Relief funds by students 'for the students'

IRHA offers money for victims

By Laura DiMascio

A relief fund for Moulder Hall residents who lost belongings in the Oct. 19 fire has been organized by the SJSU Inter-Residence Hall Association.

According to IRHA president Dana Lee, the relief fund had received $970 in donations by Wednesday with the largest dona-tion being $100.

We receive the donations by mail so it takes a week or so for them to get here," Lee said.

The relief money received will be deposited into a separate account, Lee said, and it will not go through housing.

"All the money donated is going to replace the residents' belongings only and not to paint or anything to fix up the rooms," she said. "This fund was strictly made by the students for the students.

The relief money will be dispersed by a committee made up of three IRHA executives, including Lee, and eight volunteering hall representatives. Lee said they will decide how much each resident will receive based on individual need and where the money will be spent.

"Some of the money will first be going to dry cleaning of the residents' clothes to remove smoke and soot because right now that's where it is needed most.

University Police Department officials believe arsonists are to blame for the fire, that started on a third-floor couch that was put in front of the door to room 315.

Officials have said the suspects are students. No arrests had been made as of Thursday.

Lee said IRHA hopes to receive as many donations as possible to help the victims of the tragedy on Moulder's third floor.

According to University Housing Services, no exact estimates, in terms of dollars, will be made as to director of purchasing and logistical services, early smoke damage reports to student property are estimated at $4,000.

An ad hoc committee made up of Hill, Director of Housing Fred Najjar, Dean of Student Services Dean Batt and Associated Executive Vice President of Business Affairs Connie Sauer met Wednesday to discuss the process students will follow to file personal property claims. According to Najjar, the amount of damage that will be claimed is dependent on each stu-dent being able to see their belong-seen their belongings yet," he said. "Once they do file claims, we'll make them a high priority because we know the criticalness of getting them processed."

But some residents don't have renters' insurance and upon entrance into the residence halls they signed an agreement which states that SJSU's insurance policy exempts personal property losses from its coverage, so now they have to rely solely on what is donated.

According to Lee, many organizations have expressed interest in donating clothes, computers and assistance to the cause.

"One company called up and said they might donate IBM computers to students that lost theirs," she said. "A woman called and offered housing, and Parkview Elementary School is doing a

Steele overplayed personal observations in book, panel says

ial to the Daily

Panelists critique SJSU author Shelby Steele's book, "The Content of our Character" on Wednesday night in the Music Concert Hall.

By Anthony Cataido

English Associate Professor Shelby Steele's book was subjected to an intellectual gantlet by a ninemember panel made up of SJSU faculty and staff in the Music Hall Wednsday night.

If there was one common complaint, it was that Steele's "The Content of Our Character: A New Vision of Race in America" overplayed his personal opinions and observations without adequate research on racism and affirmative action. This prompted some metaphors to geveal the what they considered fallacies in Steele's reasoning.

Oscar Battle, SJSU health educator, likened Steele's book to forming an opinion on a hypothetical city by observations while driving through it rather than stepping out and talking to the people on the streets and asking questions.

'His analysis is at fault here,"

Battle said.

Steelc was invited to participate in the critique but declined, said Nadirah Ihsan, president of African Leaders Educating and Rising Together, which sponsored the event. Steele could not be reached for comment.

'I am an expert on my body," said Samuel Henry, associate dean of student services. "This doesn't make me a biologist or a doctor" or act as a warrant to "launch a discussion of health policy for this country," Henry said. Steven Millner, Afro-American studies chairman, suggested revising Steele's book title to "The Content of Steele's Character" or "Does Steele Have Intellectual Character.'

Many of the speakers were seething over how readily the media embraced Steele's ideas and saw it as subverting the ideals

Author missing from panel discussion

By Anthony Cataldo staff w

It seems the noticeable absence of Shelby Steele from the panel of speakers sponsored by African Leaders Educating and Rising Together wasn't because he didn't get an invitation.

"We wish he were here this evening," said mediator Nettye Goddard about Steele.

The Center for Literary Arts originally sponsored both Steele's public reading two weeks ago and a "reprise" follow-up panel discussion which Steele was invited to participate in. According to Alan Soldof-sky, Center for Literary Arts director, Steele backed down.

"We were not able to sponsor it (the critique) and him at the same time," Soldofsky said.

Steele gave the Center an ultimatum: Either they schedule his public reading without the critique follow-up or they cancel his appearance altogether, Soldofsky said. Steele could not be reached for comment.

With the media hype Steele's appearance was given, there was no other choice than to concede to Steele's wishes, Soldofsky said

"He took advantage of the shortness of time," Soldofsky said.

Steele's decision sent the Center scrambling for a new spon-sor. A.L.E.R.T. finally agreed to take up the slack.

Miller time for Event Center

A hough beggars can't be choosers, the financiallystrapped SJSU administration seems to be a bit picky about whom it will take money from.

For example, beer advertisements are not allowed in the Event Center. SUBOD officials have declined to display the ads at the new arena, though those ads would bring in much needed revenue.

This SUBOD policy may appear honorable and well-intentioned up front. Alcoholism is a problem and there can be a link made between the image portyayed by drinkers in such ads and the public's perception of booze. But the policy is hypocritical. Anyone 21 or older can buy beer inside the Event Center during athletic events.

So, patrons can't look at beer ads hanging from the rafters, but they can drink and look at the beer logos on the cups in their hands.

There are beer advertisements on all kinds of Spartan schedules and posters. One example is that prior to the 1990 football season, posters were available on campus with the football schedule printed on them. The top portion of the poster says "Miller Genuine Draft," then the middle shows the football schedule, and the bottom shows an open beer bottle and a cold brew in a mug.

What kind of message is the administration sending? Either they are for alcohol ads or they're not. Stop being so damn wishy-washy.

SJSU is one of only 17 Division I schools to sell beer at football games. Several other Big West schools sell beer as well. Obviously, these schools need the revenue generated by beer sales.

That is why banning beer banners at the Event Center is ludicrous. In times like these where cash for public universities is tight, extra revenue from such satellite operations such as the Event Center helps.

he bottom line is that the school needs money and it is not taking it when offered. If administration officials think that beer ads in the Event Center are going to cause more drinking, they should consider that most people here already know what beer is and what it does. Stop playing parent and take the money - we need it.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

'Fire drills wouldn't have helped a whole lot. In this case if you had done that (entered the hallway) you would have entered into an inferno.' - Tom de Bakker, State Fire Marshall, responding to a report that fire evacuation drills in Moulder Hall had not yet been conducted this semester.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Moulder no joke, view not shared, awareness needed

Sympathy needed

Editor,

It is probably without dispute that the Moulder Hall fire was a tragedy, but it doesn't seem to be enough of a tragedy to the Resident Advisers. I say this for two reasons.

First, the Loma Prieta earthquake. The R.A.'s wasted no time in printing up shirts paid something to the effect of "I love my job but it has it's faults." Fault is spelled in a disarray of capital letters. I'm sure anyone who lost a family member, lost home or business thought the shirt was really cute. I'm sure they can laugh when they see someone making jokes about the incident that killed their loved ones.

Second, A Joe West Hall resident was written up for jokes about the fire on his message board. Did this person write the jokes? No. Was he home to answer for himself? No. Did this stop the R.A.'s from punishing him? No! Perhaps the housing staff didn't think the fire was tragic enough. Only one floor of the building was destroyed. The quake caused billions in damage. The dorm students were only crippled and burned. The quake victims crushed to death

Maybe they feel only they an joke about death and destruction. If they try to tell us that Moulder Hall affects everyone here, so the jokes were in poor taste, do they expect us to believe that not one single person in the dorms was affected by the quake? They probably would, even though the majority of people you will meet in the dorms are from the Bay Area.

Well, sorry Moulder, you just didn't suffer enough. The R.A.'s won't make a funny shirt about you.

As we have seen, the R.A.'s punish for things people didn't write. I'm sure you will understand the nature of their pathetic hypocritical ways.

Mayor support

Editor.

I just wanted to make it clear that the support Arneze Washington has shown to Frank Fiscalini is by no means a reflection of the opinion of the Associated Students. The purpose of Associated Students is to support and aid the students. Our purpose is in no way to be associated with the endorsement of political candidates.

There are several board members and executives who are supporters of Susan Hammer so I feel it is important to note, for the record, that Arneze's support of Frank Fiscalini is a personal endorsement and by no means a reflection of his position as A.S. President.

Causing damage

Editor,

Gay, lesbian and bisexual awareness week is a necessary tool to educate the SJSU community. Carlo Ariani, your letter to the editor, "Gay Awareness Week is Absurd," Oct. 11, only proves how vitally useful a well organized and publicized gay, lesbian and bisexual event could be. 'Many people, including yourself" are in need of more education where this minority is concerned. The week was meant for you; it was not to make us "feel good."

The opposite of love an acceptance is not hate, it is apathy. You have cut a deeper wound by saying that you don't care about the problems of the gay community," than you would if you had said that "all gays are sick and disgusting." That apathy you possess makes it impossible for the gay community to change society's warped views of homosexuality.

An even greater tragedy is the company you are in. Not only is the entire heterosexuai population on this campus apathetic where gays are concerned, but so are the thousands of homosexuals on this campus who joined you in down-playing the week's events by not attending them. The greatest problem the homosexual community faces is apathy from within and here at SJSU this lack of involvement is keeping the discrimination and prejudice alive.

carry these discrimination and prejudicial values into the western political and social arena that continue to stifle the rights and privileges that gays deserve.

Carlo, you are unwittingly doing incredible damage by your words and the gay awareness week has missed its mark again.

> Jeffrey Draper Senior Theater Arts

Week prompted

Mr. Carlo Ariani, I find your letter, "Gay Awareness Week is Absurd," Oct. 11, completely ludicrous. Your insipid tone epitomizes the very mentality which prompts gay awareness week. You say that you already know "that homosexuals are people too and must be tolerated." What do you mean by tolerated? Are you implying that homosexuals are a worthless and wretched lot whom the American culture can not wholly embrace? Does tolerate mean that mainstream society should be charitable enough to not go around gay bashing? I'm not convinced that you even tolerate the gay community since you distinctly say that you don't care about its problems.

If you ask what the problem is, I answer that it is pure ignorance. Homosexuals are a legitimate part of society; ignorant people fail to see this. One of the solutions happens to be gay awareness week. Mr. Ariani, do not want to believe that you are ignorant. I would rather think that you are disgruntled. If you are simply not concerned wareness, then why attack it? with gay a But if you are going to start complaining about the lack of other awareness topics, do something about it. Have a Columbus Day party or, better yet, organize a bikini awareness week. Why not make use of your rights rather than sit around and write unprecedented critiques of something with positive intentions?

CAMPUS VOICE -STERLING HARWOOD Book poses false dilemma for minorities

I wish to expose a number of logical errors in Prof. Shelby Steele's arguments against affirmative action (AA, for short). In his speech on campus on Oct. 11, Steele claimed that, while he totally supports some weaker forms of AA - for which I applaud him, AA's "racial preferences" must lower standards for admission to college. But he poses a false dilemma. For example, using race as a tiebreaker to admit a black over a white with the same GPA and SAT score would not lower standards.

Further, selecting a black able enough to overcome the adversity of poverty and racism to score only slightly lower than a white from a privileged background need not lower standards. The SAT has a margin of error of 130 points, and it never takes into account the underprivileged background of many minorities who take the test. And it never recognizes that whites can more often afford to take preparation courses for the SAT that cost hundreds of dollars and increase the scores but not the merit of whites. AA taking the different conditions of the test into account is a way to recognize the superior merit of blacks who score slightly lower under much more adversity t han whites face. The price of liberty is eternal vigilance.

Steele contradicted himself in urging blacks to be self-interested and seize opportunities available but to reject the opportunities to attend college that AA's "racial preferences" make available to them.

Steele says the high dropout rate for blacks (70 percent) should lead blacks to call for an end to AA's "racial preferences" and thus to reject the opportunities to attend college such preferences provide. But this contradicts Steele's emphasis on hard work and individualism, two values he and I share

Instead, Steele seeks to ban AA's "racial preferences" and paternalistically deprive blacks, allegedly for their own good, of the right to make their own individual choices about whether attending college is in their individual self-interest. Anyway, even for those who drop out, since some college education is better than none, Steele is denying the commonsense observation that half a loaf is better than none.

Steele posed another false dilemma in assuming the higher black dropout rate involves the personal failure of blacks. Dropping out need not be flunking out. Indeed, since the average black family makes only 55 percent of what the average white family makes, there are greater financial pressures on qualified blacks to quit school in order to take a job that helps meet pressing financial needs. And this greater poverty pressures blacks disproportionately to work at other jobs so much while attending school that their grades suffer. These are not simply personal failures; they are failures of our economic and educational system. Steele underemphasizes or overlooks flaws of the system and relies too much on his personal anecdotes, which he admits are "subjective", to make hasty generalizations about what choices are best for literally millions of other people.

Club Oasis hopes to 'See you in Hell'

By Stave Helmer

Whether you've lived a life of what it's sin or not, you can see what it's like in hell

The Club Oasis celebrates Halloween by throwing a monster bash filled with spooks, costumes and prizes. What title is more ap-"We'll See You in Hell." The evening will feature two types of entertainment: dancing and art-fashion. There will be a costume contest, demonic drink specials and fire and brimstone. 'It's a real evil theme," Oasis

Promotions Director Machiko said. "It's hell-oriented."

Prizes will be given to costume contest winners. The three major rewards that will be given away are: $666, a car phone and a car stereo.

"There's going to be some in-teresting decorations," Machiko said. "It won't exactly be a haunted house. But there will be things going on throughout the club all night."

Disc jockey Julius Papp will spin a modern format, as he does every Wednesday. But Michiko said Papp will be able to get away with a few surprises, since it is Halloween.

acid-scarred The infamous phantom hunts down his prey on Halloween night as F/X The Club presents its rendition of the play "Phantom of the Opera" in "Phantom: A Masquerade Ball" on Halloween night.

Roger Fojas plays the Phantom who pursues the young, ambitious opera star, Christine (Bronwyn Morales) in a scene where the two sing together, and the Phantom goes mad and chokes the woman he loves

The production begins at 11 p.m., followed by an unmasking of the crowd at midnight accompanied by free champagne. F/X will also host a costume contest on Wednesday night. The costume categories are best cos-tume, best mask design, most origmost offensive and sexiest. F/X will fly the grand prize winner to Los Angeles and pay for his/her hotel and air fare, plus tickets to see "Phantom of the Opera" at the Music Center in Los Angeles.

Other winners will receive prizes like dinners for two, a night and dinner at the Red Lion and theater tickets

'It's kind of a theater theme, said Phil Mareska of F/X. "We'll get creative with the prizes.

Tickets are available at Bass/Ticket Master and at the Underground at 371 South First Street for $8 in advance, or $10 at the door. F/X will supply masks for patrons who do not have costumes.

Before the Halloween Phantom party, F/X brings the '60s and '70s fashions back to life in "Hippy Chicks & Polyester," a fashion show commemorating psychedelic garb. The show starts at 11:30 p.m. and runs tonight and Saturday. General admission is $5, and the doors open at 9 p.m.

Mareska believes F/X presents fashion shows and productions because night-life seekers want more than a drink and an easy date. "Coming into the '90s, some people are looking for a more varied entertainment," he said. " They're not drinking as much and not having sex with strangers.

Mardi Gras Masquerade puts twist on costuming

Daily staff write Ghosts and goblins will hobrob with Southern belles in a New Orleans-style Halloween bash Saturday night at the downtown Pavilion Shops. The Masquerade Mardi Gras, a 4 1/2 hour celebration to benefit the 1991 San Jose Jazz Festival, is the creation of Mark and Scott Montoya and Bruce Labadie.

The three met last year on the board of directors of the San Jose Jazz Society and immediately put their talents together to bring Los Lobos, a rock band with Latin flavor, to San Jose State last May.

Their latest production, the Masquerade Mardi Gras, promises to be a night of traditional Southern splendor. "We wanted to try something different, a switch from the typical said Mark Halloween party,"

Montoya, a graduate of SJSU The shops, located across from the Fairmont Hotel, will be fenced off. The inside will boast a New Orleans-style street scene with Cajun food, drinks and plenty of entertainment.

Traditional Mardi Gras garb isn't necessary to enjoy the party. But there will be a costume contest for the most outrageous and the best Mardi Gras costume--with prizes such as trips to New Orleans and Rio de Janeiro.

Tickets are $10 and can be purchased at the door, or in advance through the department of journalism and mass communications, to benefit the student chapter of the Business Professional Advertising Association. Call 924-3240 or 295-6099 for more information.

Any avid horror film fan who has seen the original "Night of the Living Dead" would probably agree that the black and white 1968 horror flick was destined to be a cult classic.

Now in 1990, those flesh-eating zombies have crept back onto the screen, but this time the acting is what's dead.

Adding color and a few twists to the retelling, creators George Romero and John Russo combined a new cast, script and array of special effects to the grotesque and slightly dark humorous re-make released Oct. 18.

However, the remake and its changes lack the mystique and eerie lifelessness of the classic. and scenes that were originally meant to be shocking and terrifying are now, if anything, just funny.

"Night of the Living Dead" is the story of seven people trying to fend off zombies while barricaded in a Victorian farm house. The reason for the revived dead is never really made clear although sive leader of the group taking disease and radiation from an charge of the frantic situation, and Patricia Tallman as "Barbara," the weak and timid girl who, through Ben's prompting. becomes the strongest member of the group. Todd, who is the only convincing cast member, pulls off the part of Ben in a way comparable to the talents of the original.

The other cast members, even though the majority of their costars are dead, lack the energy needed to take charge. In this version it's safe to say that the zombies and their make up artists are the real stars

From gunshot and stab wounds to autopsy scars, each one is dismembered, gruesome and gory to morbid perfection and display a variety of ways that they met their unfortunate demise.

The new film keeps much of the original dialogue and the same basic theme of man's inability to communicate, as shown both in the group trying to survive and in the reactions to the new society of the walking dead, but doesn't do it with as much flavor as the first.

Barbara's transition from the shy, introverted girl to the head-strong, modern day, "Rambo" woman is hard to take seriously as she knocks off zombies with her double-barreled rifle.

The Santa Clara County Victim/Witness Office, a non-profit organization, has also offered assistance in filing claims for state reimbursement of the student's medical expenses. According to Claims Specialist Supervisor Margaret Joseph, this is possible because it has been determined from the University Police Department that the fire was a crime. She said the state has a victim restitution fund providing an applicant with up to $46,000 in a crime related incident.

Joseph said applicants' eligibility depends on cooperation with the police, proving that they were not involved in any illegal activity at the crime and not did not contribute to the crime.

city neighborhoods. A downgrade could allow the eventual closure of the street.

That same year, the A.S. board of directors created a special task force for the cause and hired a consultant, Paul Sonneman, for $500 per week, to coordinate.

The group was allocated $1,200 in funds to campaign to close the street, but a door-to-door canvas and a letter writing campaign failed due to a lack of student volunteers, Sonneman told the Spartan Daily in organizations act on their support. "Without individual people there, our efforts are worthless," she said. SJSU officials have been trying to close San Carlos Street since 1984. Officials have said closure would unify the campus and make the street safe for the more than 10,000 people that cross it daily. City planning staff has recom-mended that the "major collector" designation be lifted from the street,

The presentations picked apart selected passages from Steele's book and almost always deemed them shallow interpretations drawn out of insufficient knowledge. Steele's adversarial stance on affirmative action also incited heated criticisms.

Addressing the 70 percent dropout rate for black students that Steele uses to debunker college recruiting practices, assistant philosophy professor Sterling Har-wood asked "Wouldn't it hurt just as much if you never got the chance to attend college?"

"It seems unfair to weaken affirmative action, then criticize it,' Harwood said referring to the Reagan and Bush administrations.

The panel resented the condescending tone of Steele's remarks

There will be answers for questions such as what are they finding from all those pictures satellites send back, what can we learn from that that will help our world, are there things there useful for us," Grant said.

A large number of SJSU students will also participate in this program and their area will be in demonstrating wind tunnels, flight simulacould take place possibly as early as next semester, to further study the impact of the closure.

According to city records, SJSU asked that an amendment to the city's general plan, Horizon 2,000, be considered in 1984, 1985 and 1986. The deferment in 1986 was mainly to allow time for a complete analysis of the traffic problems the closure would cause. The council also wanted SJSU to show good faith intentions by securing funds for the proposed San Carlos Street pedestrian mall and finishing landscaping on Seventh and Ninth streets.

Currently Ninth Street is not landscaped and is full of make-shift faculty offices.

Seventh Street landscaping began last summer with the construction of a plaza with private funds.

According to Lori Stahl, public information officer, the approxi-mately $3 needed to complete Sev-enth and Ninth street landscaping and the San Carlos pedestrian mall will be provided by some private funds, but is largely contingent to the passage of Proposition 143, which is a $450 million bond act for construction at California higher education institutions.

SJSU has sponsored an environmental impact report, which studied the impact of the proposed closure. The city hired the CH2M Hill engineering firm to compile the report, which found that noise and traffic congestion would not be significantly increased. It did predict that there would be more traffic during the morning commute at Eleventh and San Carlos streets.

she said.

Arneze Washington, Associated Students president, was careful not to reveal his opinions of Shelby Steele but told the audience that Steele's book is untenable in the social sciences.

"This book is nothing more than the opinion of a gentleman, namely Shelby Steele." The "reappraisal" of Steele's book reached a crescendo during the final speech by Henry, who is notorious for physically defacing E.D. Hirsch's book "Cultural Literacy: What Every American Needs to Know." This time he spared the book's hide, but not its content.

"We recognize that Steele's argument is disinformation. . .whimsy after one knows the facts," he said. "Mr. Steele, my brother, you need to abandon that ship."

Daily staff writer Saturday's Eagle Flight Avia-tion/Aerospace Fair at SJSU's avia-tion department facilities has all the elements of a science fiction novel only it's for real.

The fair's goal is to provide both educational and recreational activity to promote aviation and aerospace careers and sciences. Activities start at 9 a.m. at SJSU's aviation facilities on the west side of the San Jose International Airport

Although the fair will focus on teaching new ideas in science for teachers, parents and general public, perhaps the biggest beneficia-ries of this exhibition will be the children.

"We feel strongly that children should have a basic background in aviation and space because it is part of the modern world," said Fran Grant, chairwoman of the aerospace education committee. "Parents and teachers should be aware and able to respond to their children's questions."

Children will have the opportunity to see samples of moon rocks, and teachers who register will be able to obtain those samples on loan for their schools.

The lunar samples are encased in acrylic fiber to prevent them from rusting.

Although this material is not dangerous, teachers will be instructed how to use it.

Walt Prouty, a representative of

NASA and Lockheed will show how a pressure suit is used in space flights

Also, Lockheed requested a 20by-30 foot space where they are going to have 2,000 cases of lithographs, posters and telescope kits — as well as 1,000 inflatable models of World War II era bombers, which will be given away to the kids.

The fair was put together by Eagle Flight Team I, which is com-posed of teachers, pilots and airport managers from San Mateo and

Santa Clara Counties. Other sponsors include the Cali-fornia Association for Aerospace Education, Caltrans division of aeronautics, San Jose Airport Association, Young Astronaut Chapter Leaders-CAAE, NASA and Santa Clara Valley Ninety-Nines, an international organization of women pilots. The fair will host several workshops, guest speakers and exhibitors

One of the speakers scheduled is Representative Norman Mineta (D-San Jose).

"If congress is adjourned we'll have congressman Norman Mineta, but they are still working on the budget," Grant said.

Astronaut Steven Hawley, a veteran of three space flights, will be one of the speakers.

Among the issues that will be considered are adjustment to the weightless world and medical information on space-related isques, such as space sickness. in those areas. "Eventually we are going to nave

Men's volleyball club begins workouts

By Bryan Gold

Informal workouts are underway for the men's volleyball club as potential team members prepare for the tryout Dec. 4

Second-year head coach Don Petrilli is using this time to get a look at players for the upcoming

He said that while anyone who wants to play does not have to at-tend the workouts, he recommends that players participate now

'If I know a player for six weeks, I know what he can do and what he can't do. The advantage to playing now is in learning the systems and how the team operates.

"If a player comes out on Dec. 4, he must be a great player hands down before I will take him over someone who has been here. But, that is possible," Petrilli said.

Playing in the Northern Califor-nia Collegiate Volleyball League, SJSU finished 18th in the nation last year (of approximately 300 teams) with an overall record club of 13-12. The team competed at Dave Emigh, Brian Micheletti,

As for this year, California and Fresno State, in the same division last year as SJSU, are ranked first eighth nationally in recent and Volleyball Monthly polls.

While he is hopeful on improving on last year's record ("you don't ever want to count your chickens," he said), Petrilli said that he is looking for a player to help the men's club team improve overall

'We look for athletic ability,'' he said. "We have the time to develop a player so we want a hard working player with a good attitude and a willingness to be coached.

He added that he is also looking for a player that has size, jumping ability and quickness.

Petrilli said that many of those players have what he is looking for because expected to return from last year's squad are outside hitters

However, Petrilli cautiously warned, "we don't reserve any spots. Every player has to compete for a spot on the team. But I won't not take those players because they don't work hard. Those guys are the hardest workers'

'It makes it more competitive." Ladrillono said. "The idea is to put together the best possible team.

We will have more strength off of the bench." Middendorp said. We will have a strong 12 guys on the varsity team.

Petrilli added that with the interest in playing, he is able to get a good look at many of the players because of the turnout at each practice 'We usually get around 20 guys out there," he said. "But, some don't show up on Tuesdays and some don't show up on Thursdays because of school.

Petrilli said that he stresses education, not only of volleyball but also academics, to his players. "Education comes first." he said. "Volleyball is a very low paying sport and I don't want volleyball to slow these guys down from graduating from school." For the SJSU men's volleyball club as a whole, the desire is "to have the school think of us as the only men's volleyball team rep-resenting San Jose State." according to Petrilli. For the players who want to play in the spring, the

The Spartans return home to face Big West Conference foe Santa Barbara at Spartan Stadium on Sunday at 2 p.m. SJSU is currently 1-5 in Big West conference play.

The two teams met earlier this season in Santa Barbara where the Gauchos scored a goal with 1:40 left in the second overtime to give them a 1-0 victory

In that game, the Spartans had two chances to score in the 85th minute but failed to do so. SJSU head coach Gary St. Clair picked up a yellow card from the officials and said, "when you play in some places. Santa Barbara being one of them, you know that you are playing against 12 people

Football players busy despite a bye this week

By Paul Wheaton

While many students spend Saturday recovering from Friday and preparing for that night's folly, college football players spend their Saturday inficting and receiving pain.

This Saturday will be different for the Spartans - they don't have a game. It has been five years since the SJSU football team has had a weekend off in the middle of the season

For the first time this semester the football team will be able to do what so many other students have been able to do on the weekendrelax

Sheldon Canley, the nations top all-purpose runner, plans to visit his family

'I'm going home to Lompoc to see my mother and I'll spend some time in Santa Barbara with my grandmother," Canley said.

Family is a common theme for the team this weekend. "I'm going to my son's birthday

While many of the players plan on relaxing, offensive lineman Peni losefa is much more serious. 'I'm going to workout, do some

Tenth-ranked Colorado has won

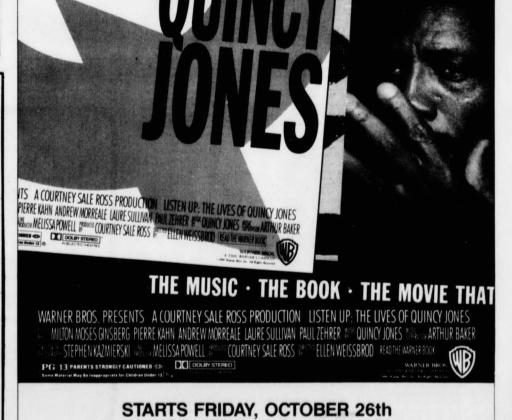

The Sooners soared to No. 4 before losing to Texas and Iowa State, which beat Oklahoma for the first time since 1961. Colorado, the defending Big Eight champion, fell to No. 20 after starting the season 1-1-1. But the Buffaloes have climbed back into the Top 10 with consecutive victories over Texas, Washington, Missouri, Iowa State and Kansas.

Oklahoma needs a victory at Boulder to stay in contention for the conference title, while Colorado is trying to keep pace with co-leader Nebraska. The Buffaloes and Cornhuskers are 3-0, a game ahead of the 2-1 Sooners

Last year. Colorado beat Okla-homa 20-3 to snap a 12-game losing streak against the Sooners. This time. Oklahoma will be the one trying to stop a losing streak. The Sooners haven't lost three straight since the end of the 1965 season

Colorado has already been tested by one of the toughest schedules in the country. The Buffaloes tied No. 11 Tennessee, lost to No. 5 Illinois and beat No. 7 Washington and No. 13 Texas. They also defeated Stanford, the only team to beat Notre Dame this season.
