Policewoman Edel breaks barriers

Daily staff writer

As she crouched down and out of sight behind a car, University Police Department Investigator Theresa Edel watched as the young man she had been investigating for months on suspected arson, threw a lighted match into the dumpster across the street.

The man then walked back across the street toward the spot where Edel was hiding, and both watched the flames shoot out of the dumpster.

to the man, who turned around to look aghast at her before he took off running. Edel was close behind. "Hey! I know where to find you!" Edel told the culprit. He stopped running and was arrested.

This is one of the many ways in which Edel has learned to catch a criminal without physically forcing him or her to comply, and it is by this philosophy that she operates as a member of the UPD force

Edel's practice of doing her job using her brains instead

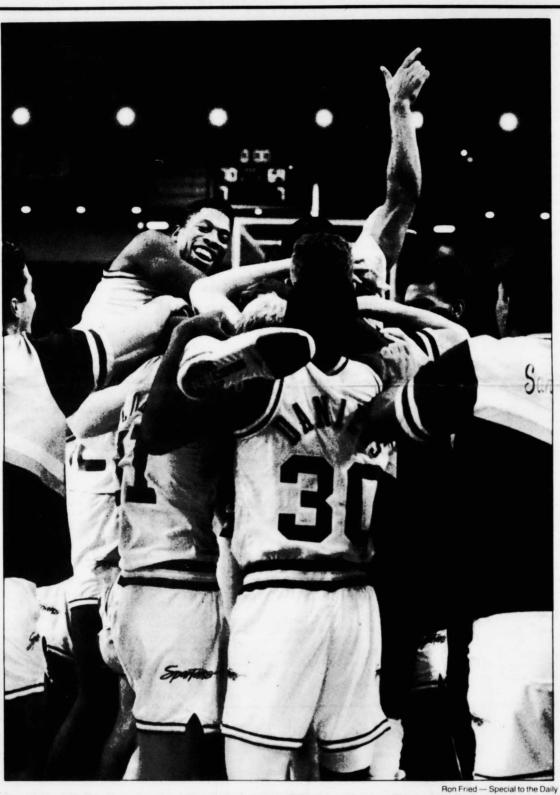

"Freeze! Police - you're under arrest!" Edel yelled of brawn, unlike the stereotypical law enforcer, has remained steadfast in her nine years at UPD and has earned her respect among colleagues and co-workers.

The feeling of having to prove yourself (physically as a woman on the force) constantly, isn't good. I believe law enforcement (in the physical sense) has a place and time when you have to do it, but it should not be a priority," she

CSU fears audit would affect decision in pending lawsuit

Daily staff writer

A state audit of the Student Union Recreation and Events Center has been put on hold while the California State University system attempts to recover the project's multimillion dollar cost overruns.

Fear that the audit could cast the CSU in an unfavorable light and jeopardize its chances has caused the California State Students Association The outcome of the audit could affect the litigation," he said. But neither Hawkins nor Ramer know if the lawsuit will be aimed at the project's contractor, Roebbelen Engineering Company, or its architect, Hall, Goodhue, Haisley & Barker.

CSU Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds and Vice Chancellor Mayer Chapman were unavailable for comment Tuesday.

However, in a letter from Reynolds to California Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, Reynolds stated the CSU was "working with the At torney General's office to seek recovery related student protests about the overruns incurred durto the design deficiencies" of the Rec Center

Ad class sells Apples

By Brenda Yesko Daily staff write

When Shawn Howes graduates this month she'll have an impressive entry for her resume in addition to a diploma - a portfolio from the advertising campaign she helped market and imple ment at SJSU for Apple Computer.

Howes is one of 32 SJSU students, mostly advertising majors, taking part in an unusual learning experience that may be the first of its kind to be conducted in an undergradute course at a California university.

"Apple Extravaganza," which ends at 4 p.m. today, is the result of an advertising elective course project designed to give students "real world" experience in developing and marketing an advertising campaign, according to dan's Advertising 122 Business-to-Business course in exchange for an advertising campaign that would encourage the sale of Apple computers on campus, Ramerize said.

The campaign that calls the computers the 'Education Tool for the 90s" was chosen unanimously from three proposals judged by Jordan, Apple representatives and Janet Mathis, Spartan Bookstore Retail Sales Manager, Jordan said

The campaign targets students who for the up to 40 percent student discount on Apple computers and who will likely ask their parents to make the purchase, she said. Apple has successfully incorporated the program on campuses in Washington and Oregon, but this is the first time it has been tried at an undergraduate class in California, Ramerize

Vietnamese students work to overcome obstacles, succeed

This story is the final installment in a three part series about the Vietnamese population at SJSU.

Members of minority groups, as they attempt to assimilate into mainstream American society, inevitably run the risk of losing their culture. Both Trinh Tran and Linh Nguyen, president and assistant vice president of the Vietnamese Student Association respectively, agreed that one of the most students maintain their culture is by speaking in their native language

But the more they learn to speak English, the less time they spend speaking Vietnamese. As a result, they end up losing much of their culture, according to Larry Englemann, a history professor and a specialist on Vietnamese culture.

"They are losing their culture as they lose their language. It's unavoidable for any immigrant group." says Engle-mann, who has studied Vietnamese culture since 1984 and has written several books on the subject.

'Americans take freedom for granted because they have always had it.'

-Long Dinh, Vietnamese student

"Their parents don't have the time to teach them writing of their language." says Englemann.

American English can prove to be a effective ways to help other Vietnamese difficult barrier for a non-native speaker. With its vast supply of infor mal slang outside the classroom and highly formal structure in the classroom, it can pose a serious problem for the Vietnamese student.

"They are at a distinct disadvantage linguistically," says Gloria Collins, a lecturer in the English department who teaches many Vietnamese and Asian Collins says people who speak Asian languages "in general have more problems. They don't have verb tenses, plurals, articles, prepositions.

How well her Vietnamese students learn English doesn't necessarily depend on the amount of time they have spent in the country, she says, because of the influence of slang.

'Many of the Vietnamese today, who have gone to high school in America, pick up the American slang," she says. "They speak English well, but don't do so well when it comes to writ-

Despite language barriers, many Vietnamese students desire just as much as the next person to be sucessful, get good grades, and enjoy college life. says immigrant Long Dinh, an electrical enigineering graduate student. But the opportunity to succeed, he says, is something the Vietnamese student values greatly

"Americans take freedom ranted," says Dinh, "because they have always had it.'

Vietnamese people appreciate the freedom they have in America to succeed, he explained, because it is a freedom they haven't always had.

"When you have something you love and you lose it, think about how much more you love that thing," he says.

What may account for the growth of the Vietnamese population in America. he says, can be summed up in an old Vietnamese saying:

"If the son is better than the father, then the house will be full of happi-

Garbage disposal and racketeers:

Do Americans want to depend on racketeers to take care of their garbage?

That's another element of the problem of solid waste disposal that must be considered as landfills are being exhausted and the volume of refuse mounts.

Public hearings last month in Philadelphia revealed the East Coast crime families that have long dominated the waste-disposal industry in New York and New Jersey through intimidation and murder already have branched out into Pennsylvania. They are expected to look next at the Midwest — and possibly the

The threat is more alarming because it comes at a time when the nation is approaching a crisis on solid waste disposal. The risk to public safety is becoming increasingly clear, particularly as mob muscle can be applied to achieve monopoly control of the industry.

Profits in the industry can be enormous. Waste disposal is not a field in which many businessmen are interested.

States are fighting back through laws re-quiring background investigations of waste haulers and landfill operations in an effort to block mob control. However, a cooperative, inter-regional response may be needed, as will some federal assistance.

The gangster threat only further underlines the fact that an effective, overall response to the solid waste problem must be implemented - and soon. Public health is at stake, and if a crunch comes, the public must avoid the additional threat of being at the mercy of the mob.

TV news re-creations

Why all the fuss about television networks using dramatic re-creations of news events?

In July, ABC news touched off a furor by broadcasting a dramatization, with actors, of American diplomat Felix Bloch's supposed exchange of documents with a Soviet citizen. Critics said the sequence blurred the line between reality and dramatics, a line that television news should regard as holy.

These folks take television news too se-

They applauded NBC's decision to join ABC in promising not to use such dramatizations. Their criticism turned to CBS, which steadfastly refuses to change. More power to CBS, whose defiant stance proclaims what the so-called critics refuse to admit: that television news is entertainment pure and simple.

Television spreads the image - not the word - better than any other medium, and some images will never die.

While ABC and NBC continue their impossible quest for a news program beyond the boundaries of entertainment, the rest of us can turn to CBS, where television news is lauded for what it really is: a nightly half-hour of informative escapism.

This letter is to Todd Anderson and all those people. who may have been offended by an ad that ran in the Spartan Daily on Dec. 7.

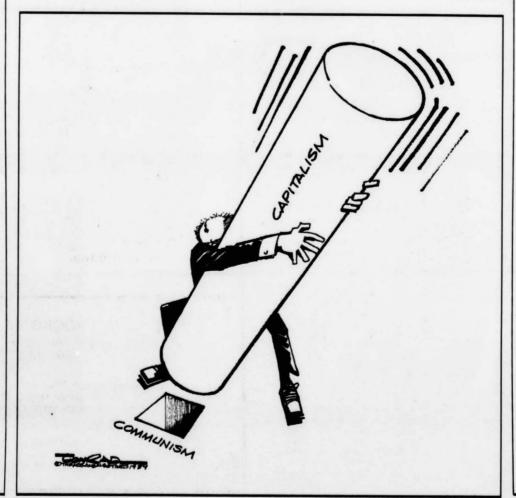

We agree that the advertisement was in poor taste and did tend to glorify the tragic event that occurred 48 years ago that brougt America into World War II. However, the Spartan Daily is in the business of serving the business community by displaying their ads in our newspaper. Although we often offer advice, retailers sometimes choose not to make changes. In this case, Paradise Beach has run Kamikaze Thursday ads continuously all semester. Unfortunately, it fell on Dec. 7. Perhaps a better headline would have read "Pearl

Remember, this is a bar ad. So unless it was a tribute ad, there will be some incentive to go out and party. If you still feel that Paradise Beach was out of line, all we can recommend is that you boycott the establishment and go else-

The Philippines:

Prompt United States response to Philippines President Corazon Aquino's pleas to save her administration from a military coup is appropriate both as a measure to preserve a democratically elected government and to pro-tect our own strategic interests. The United States maintains two important bases there, Subic Naval Base and Clark Air Base.

However, there is little the United States can do to help Aquino if she does not move quickly to help herself. Economic recovery depends upon initiatives taken in Manila, not Washington.

As long as the Philippines remain a sad exception to the Southeast Asian economic success story, Aquino's administration will be vulnerable.

Over half of Philippine households earn less than the country's poverty level of $540 a year. Basic government services are unreliable and her administration has been plagued with allegations of corruption. Land reform was promised, but she moved away from that pledge soon after taking office.

This latest coup attempt is only one of many since Aquino came to power in February 1986. Unless Aquino reduces government control of the economy and encourages the private sector, steps vital to winning grass-roots support, not even American military aid will be able to save her.

The brutal torture and murder of six Jesuit priests, two of their house workers and the arrest of 12 Lutheran missionary workers in El Salvador should cause Bush, Congress and the rest of us to reconsider U.S. support.

If Bush and Congress are truly concerned about making El Salvador a bona fide democracy, they cannot support a government that allows the murder of freedom-preaching Jesuits. The Jesuits are well-known for their scholarly research about El Salvador's people and for championing the causes of peasants and refugees. For this, they have become a target of the Salvadoran ruling class.

The murder and oppression in El Salvador cannot go on with U.S. help. It's time Bush and Congress realize that

Senator under fire

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) —Under $2.5 billion party pressure not to run again, Sen. Alan Cranston said he made a mistake but denied again any wrongdoing when he accepted money for three nonpartisan voter registration groups from the chief of a failed Southern California savings and loan.

Cranston, D-Calif., said Monday he'd be "a coward and a wimp" if he required political allegiance as a requirement for his senatorial help.

Speechmaking in a Marin County porecess tour, the 75-year-old eran liberal lawmaker also pledged again to run for re-election in 1992.

Federal authorities are reportedly looking into circumstances surrounding $850,000 in contributions from conservative financier Charles Keating Jr., to the three voter registration groups directed by Cranston's son, Kim.

Also under investigation, by the FBI and Senate Ethics Committee, is a question whether Cranston and four Senate colleagues tried to intercede with federal regulators for Keating, former head of the failed Lincoln Savings & Loan. The failure could cost taxpayers more than

"When the people of California hear the facts and not the image, they will make a judgment that nothing was amiss as far as I am concerned in the Keating affair, and my record ... will lead to my re-election in 1992," he said in a speech.

New revelations Tuesday indicated that Cranston and Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., made last-minute appeals to top banking regulators urging a sale — rather than government seizure - of Lincoln Savings and Loan last spring after being lobbied on behalf of the owner and a potential buyer, according to interviews and documents.

In an interview before a student audience at the James B. Davidson Middle School, Cranston pictured Keating as a constituent he helped because he figured the businessman was being harassed by federal loan regulators.

"I would be a coward and a wimp," he told the students, "if I said to a contributor that because you contributed to me it might lead to the appearance of impropriety if I helped you, and so I won't help you. I would be a pretty sorry senator

Scholar wins award

The 21-year-old daughter of an SJSU music teacher is among 32 Americans who have joined the prestigious ranks of Rhodes Scholars.

Martina Vandenberg, an international relations major and student body president at Pomona College, was selected by the Rhodes Scholarship Trust Sunday to be a recipient of a 1990 Rhodes Scholarship.

Gretchen Vandenberg, an SJSU music teacher for the past two years and Martina's mother, said that she is pleased with her daughter's achieve-

Martina "has always been an outstanding student; she has a very keen understanding of different subject matter, and I, my husband and her professors have known her to be a very hard worker," said Gretchen. It takes hard work, not just brains, to succeed in today's world, she said

Shortly after the announcement of her daughter's scholarship award, Gretchen told a Mercury News reporter that she was "in shock" over the news. However, she later said that it came as no surprise to her or her husband, Pieter.

"Both my husband and I have con-sistently had faith in her, somehow we Gretchen said, adding that Pieter, whom she says is good at predictions, said it would be an "easy win."

Martina, who is a member of the group Students for Nuclear Responsibil-ity, was the last candidate interviewed Saturday, and she thought it was a "lost cause" when she was not called back for further interviews. But, an hour after the interview, Martina received the news of her scholarship victory.

She, along with 13 other women and 18 men selected from 102 finalists, will receive two years of study in Oxford, England. Scholarship winners have their college and university fees paid and receive a stipend to cover living ex-

Upon graduation from Pomona College in May, Martina plans to earn her graduate degree in international relations at Oxford University.

The Rhodes scholarships were established in 1902 by the estate of Cecil Rhodes, a British philanthropist who had hoped the scholarships would contribute to world understanding and peace. Women were first eligible for the Rhodes scholarship in 1976, and 154 women have won Rhodes scholarships

Hurst finishes first in Japan American team victorious

By Tony Mercado

As the stars and stripes were slowly hoisted and the national anthem blared across the golf course, the full significance of the tournament that followed hit SJSU women's golf coach Mark Gale like a thunderclap.

This wasn't just another "tourney." Gale was coaching the National Women's Team that won the NCAA/Japan Collegiate Golf Tournament in Tokyo, Japan.

Two of its members included the backbone of his own NCAA champion team from last season, SJSU's Pat Hurst Tomoe Furnihira and finished with 223

"I thought we'd be too relaxed," said Gale. "Then during the opening ceremonies, we realized that we weren't just playing for ourselves, we were playing for our country."

With Hurst, the defending NCAA

Division I champion, leading the way, the team posted the largest victory margin in the 15-year history of the event.

The NCAA, represented by eight American men and four women, captured 43 of 60 points

Hurst finished in first place, shooting a final-round 73 to defeat Japan's

Her total was the lowest since 1981. Participants in that tournament included Julie Inkster and Cathy Baker, who went on to win the U.S. Open in her first year on the LPGA tour.

, Cathy Mockett from Tulsa University shot 231 and Carolyn McKenzie of Oklahoma State University had 233 to finish in second and third place, respec-

Ammaccapne fired a final-round 75 and beat Muriko Watanabe to place sixth, with a 3-day total of 240.

Despite the lopsided score, Gale said several of the matches were very close. 'I told the team that we were going to have to work for this victory. Hurst was voted the Most Valuable Player of the tournament for her performance and was easily the most popular player there, according to Gale. "Everybody was interested in her," Gale said. "She had television crews and reporters constantly interviewing

Hurst is of Japanese descent and was reunited with several relatives she never really knew. Her mother and grandmother accompanied her throughout the tournament, walking the entire length of the 6,519 yard course.

Hurst's grandmother is 80-years-old. "I felt Pat was overly nervous in the beginning," said Gale. "But she had the feeling that she would do well.

Ammaccapnne was not happy with her first round performance, but won the rest of her rounds rather handidly.

This was the second victory for Gale in the tournament. He also served as the coach for the women's team in 1987.

"I'm very impressed with the changes made in this country and with this tournament," said Gale. "The style of play with the golfers is much more professional and the talent was better this year than last time."

"I learned a lot as a coach. I saw a lot of toughness in the eyes of the girls and I hope to carry that over to the team back home.

With SJSU's next tournament scheduled well after winter break, Gale and his team can look forward to some well deserved rest. But Gale discourages the thought that Hurst and Ammaccapane will suffer a let down after their "learn-

"They'll use this experience as a steping stone," Gale said.

Despite a 22-73 loss to Fresno State on Saturday, SJSU swimming coach Vaune Kadlubek is happy with the team's progress so far this season.

SJSU dropped to 1-2 and Fresno State upped its record to 6-1.

'You cannot look at the score," said Catie Brennan, senior SJSU team cap-Spartan swimmmer Nicole Halfenger added. "All the races were close

Brennan pointed out the fact that a lot of the races were lost down the stretch.

"We weren't beaten badly," 'Halfenger said. Catie and I were out touched."

"You can't even see it on the clock,"

"We're swimming tired right now," Brennan said. "Once we rest more we'll be able to finish our races."

If finishes aren't up to par in practice, then Kadlubek requires her swimmers to do the entire stroke over again, Halfenger said.

"It was a good meet for us," Kadlubek said. "Our girls swam fairly fast. We lost a couple of close races."

When the Spartan swimmers face resno State again on Feb. 10. Kadlubek is confident that the team will be able to turn some of last weeks close losses into wins in the rematch.

Brennan had second place finishes in the 200 I.M., Butterfly and 500 free-

Brennan lost by only three hundredths of a second in the 200 I.M. and four hundredths in the 500 free.

Nicole Halfenger placed second in the 50 freestyle and 100 butterfly despite being sick, Kadlubek said. Kadlubek commented that the duel meet only lasted 55 minutes because the Fresno swimmers wanted to get back to Fresno so they could watch the FSU

The pace of the meet was benificial to the swimmers because they have to learn how to be competitive even when they are tired, Kadlubek said. There is normally more rest time in between

Catie Brennan smiles after an exhausting swim meet against FSU

Kadlubek was pleased with Tina Spitze because she improved her times in the 200 (2:10:35) and 500 (6:07:47) freestyles, she said. Spitze placed third in the former.

Janelle Foster finished second in the 100 freestyle with a time of 1:00:54. Melany Allen and Maria Bond finished third in the 100 backstroke and 50 freestyle with times of 1:21:65 and 27:43 respectively.

The Spartan swimmers host Cal State Hayward this afternoon at the Aquatics Center at 2:30 p.m. A diving exhibition will be held at 1:30 p.m. prior to the meet. No points will be scored for the diving competition.

"Cal State beat us last year. We hope we can get them back," Kadlubek said.

We want to end 1989 at 2-2 " Brennan was a little more confident We'll definately beat Hayward, Brennan said.

"They beat us by three points last year," Brennan said. "We have a better team this year.

Point guards work toward building basketball future

To some Spartan fans, SJSU guards Tom Desiano and Terry Cannon represent two entirely different aspects of the basketball program.

Desiano is a 6-foot-1 senior point guard who offers experience and leadership to a team that consists of 15 new players. He has played on three different Spartan basketball teams in less than

He was a starter before the Jan. 18 10-player walkout, which he didn't take part in, and continued in his starting role as point guard. Desiano led the team in steals and was fourth on the replacement team in scoring with a 9.4 average. He experienced SJSU's entire NCAA leading 21-game losing streak

Cannon, a six-foot freshman point day set SJSU into a "March Madness" mood as it tries for a position in the NCAA Basketball Tournament.

Monday's 70-69 victory over Texas Christian University is the first step.

The two of them emphasize that they are components of an intricate team system. They both desire to contribute whatever it takes to win.

SJSU headcoach Stan Morrison stresses teamwork first and foremost, he

The team is made up of "hard working people who are building something," Morrison said. "Everybody has invested time, emotion and sweat. All have been in the trenches.'

Desiano emphasized that the key to the team's success is that players must help in any way possible, whether it's siasm," Desiano said. "We're friends on and off the court. We play as a Morrison added, "No prima donnasare allowed. You work hard, you get rewards.

Cannon has started at point guard every game this season. Desiano a starter last season, comes off the bench.

Entering Monday's game against Texas Christian University, Desiano was only averaging 11.5 minutes and 1.5 points per game. Against TCU, he played 27 minutes and scored a season high 15 points

"I wanted to get in any way I could," Desiano said. "I always knew I could do it. It's getting the chance, its a matter of getting the minutes.

Speaking of his experience, Desiano said, "I bring a lot to the team.

for his counterpart, Cannon

'In the future he will be one of the best guards to come out of SJSU," Desiano said.

Desiano played quite a bit against TCU because Cannon got in foul trouble early, Morrison said. Cannon committed his second foul less than three minutes into the game and his third at the 7:25 mark of the first half.

"What was most pleasing to me was how hard Terry Cannon was rooting for Tommy," Morrison said. "He went out to congratulate him.

But in practice they fight each other tooth and nail," Morrison said.

The coach stressed that his decisions on who will play are based on produc-

"Players have to perform," Morrison said. "If they are struggling, then others will step forward."

Morrison said he will start Cannon on Friday when the Spartans travel to Santa Clara University. One game is not enough to make a change though. Morrison emphasizes that it doen't matter who starts the game, but rather, who finishes.

Desiano realized that as a senior it could be a difficult situation playing for a new coach with the players he has recruited. Morrison told him last April that there were no guarantees, Desiano added. Morrison has always been fair, Desiano, along with forward Dwain Daniels and center Kenne Young are the seniors on the squad.

'As seniors, we want to win some games so we can go out with a good feeling that we started something for the future," Desiano said.

For Cannon, the deciding factor in choosing SJSU was that he wanted to experience the challenge of restructuring a new program.

"I know I have four years to do it," Cannon said. "One of my major goals is to bring this program to national rec-

Cannon stressed that if he and his teammates are successful at rebuilding SJSU's program, others will do the same at other schools as well.

"Everyone on this team has a major goal, and that's to win," Cannon said. TCU discovered that fact Monday.

A study of the shadows in Peary's photographs established they were taken en route to and at the pole, he said. And the depth measurements the explorer made by dropping a piece of lead tied to piano wire in holes in the ice were veri-fied by modern maps of the Arctic The foundation said its 240-page re-port will "perhaps put an end to the long process of vilification of a courageous American explorer.

"Our analysis of the data Peary brought back from his journey - his celestial sights, his diary, his ocean sounding and his photographs — has convinced us that their final camp, named Camp Jesup, was no more than five miles from the Pole, allowing for some inaccuracy in their instruments,"

From the start, Peary's claim that he and companion Matthew Henson and four Eskimos reached the pole has been wrapped in controversy.

Upon reaching home, a dismayed Peary discovered that another explorer, Frederick Cook, said he had beaten Peary by a year. Cook's claim was eventually rejected and in 1911 Congress certified Peary as the discoverer.

played with fire - not only literally, but figuratively as well. He often visited Edel at her work, attempting to give her the impression he was an innocent law-abiding citizen, and offering to have her speak to his psychologist who would verify he was mentally stable but later admitting he was under psychological treatment. He also holds a criminal record for arson, according to Edel

Criminals aren't the only scary confrontations Edel experiences in her field of work. Like any job, law enforcement has its politics and red tape that cause a multitude of frustrations for workers. And, although she sees changes emerging, the methods of officer advancement in the field as a whole have been frustrating for Edel, since they typically counteract her philosophies of how law enforcement should be administered Edel said early in her career, she once spoke with a local city police chief regarding the way in which promotions were given.

"I asked him why the advancement (of officers) needed to be centered on the number of arrests each officer made, and he simply said 'There's no better way to do it.' In his eyes, he saw work being produced. But the need for crime prevention rather than arrests after the crime is committed has now become a significant issue," she said.

Even at UPD, there is a test for physical agility for any officer who wants to advance, something which is not required by other departments, Edel said, since the higher positions like sargeant or investigator require much less physical involvement as someone walking a beat, she said.

Although Edel has walked her beat to the pace of a different law enforcer, she hasn't lacked support from the people with whom she works, such as Joseph Reader, a deputy district attorney of Santa Clara County

'Like any kind of job, the police force has many different types of people working on it," Reader said. "Edel is different because she can take control of a situation without having to flash a badge at people. She is one of those people who can take control from a common sense approach without taking official steps. She is always courteous and doesn't throw her weight around

'I think better cops handle things verbally," he said. Becoming involved with the administration of justice field has been Edel's goal since she was a high school stu-dent in Menlo Park. After graduation in 1975, she attended community college for two years before transferring to SJSU, where she got her degree in administration of justice Several job options awaited Edel after graduation, but her final choice was to join the UPD force as a patrol officer, a decision Edel said she made because "I thought at the time UPD was a safer position, with less frequency of danger for a rookie. The position was also more servingoriented, which was something I wanted in a job.

As an investigator, Edel describes herself as an"expendable employee of UPD" because of the variety of jobs she handles. While one of her main jobs is to further investigate police reports in relation to the campus, she may also have go out on patrol when necesssary.

She also collects evidence, interviews witnesses, suspects and victims, prepares cases for the district attorney to be used in court, acts as a court witness when needed, does background checks, handles internal affairs, and works with the campus crime prevention program.

"I do a lot of paperwork," Edel said. Edel was recently chosen to teach a course in the administration of justice department in the spring, and according to Kathleen Hughes, she was chosen "not only because she has a master's degree in business adminstration, but also because of her experience in the field." Sitting at her desk in a small-but-organized office that she shares, Edel seems the strong, silent type, with a certain attitude of relaxed confidence. Her look is casual but professional. It is not until she stands that she shows her 5'2' but her evenly-distributed frame shows she is not petite Her polite mannerisms denote she is used to dealing with the public on a verbal basis, and she is often quite direct in answering questions, even if they are about her personal life. But she doesn't let people know more about her than she wants, and knows how to be intimidating when she needs to be, all attributes which have helped Edel do her job

The wall next to a bookcase filled with an abundance of informational-type books reveals a lighter side of this intense personality. It is adorned with posters of her favorite team, the Giants, in a shrine-like fashion. Not just one or two, but four posters, from team shots to a Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell poster, which she has topped with the sacred black and orange team colors in crepe paper.

"Yeah, I love the Giants," she said in a voice hoarse from cheering at the previous day's playoff game. Her de-vout fan loyalty resembles that of a cult follower, but reveals a truism of her personality: whatever she believes in, she does so with her all Edel's spirituality is another bold belief in her life.

'One of the reason's why I haven't married yet is because I consider myself to be a 'strong Christian.' I mean, I take my spirituality very seriously. And I haven't found a man who shares those beliefs in the same way I do," the 32year-old investigator said.

This spirituality, as well as her determination, was a key to helping Edel in 1986, when it was discovered she had cancer in her left kidney. The condition came as a shock for

"I went in for a check-up in December, and was told I was fine, then 11 months later my kidney had grown to the size of a football. She then underwent surgery and doctors were able to rid her of the disease with the removal of the

For now, Edel is content with her position as an investigator, and the satisfaction she gets from her job has been the main reason why she has stayed at UPD, although she may want to try for a more advanced position later on, she

Being one of two women on the UPD force is something Edel said doesn't bother her, but she would like to see more women join UPD.

"Because we have a union contract, we receive equal pay as the men for our work as the men do, but also because we are in a male-oriented job with a paramilitaristic structure, there is a propensity of being treated differently at times based on your sex," Edel said.

Margie Beiderman, a patrol officer and the only other female on the force, agrees with Edel about the need for an increase of female personnel at UPD.

"Nowadays, administrators want to see women do better, especially in the hiring process as there is a larger quota for minorities and women. But as far as men and women (on the UPD force) are concerned, I think it could be better,

She attributed the reason for this to a lack of female ap-

Despite Beiderman's feelings that there should be an increase in the number of women on the force, she herself recently acquired a positon at the San Jose Police Department. Beiderman said she wanted to transfer for reasons of job advancement, but will start in January as a patrol officer.

Whatever the circumstance, Edel has shown she can adapt and overcome. And with the same passion in which Edel believes she will overcome life's hardships, she believes in the nation's legal system and that justice will ultimately prevail.

'I'm a very justice-oriented person," Edel said. "I believe you can't let things bring you down. You need to focus on going beyond it. You try to fix the injustices but don't let them become your sole focus.

And it seems this belief has helped Edel earn the respect that she has today from those who know her

Imelda dines in local restaurant

Sipping champagne, former Phil-ippine first lady Imelda Marcos held court in a San Jose restaurant, three months before her U.S. District Court trial on charges she fraudulenlty bought U.S. properties with funds plundered from the Philippine treasury.

The Monday night affair follows the Sept. 28 death of Ferdinand Marcos in Honolulu, where she and the deposed Philippine leader were granted exile by the U.S. government. Mrs. Marcos, still dressed in black, declined requests for interviews.

In a restaurant owned by her former palace caterer, Del Garcia, Marcos, surrounded by hundreds of admirers, dined on Swedish meatballs and fancy vegetables at a hastily arranged testimonial for the woman forced, with her husband, to flee her homeland.

Young man gives 7 major organs

SAN FRANCISCO - A young man who died over the weekend gave six people a chance to live because he served as donor of seven separate major

The unidentified donor, who died Saturday, donated the following organs to patients in desperate need:

His heart went to a person suffering from terminal cardiac disease, and one of his kidneys aided a patient with endstage renal disease. His other kidney and his pancreas went to a patient with diabetes and renal failure.

The man's liver went to a patient whose own liver was no longer able to perform the hepatic functions that cleanse toxic wastes from the blood One of his lungs helped a woman who had been awaiting a transplant for a year; the other lung went to a woman who had spent five years with a lethal

The lung transplants were performed at Stanford University Hospital Saturday night, while the other organs were transplanted the same night into four patients at Pacific Presbyterian Medical Center in San Francisco.

The lung recipients, Mary Jane Anderson, 29, of Carlsbad in Southern California, and Patty Dirschl, 40, of Rancho Cordova, were reported in stable condition Monday.

The identities of the other patients at Pacific Presbyterian were not immediately available, but their conditions were all listed as "critical but stable."

.A. activists protest rain forest depletion

LOS ANGELES - Two dozen environmental activists protesting the depletion of the world's oxygen-producing rain forests demonstrated outside a Georgia-Pacific Corp. outlet, opposing wood imports allegedly handled there.

Activists called Monday's protest at the Canoga Park facility to promote a wished-for consumers boycott of lumber companies that import wood cut from tropical rain forests, said Robert Pendergast of the Rainforest Action Network.

Scientists have warned that depletion of tropical rain forests in South America and elsewhere could speed global warming and contribute to the destruction of numerous plant and animal spe-

Georgia-Pacific officials said the protest was misguided. Sheila Weidman, a company spokeswoman in Atlanta, said Georgia-Pacific uses rain forest lumber only as backing for plywood. Countries that provide rain forest lumber plant trees to by pushing on it.

replace those harvested, she added

Protesters, including members of the Earth First! organization, held 10-foot banners across the entrance to the facility.

Some wore colorful monster masks they said represented "demon killers" of trees, while others plastered themselves with mud to signify "oneness" with the Earth.

At one point, demonstrators tried to stop a truck from entering the property

The class was split into three groups and given the task of developing a camwithin the $2,000 budget that would lure students and their parents to buy the computers. Jordan said.

The campaign enlists the students as the salesperson," Jordan said.

Apple plans to track the progress of of campus computer salesman and should have the results in about two months, Jordan said

'One advantage of the program is that students are learning that they really have to work at selling, even after the initial campaign is complete," Jordan said, adding that the class will have to sell about 10 computers to break even.

Jordan hopes to continue the program next semester and has begun searching Silicon Valley for a sponsor, which he hopes will be a local high-tech firm.

The campaign involved advertise ments in the Spartan Daily that included a coupon for a free Macintosh apple grab bag.

Free stickers, posters, edible apples and Macintosh literature are being fered along with a drawing to win Macintosh accessories.

First Vietnam boat people forcibly returned to Hanoi

Vietnamese migrants were pulled from their beds by security forces before dawn and flown to Hanoi on Tuesday in Hong Kong's first forced repatriation of boat people. Vietnam accepted them but criticized the action.

British and colonial officials, ignoring last-minute pleas from the United States, Canada and the human rights group Amnesty International, said it was more humane to ship the Vietnamese home than to keep them "endles-

Some of the Vietnamese screamed for help and one woman waved her hands and cried, "I don't want to go back to Vietnam!"

Several thousand more will be returned within weeks, said Hong Kong television, quoting an unidentified Vietnamese Foreign Ministry official. A government statement said officials were considering using ships.

The British colony currently houses 56,000 Vietnamese in squalid camps where violence and malnutrition are rife. Among them, 44,000 are considered illegal immigrants and will be sent home unless they can prove they would face persecution in Vietnam. Hong Kong says the refugees have strained its Japan's Kyodo New Service in Tokyo quoted a Vietnamese Foreign Ainistry statement in Hanoi as saying Vietnam accepts voluntary returnees but will refuse flatly forced repatriation.

It said the Hong Kong action this "violates humanitarianism" but that the 51 Vietnamese returned against their will would be accepted.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the House of Commons in London that the forcible repatriation is "perfectly in order" and that countries which object should offer them a home.

Stanley Clinton Davis, chairman of the British Refugee Council, said forcible repatriation "must be condemned by all civilized opinion.

It said the boat people were accompanied by Hong Kong officials and that the expulsions occurred peacefully.

"In our view it is more humane to go ahead with the repatriation of those who have been through the whole process of screening and appeal than to leave them waiting endlessly in camps," it said.

A police convoy of seven trucks shipped the Vietnamese from the detention center to Kai Tak International Airport. About 200 police and corrections officers were involved in the operation.

The government statement said Vietnam has given the Hong Kong government "firm assurances that those returning would not be punished for having left clandestinely" and that their return would initially be monitored by the British Embassy in Hanoi.

It said it hoped the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees would watch their progress later. However, the U.N. group strongly opposes forced repatriation and has refused to take part in the operation.

More than 170,000 Vietnamese have flocked to Hong Kong since 1975, when North Vietnam seized control of South Vietnam following the U.S. withdrawal from the Vietnam War.

Whites will make up only 39 percent of the CSU student population by 2005.

This diverse mix of ethnic groups in California is a clear example of what America really is, Englemann says.

'That's the wonderful thing about living here (in San Jose)," says Englemann. "There's nowhere else on the face of the earth where we all live together - all different racial groups. It's amazing. It's like a permanent Nations...It's what America is all about.
