Meteorology bid fades after ruling from government

By Daniel Vasquez

Daily staff writer Efforts to join the National Weather Service Redwood City of-fice with the SJSU Meteorology De-partment were frozen by a U.S. De-nettment of Commerce relies. partment of Commerce ruling. The NWS and SJSU had negotiated to place the two weather facili-ties in a new $6 million building on Fifth and San Carlos streets, in front of Duncan Hall.

But The U.S. Department of Commerce Inspector General's Of-fice ruled that negotiations between the NWS and SJSU for non-competthe NWS and SJSU for non-compet-itive construction and leasing of a proposed on-campus facility did not qualify under the Federal Competi-tion and Contracting Act. The act requires governmental agencies to hold open bids when ne-gotiating with potential contractors, but allows avaeting under the act

SJSU and the NWS hoped their negotiations would be considered an exception.

Besides use of the multi-million dollar building, NWS was guar-anteed use of the SJSU Department of Aviation's facilities at the San International Airport for Jose weather research.

The proposed SJSU site is in clear line-of-sight to the new weather radar on Mt. Umunhum and provides space for an upper air sounding station, said Don Witten, NWS pub-lic affairs officer.

only makes a recommendation, according to Witten.

"It was our decision, and we de-cided to follow their recommendation," he said. The NWS still expects to move its Redwood City office to the South Bay, Witten said. While the ruling was a setback, SJSU is still in the bidding, Lester said

However, there are two unknowns which make it difficult to estimate whether the university can compete successfully in the open bidding, he said.

"We don't know how long it will take before bidding is opened," Les-ter said. "And, we don't know how long the university can wait before it decides to use the proposed space for something else.

Low-interest loans may make child care more affordable

By Mary R. Callahan

Daily staff writer Future generations of SJSU students may remember 1989 as the year of child care.

While Associated Students and university president Gail Fullerton are working to increase available childcare services, the Washington Square Federal Credit Union is trying to make them more affordable.

The student-run credit union is developing a new low-interest loan for students with children in day care, according to Jim Rinehart, program coordinator for the credit union.

Under the program, the credit union would pay students' child-care costs directly to their childcare facility, Rinehart said. The students would be required to pay interest only as long as they are enrolled at SJSU, he said. They would not begin paying off the loan until six months after graduation. National Credit Union Asso-ciation resultations prevent Bine.

ciation regulations prevent Rine-hart from releasing exact interest rates just yet, but he said last month they would probably be somewhere in the range of 6 per-cent to 10 percent.

The maximum loan amount will probably be $2,500, though that amount is subject to change, he said.

The on-campus childcare fa-cility, Frances Gulland Child Development Center, operates on a sliding scale, according to Director Karen Sheridan.

The program has not yet been fully defined, Rinehart said, but the credit union is considering four proposals. The first two would provide low-interest loans to students able to show good credit ratings. he said. Depending on the maxi-mum loan amount the credit union establishes, students would pay off the loan over a two- or three-year period, begin-ning six months after graduation. The other two proposals would be possible only with the cooperation of the Associated Students, according to Rinehart. See LOANS, back page

Students robbed, face meat cleaver

But when the man pointed a large meat cleaver from Tse's kitchen at the 20-year-old SJSU student, two hours of terror began. Tse, two other SJSU students, and a fourth roommate were robbed and tied up March 31 at their townhouse off Lundy Avenue in North San Jose. San Jose police officers charged 27-year-old Ronnie Torrez, a paroled ex-convict and an alleged drug user, in the case.

Two other SJSU students, James Kwan, 21, and Ronald Kwan, 26, were also awakened in their bedrooms and allegedly tied up and robbed by Torrez, police reported.

The suspect stayed in the house for two hours but never awakened the fourth roommate, 26-year-old Jackson Ng, who slept through the incident in another part of the townhouse, Boyd said. The students lost an estimated $6,000 in property, including Tse's 1986 Chevy Camaro

Associated Students budget squeeze could bring about funding controversy

Lower revenues affect campus groups

By Joel Beers Daily staff writer

The discussion over this year's Associated Students budget may turn out to be a war.

Faced with less projected revenue than last year but forced to increase funding for high-priority groups, the A.S. is caught in an unenviable posi-tion: how does it keep everybody happy when there isn't enough money to do it?

The answer is not an easy one, according to Budget Committee Chairman Kevin Reese.

"I expect some people to be a little upset," Reese said. "Any time someone doesn't get what they ask for they're going to be a little dis-turbed." turbed.

The projected budget for next year is $984,688, substantially less than last year's figure, which was slightly more than $1 million.

The primary reason for the discrepancy is that the A.S. will not receive any funds from Spartan Shops this year Usually, Spartan Shops gives its excess revenue to the A.S., which then allocates it. This year, how-ever, Spartan Shops has allocated the means to the presend Maternel the money to the proposed Meteorol-ogy Building. The effect has been the creation of a "budget crunch," in the words of budget committee member and A.S. President-elect Scott Santandrea.

Santandrea and other committee members say they expect to hear substantial resistance from several groups, including the music and athletics departments, at Wednesday's Associated Students meeting.

The committee is currently preparing a final recommendation that it will submit to the A.S.

After the committee submits its recommendation, a public hearing will be conducted.

The hearing will give impacted groups an opportunity to air their concerns.

After the hearing, the A.S. can choose to amend the budget committee recommendations or approve them

Two areas named by the budget committee as high priorities are A.S. leisure services and the program board

'We're looking to increase the funding (to leisure services and the program board) so they can become viable entities in the Rec Center," Santandrea said. "We're expanding them to meet the needs of the facility.

The program board, which will schedule four to six major concerts a year in the arena, has a recom-mended allocation of $91,000. Last year it received almost $77,000.

Leisure services, which will use the Rec Center for classes and intramural games, has received a recommended allocation of almost $103,000. That figure is $4,000 more than last year's allocation.

The only problem with expanding these two areas, Santandrea said, is See BUDGET, back page associated with a psychedelic state of mind that is not conducive to LaRouche's primary interest of promoting scientific and technological progress. But I think he is stretching things just a bit when he identifies the band as a project of a three-nation intelligence operation that examined brainwashing experiments during the Korean War period and uti-lized the Satanic influence of rock music to alter personalities. LaRouche's delusions remind me of a collection of notes a friend of mine collected while working for the post office.

At the time, some less-than-sane individual was participating in a one-way correspondence with an entity referred to as Babba. The letters were all scribbled on coffee-stained napkins and odd bits of paper and then deposited in the mail box without envelope or address.

One installment described the espionage activi-ties the anonymous author encountered during a trip to his favorite restaurant.

Upon boarding the bus, he realized he was 10 cents short of the required fare. This oversight was, of course, no fault of his own. He had the proper change when he left his house but somewhere along the way a dime had managed to slip through a "space-gap in time" and disappear forever.

This mystery was obviously part of a scheme by government officials to create obstacles to his mission. His suspicions were augmented by the presence of Ronald Reagan and Margaret Thatcher disguised as a bus driver and a waitress, respectively, in order to observe his activity.

The letter ended with a piece of advice for Babba: "I am suggesting to everyone with whom I correspond that they should save everything I write to them. Undoubtedly it will prove valuable someday to possess the memos of a man who pur-portedly has the power to raise the dead."

The difference, as I see it, between these wastepaper rantings and those of LaRouche, is that Babba's mysterious pen pal probably didn't have the monetary resources to enable him to distribute his insights to the public. The Metro article said some estimates indicate the LaRouche organiza-tion sende $30 million per year. of its programming, but I cannot understand the radio station's decision to allow a white supremist speak on one of its talk shows.

The program, which aired last week as part of the station's "About This and That Show," featured (if you can call it that) William Herrel, an 88-year-old white supremist.

Here is a man who believes the United States should be a land of whites only, that minorities should cease to exist, and that the cause of all the strife in America is the presence of minorities.

And KSJS dignifies him by allowing him to espouse his warped views on one of its programs. I have to wonder about the station's motives for allowing Herrel to speak on its show.

Was this some sort of legitimate attempt to solve the racial problems facing this country? I don't think so. Or was it a cheap publicity stunt to attract protest and draw attention to the station? That sounds more Rob Lyon like it. Well, KSJS, pull the plug on it. I personally have seen enough of this Geraldo Rivera-type journalism, and I sure don't want to hear it on our campus radio station. Surely KSJS can produce more worthy topics for discussion than digging up an old man who comes from a generation of Nazism that most people would like to forget.

Let's all just hope the guy croaks before somebody else decides to air his blatantly racist views. And let's hope that KSJS changes its brand of journalism and

Currie tries movies just for kicks

Daily staff writer This SJSU black belt has conquered many of the titles available in the martial arts circuit and now he's looking to steal a place on the silver screen. Chuckie "Quick Kick" Currie, a five-time world title holder, flailed such lightening-quick kicks in com-petition that the Professional Karate Association named him the "Fastest Kicker in the U.S.", thus earning Currie the nickname "Quick Kick." Currie, a 28-year-old art major, has spent much of his life involved in the physically gruelling and mental-ly demanding study of the martial arts. Currie started his training in martial arts when he was 6-yearsold

His father, a former professional middleweight boxer, previously wanted Chuckie to follow in his value chickle to follow in his footsteps. He changed his mind when Chuckie, sparring with an older brother, spun around, arched a limber kick high in the face of his taller sibling, cutting open the sur-prised boy's lip, thus ending the spar and starting Currie's training in the martial arts

"My father then enrolled me into Karate classes and dropped the idea of me boxing forever," said Currie, who has two brothers that are professional boxers.

Proving a natural in the fighting arts, Currie obtained his first black belt by his 10th birthday, his second by his 14th, and by the time he was 17 he had earned another with seven-time karate world champion winner Byong Yu as his instructor.

Displaying his versatility and per-severance, the 5-foot-10, 175-pound Currie added several different titles to his black belts by the time he became 21. Other than his world titles, Currie has gathered 10 national championship titles, two world titles in Karate, and won the Gold medal twice for the world title in Tae Kwon Do. A popular martial arts magazine, "Inside Kung Fu Magazine" rated Currie as the No. 1 martial arts performer in the United States.

"I learned never to get mad at an opponent," Currie said. "It you tight mad, you're going to lose. The key is to concentrate on winning and to always have a plan."

Now, the quick kicking champion's plan is a career making films. Sharing places among the ranks of QUICK KICKS - SJSU student Chuckie Currie, a Seventh degree Black Belt pursuing a film career, spars with Husayn Campbell.

Bruce Lee and Chuck Norris is very appealing to the athlete in need of higher goals.

Currie has appeared as a stuntper-son/stand-in playing a martial arts instructor in the Paramount Pictures release "The Shadow Fighter." But it's not Currie's style to stand in the background for long. Tired of waiting to be "discovered" and thus brought into the limelight, Currie decided to make his own movie. The production entitled "Black Belt Dancer" stars Currie as a high-kicking fighter that likes to take a break to dance when he's clear of dangerous thugs that try unsuccessfully to take a pop at the fighter. The video is expected to be completed by mid-summer. Currie has been corresponding with several of Hollywood's stars in search of a potential backer to finance a fullscale production.

Currie has appeared in hundreds of shows and tournaments, including half-time appearances for the San Francisco 49ers and the Golden State Warriors. He also has had spots on Evening Magazine and ESPN.

Richard Pryor, Prince, Chico DeBarge and other celebrities have sought Currie's martial arts provess and hired the fighter as their body-guard. Currie enjoyed the opportunity the body gaurd position gave him to meet such celebritics.

The busy daily schedule led by Curie includes attending classes at SJSU, teaching private Karate lessons at the San Jose Academy of "Black Belt Dancer", doing ground-work in search of a backer and try-ing to sandwich in as many hours as possible practicing his martial arts technique.

"I used to be able to practice at least eight hours a day," Currie said."But now, with time constraints as they are, I'm lucky if I can exceed four hours."

When Currie finds spare time, he enjoys dancing.

"The main object in performing the martial arts is to gain control mentally and physically over both yourself and your opponent," he said. "It's incredible how it drains

you. "My only release from all the stress is through dancing." he added. Currie has also been perfecting a technique that incorporates the mar-tial arts choreographed to music, with a few dance steps thrown in for effect.

'I just do it for fun right now," said Currie. "I don't think that I could try it on stage just yet." Even if the film venture doesn't pan out, Currie always tries "to have ideas flowing and to be ever ready for change.

Jazz star Pete Escovedo to play at SJSU this week with student jazz ensemble

By Daniel Vasquez

Daily staff writer A Wednesday night Latin Jazz performance will be a culmination of months of hard work for Dan Sabanovich's students. Sabanovich, an SJSU music instructor, will present his Latin Jazz Ensemble along with special guest artist Pete Escovedo. The concert will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the Music Department Concert Hall.

The all-student musical ensem-ble is under the guidance of Sabanovich, who created the first Latin Jazz Ensemble at SJSU. They have worked the entire semester preparing for this one night, he said.

preparing for this one night, he said. "Their energy level is extremely high right now." Sabanovich said. And for good reason. Escovedo is a respected artist, locally and internationally. For more than 20 years, Escovedo and his family have been a creative force in Latin Jazz history. Escovedo has received numerous awards for his work, including "Jazz Musician of the Year" in 1983 and the "Congressional Award" for out-standing contribution to the community, state and nation. Escovedo and his brother Coke created a 16-piece band called "Azteca" that toured the U.S. with Stevie Wonder and the Temptations.

Escovedo and his daughter Sheila Escovedo (Sheila E) have recorded two albums together and have appeared in concert together

Escovedo has also performed with Billy Cobham, George Duke, Herbie Hancock, Mongo Herbie Hancock, Mongo Santamaria, Greg Kihn, Carlos Santana, Boz Skaggs, Tito Puente and Anita Baker, among others.

SJSU's Latin Jazz Ensemble will be another addition to the list.

"This semester, we decided to go into a different direction, a different style," Sabanovich said. In order to make the change from the "Big Band" style of jazz, which Sabanovich directed at SJSU in past semesters, to the Afro-Cuban style, which will be performed Wednesday night, the players had to spend a lot of time adjusting their styles, Sabanovich said.

"This type of music is very com-plex rhythmically," he said, "And, I must say, I am very proud of how far each of my players have come in only one semester."

The essence of the performance will be found in the rhythm section, featuring pianos and percussions, which will provide the heartbeat and rhythmic groove associated with Latin Jazz and Afro-Cuban music. Kevin Twomey and K.C. Filson will alternate on piano, each with a win aternate of plano, each with a different personal approach, Sabanovich said. Mark Danley will be on the drum set. James Kassis and Robert Chavira will be on Latin percus-sions. David Rios will play the con-gas and Lisa Alberto will play the

SJSU choirs search for recruits

By Doris Kramer

The SJSU Concert Choir and the Choraliers need new recruits to join the programs and tour places like Europe, Australia and Disneyland.

An all-out recruiting effort will be launched this week to secure both new high school talent and current SJSU students who may be interested in a music minor.

Selected works of great com-posers such as Brahms, Bernstein, Monteverdi and Mendelssohn will be featured in the Annual Spring Finale Concert, a joint presentation by the SJSU Concert Choir and the Choraliers.

This annual listening experience will be held Friday at 8:15 p.m. in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Saratoga. Tickets are $3 and are available at the door.

The finale concert serves not only as a good-bye to the spring semester, but is also the final leg of an outreach project familiarizing high school students with the vocal finesse characteristic of SJSU choral programs, said Gina Argenti, public-ity director for the Choraliers. The Concert Choir and the Choraliers will travel to various California high schools on Tuesday and Wednesday in a recruiting effort that has been successful in strength ening the music program for the past 19 years, Argenti said. They will tour high schools in San Ramon, Castro Valley and Napa.

You get the best people by physically letting them see the program," said Darren Elein, the Choraliers' messages demonstrating the prod-

"In this case, our music is the message and SJSU is the product," he said. "I decided to minor in music at SJSU after watching the Choraliers perform at my Stockton high school." Last year the Choraliers traveled to Austria for the Spittel Choral Festival. an elite event in which the top choir from each country is invit-ed, Elein said. SJSU secured first place in the classical division. This was the first time in the event's 25 years that a choir with a woman director has won an award at the event.

The Choraliers are directed by Charlene Archibeque. Mary Breden, new at SJSU from the University of Texas, is director of the Concert Choir.

Those interested in joining the Concert Choir must be able to read music. The Choraliers is more selective, and auditions with Archibeque are required.

All interested parties are invited to call 924-4332 for more information.

Lisa Alberto will play the bass

The Wednesday night performers will be joined by an SJSU Afro-Brazilian percussion class for a grand finale, featuring a samba written by Escovedo titled "Zina's Zamba." The samba was recorded by Escovedo on his latest album, "Mister E."

"The finale will consist entirely of a percussionist, which is called a Batucada," Sabanovich said, "creat-ing a driving force that will make people get up and dance.'

Admission to the event is $3 for students and $5 for general audi-ence. Proceeds will go to scholarships for jazz students

Rock fans channel energies into club

By Andy Nystrom

Daily staff writer When the subject of music at SJSU is considered, two students should come to mind — Kaydon Coburn and Roy Recio. Although they aren't music majors and can't be found performing at any of the local nightclubs, the pair has channeled its musical energy in another way. They formed an independent music club on campus The Association of Rock 'N Roll, which has been in existence for two semesters, is concerned with widening SJSU students' musical horizons, according to Coburn.

"The way we're doing this is by putting on shows in the amphitheater featuring local bands," he said. "We're giving them an opportunity to hear new bands for free, basical-to enhance cultural awareness. Some of the bands scheduled this semester are Bug and Colour Scream. Bug will perform Wednesday at noon in the amphitheater. "These guys are a great surf-punk-rock band," Recio Recio "They Kaydon Coburn said. founder, Assoc. of Rock 'N Roll even have girls in bikinis who dance around on stage, so it should be wild." The club also has other ideas for promoting music on campus. Last Wednesday, the club showed U2's "Rattle and Hum" in the Student Union for free. They also plan to bring in guest speakers, such as disc jockeys and record executives.

Coburn and Recio feel that by showcasing these different aspects of the music business, along with the concerts, more students will become interested in the club.

The club's initial goals have been attained, he said. These include a $500 allocation from the Associated Students, packing a Student Union meet-ing room with more than 25 students and successful concerts.

Receiving the money was a crucial accomplish-ment. It will help the club rent a P.A. and sound tech-nician for concerts, Coburn said.

The club's mention in a recent BAM Magazine article also gave it a boost. 'After the article came out, I had bands calling me who were interested in playing our concerts, Coburn said. "We were hop-ing that BAM would just mention us, but the response was great. Now that the club is making tracks at SJSU

the founder, Assoc. of Rock 'N Roll and in music world, Coburn isn't going to sit back and bask in the success

Roy Recio

He is a man with big plans.

The next thing he wants to create is a promotional music network system among Northern California universities, to bring people together for a common cause

"I see this as getting real big," he said. "It would grease the wheels of rock and roll, and make it more accessible for bands to play all over." He would also like to put on a major three-band concert with, "all the big lights, sound and smoke," in the Student Union Loma Prieta Ballroom.

Recio, on the other hand, while also thankful for the club's success, prefers to take things one step at a time.

"Sometimes I've got to calm Kaydon down a bit." he said. "He's always reaching for the stars, and coming up with these astronomical ideas. No matter how different their methods are for promoting the club, the two still have one thing in com-mon — their love for rock and roll.

Soviet Union to shut down plutonium-producing plants

LONDON (AP) — Mikhail Gor-bachev today announced the Soviet Union is halting production of weapons-grade uranium and will shut down two more nuclear reactors that produce plutonium for nuclear weapons by the end of next year. In a half-hour speech in London's Guildhall, the Soviet president called his unilateral action "another major step toward the complete ces-sation of production of fissionable materials for use in weapons." Arms experts said today that while uranium and plutonium are both used in Soviet nuclear weapons, plu-tonium is used more often and that Moscow has enough on hand to pro-

Gorbachev reiterated promises he made at the United Nations in December that the Soviet Union would soon begin paring 500,000 men from its standing army and withdrawing troops and tanks from Europe and the Chinese frontier. Gorbachev made a strong appeal for world disarmament, but he warned the process could falter if the West did not reciprocate. After the address, Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, called on Queen ways.

The service segment, which in-cludes the childcare center and California State affairs, has a $92,979 allocation.

The subtotal for the student orga-nization segment is $22,069, slightly higher than last year's total. This is mainly due to the inclusion of African Awareness Month, which has a $5,000 recommended allocation.

The instructionally related activities segment, where funds for music and athletics are drawn, is $213,670, substantially lower than last year's figure of $291,600.
