bronze medal.

Because the world trials are an invitational comprised of the top 40 judokas in the country (divided into eight weight classifications, each with five seeds) participators do not have to be in college. In Colorado, one player will be selected from each of the eight classifications. These eight will repre-sent the United States in the World Championships, which will be held in Yugoslavia this September. nteresting factor in this

end's World Trials is that three SJSU the club was young, it was easier to talk to the people in the house. We presented a budget of about $5,000 to the A.S. that would have covered everything from uniforms to travel," Hagele said. "We were hoping for just a thousand dollars, but they shot us down." The team has been funding itself by inventories for department stores and selling t-shirts and sweatshirts representatives are in the same weight class: Swain, Dan Hatano and David Williams. Swain, the defending champion, is seeded num-ber one, while Williams is third and Hatano fourth.

The other three SJSU reps are Mike Manning, seeded third in the 132-pound class, Albert Acena, third at 143-pounds and Joe Wanag, the second seed at the 189-pounds. Presently, Hatano and Wanag are competing at the Erangh Open in competing at the French Open in

The San Jose judo program also dominates the collegiate field. Twenty-four of the last 26 National Collegiate championships have been won by SJSU. The National Collegiates are comprised of the top judo programs at four-year universities. SJSU was beat by Fresno State in the finals last year, primarily due to injuries to key players, Swain said. This year the finals will be held May 6 in Indianapolis.

One of the largest reasons why SJSU has had such a successful pro-gram, said Swain, is the reputation it has achieved throughout the world.

"The program has been strong for 30 years," he said. "And there has been a high influx of Japanese judo players who have came to San Jose just to practice here. "that's how you

"One of the guy's fathers built the goals and donated the materials."

said Hagele. "That's what we really needed the money for. We bought our own uniforms." Hagele said equipment and league dues are expensive. "The nets alone cost $300."

decided to attend the school. "This is the best place to play judo around," said Manning, who attend-ed Oak Grove High School in San Jose. "It doesn't have a reputation for those who don't know anything about the sport, but if you're inter-ested in judo, you know about San

While many people spend their entire lives learning the theory and technique of judo, the most important aspect of the sport is being mentally tough.

"Strength and weight are impor-tant," said Manning. "But the key is mental. You have to know where your center of gravity is at all times and know exactly when to position and know exactly when to position you weight. Being big and strong have their advantages, but as far as winning, anybody can." "Technique overcomes power," said Swain. "A little guy can beat a bigger guy by using technique and speed. In fact, before judo was put in the Olympics there were no weight classifications. Everybody competed against everyone else. competed against everyone else. Different weight classes were created mainly to avoid injuries." Each of the six SJSU representatives attending the World Trials is a black belt. But as Swain says, the image most Americans have of a black belt is profoundly different from the reality.

"There are ten degrees of black belt," he said. "And when you become a black belt it means that you have the ability to learn the higher elements of strategy. It's a lot different from what many people think, that once you become a black belt you're at the top of the field. Actually, you're still only a beginner.

will travel to Humboldt State. On Saturday, Feb. 25, the team will host Occidental College at the South Campus field at 1 p.m. Saying his club is not an exclusive, Hagele urges anyone interested in trying something new to visit the South Campus field on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday after-noons from 3 to 5 p.m.

The Disabled Student Services Program and the High Tech Center would like to take this opportunity to invite you to our Open House. You are welcome to share in refreshments, sandwiches and a tour of our facilities on February 15th from 11 am through 1 pm.

Because Iran is trying to improve its image to the Western nations, the woman said publicity might bring some of them, notably the U.S., to apply pressure on the Iranian gov-ernment. Until then, "Khomeini's hand is free to do whatever he wants," she said.

"I've had lots of friends who were executed during the past six months," another woman said. "I've had my aunt kidnapped. She was 65 years old." The SJSU student, a senior majoring in psychology, also would not give her name.

"Two of my own cousins were ex-ecuted two months ago," said an SJSU graduate student who would only be identified as Yassaman. "They were under 18 years old, in high school Six years and thay wars high school. Six years ago they were sentenced to 10 years in prison for handing out (opposition) leaflets. The people and architecture of San Jose are "bland" compared with Bath's, O'Brien said.

"Compared to Bath, San Jose is very sterile and ordinary," O'Brien said. "There's so much culture here and history. There's so much flavor to this place." Kelly Harrison, a junior majoring in English, compares the terrain around Bath to the Napa Valley. "I like being around the hills," she said. "Everything is green and alive. It's not as cold as everyone had told me." "It's like being in a museum," said Judy Donaldson, a junior majoring in English.

The traffic of Bath worries Donaldson because the English drive on the opposite side of the road from Americans
