Scheller house gets demolition reprieve

Restraining order extended until Nov. 10

By Joanne Griffith Domingue

Scheller house, the 1904 building on San Carlos and Fifth streets, received another reprieve Friday when the temporary restraining order against its demolition was extended to Nov. 10.

San Jose State University wants to use the Scheller lot for a new science building and would like to have the house

Carlos Street construction. The San Jose Preservation Action Council wants the house saved. They filed a restraining order Sept. 20 stopping demolition.

Judge Jeremy Fogel of the Santa Clara County Superior Court is moving cautiously. Once the house is gone, "You can't go back and fix it," he said.

"It's like a death penalty." Fogel granted the twoweek extension to allow removed during the San the Preservation Action Fogel acknowledged that the university is harmed by extending the date of his decision. Demolition will cost an additional $20,000 because of the increased difficulty of working around the San

Political rally ends with assault charge

Speaker contends Republicans violated his free speech rights

By Michelle Maitre

Last Monday's Republican political rally, at which Republican Senatorial Candidate Michael Huffington was scheduled to speak, did not exactly go as planned.

First, Huffington, the guest of honor, pulled no-show and sent his father, Roy Huffington, as proxy. Then, following the rally, guest speaker Lyle Smith filed a battery report against a rally organizer.

Smith claimed Ed Rowen, president of San Jose State University's chapter of the College Republicans, struck him and forced him off the podium because Rowen did not like Smith's message

'That guy's a nut. That's goofy Lyle Smith. He got up there and endorsed the American Independent Party, wellknown as a neo-Nazi organization.'

Ed Rowen

During his speech, Smith, a Republican candidate for the Congressional District, which covers parts of Central and East San Jose and Morgan Hill, said he did not endorse Gov. Pete Wilson in the upcoming election. Instead, Smith endorsed Jerry McCready, American the Independent

Party candidate. Smith alleged Rowen and rally Master of Ceremonies David Neighbors violated his First Amendment right to free speech by forcing him from the podium in the Student Union Amphitheater. Smith also alleged Rowen struck him. Smith filed a battery report with the University Police Monday evening, said University Police Department Lt. Bruce Lowe.

"It took place from behind me," Smith said of the incident, "I was in deep concentration on my speech. All of a sudden, (Neighbors) was on my left reaching around me and grabbing the microphone. Simultaneously, force. I had a chance to glance at his face and

Budget crunch affects Greek system

By Cindy Trotter

Individual students are not the only ones feeling the budget crunch. So are large organizations, including the Greek system.

According to Alpha Phi President Michelle Swander, the last two years have been difficult for sororities on

"When tuition was $200 or $300 people could still pay (for sororities), even if they couldn't live in," Swander said. "Now that tuition is up to $1,000 and has almost tripled in four years they don't have the extra $600 they once had to pay for the Greek system.

"I feel joining a fraternity or sorority is a financial commitment - not a financial burden," Alpha Omicron Pi President Linda Paul said. "I don't think it's a huge cost to pay.'

To maintain ceiling (house totals) all six of the sorority houses on campus need to have 65 members and, es on campus who are at ceiling.

"The Greek system is something people don't want to be a part of right now," Paul said. "People have less time because of college studies or because people are working and they don't have time to give to a separate organization."

According to Interfraternity Council President Jonathan Polanich, this is not a Harvard situation where par-

American Music Week opens November with contemporary music appreciation

By Tim Schwalbach

Craig Bohmler and Richard Aldag, San Jose State University music professors, have something in common with George Gershwin, Leonard Bernstein, Irving Berlin and Aaron Copland. They are all composers of American music.

American Music Week, celebrated annually during the first week of November, is a weeklong national celebration of music by composers in the service organization in New York, created the concept of American Music Week.

United States. In 1985, the American Music Center, a national nonprofit

The Center has promoted the recognition, performance and appreciation of American contemporary music through information services, library, publications and copying assistance programs. Organizations and endowments help support the Center's causes.

Dr. Janet Averett, associate professor of music, and Craig Bohmler presented an Almost All-American Music Week. The "almost" refers to the Spanish songs composed by pianist

Technically speaking, language skills count

Nancie Gruber

Here in Silicon Valley and across the country, math, science and technical skills are emphasized as being critical to the future of the United States and its people.

In a world where the mastery of high technology has become the standard by which success is measured, the art, beauty and importance of language seem to have been lost.

Yet every day we're judged by our language skills. Some people know us only through telephone conversations or via the written word. They have no way to evaluate our level of intelligence except through our communication skills.

If you think language skills are unimportant, let me relate a couple of stories that may change your mind.

When I worked at Hewlett-Packard, we always had send-offs for employees who were leaving the division or the company.

Several years ago, one of the cost accountants was transferring to Idaho, and his department manager sent out a memo telling people where and when to gather for the going-away cake and gift presentation. The gift was a commemorative plaque.

The memo said, "The plague will be given to Ken Friday at afternoon break." Hmmm...I don't think he's going to like that.

The word "plague" wasn't just a slip of the fingers, either. The manager used it in the memo three times

I admit I had a good laugh. So did the rest of the people in the department and several managers from other functional areas.

Do you want a lot of people laughing at your expense? I don't think so.

Another example of why language skills are important comes from one of my own managers at HP, who often told us the most important thing an employee can bring to a job is education.

She inculcated us weekly with her favorite expression, "On a scale of one to 10, education is

Then she turned around and wrote memos that contained grammatical errors and misspellings. Once, after hiring a new male employee, she sent out a memo that said he had graduated from the "University of Perdue."

The personnel department may have had a little trouble tracking down his transcripts.

Although my boss was highly educated, anyone who knew her only through the written word could have judged her as illiterate.

Her lack of care for the language diminished the high regard I had for her technical knowledge. Understanding the "technobabble" just isn't enough if you want the respect of others.

Granted, it's not possible to know everything about the grammar, syntax, spelling and intricacies of any language — especially English and its myriad exceptions to every rule.

But how can we expect to compete in the global economy if we don't even try to master our own

Bible consistently explicit about gay sin

Dear Editor:

I'm commenting on Michael Danner's article about homosexuality from a Christian perspec-

First, let me say that the gay issue is a controversial topic in society and in some confused churches, but it is certainly not controversial according to the Holy Bible.

Homosexuality is a sin from a Christian point of view even if gay people deny that the Biblical Sodom story is not about gay sin (although the destruction of the city was about gay sin, but the point is that being gay is a sin).

There are other verses in the Bible where God is also more than clear about the gay son the strength to turn away lifestyle, as he states in Leviticus 18:22: "You shall not lie with a male as with a woman; it is an abomination.

Also in Romans 1:27, God says: "For this reason God gave them (homosexuals) up to dishonorable passions. Their women exchange natural relations for unnatural and the men likewise gave up natural relations with women and were consumed with passion for one another, men committing shameless acts with men and receiving in their own persons the due penalty for their error.'

I want to point out though, that God hates homosexuality but loves the homosexual; he is always there to give the gay perfrom his sin when he decides to.

On the other hand, God also permits us to make decisions that are contrary to his will because he gives us the choice to love him or not.

If indeed gay people want to love Jesus then they should obey his word just as Danner said, "Words don't do it. Our actions are what counts.'

If they choose otherwise, then they can't continue committing acts against God and identify themselves as Christians at the same time.

Three strikes deters, regardless of race

Dear Editor:

In regard to the letter dealing with Proposition 184, it must be pointed out that minorities, specifically Blacks and Hispanics, make up a large part of the prison population because they commit a large part of the crime.

It is true that the proposition "supports California's intent on locking up a targeted group of society." That group is the section of society that commits

If you are White and a repeat offender you also can join this group.

I am a Mexican-American who was convicted of a felony some years ago. Upon sentencing I was told that if I ever committed the same crime or any other felony after my release from jail, I would be given seven years and eight months more of prison time.

I could of complained that they were picking on me because I was a Mexican, but I didn't. However, I did take them

That is not to say I didn't get into any more trouble, but it does mean I was very careful not to commit any more felonies.

The fear of having to spend five to eight years in prison was enough of a deterrent. I think that the fear of facing 25 years-to-life may deter others regardless of their race.

Moderation key to knocking on wood

I'm somewhat superstitious, I admit it.

The other day while eating lunch with a friend, I accidentally spilled salt all over the table. Automatically, I grabbed a hand-full of grains and threw it over my left shoulder.

It wasn't something I particularly thought about, it just sort of happened, like any natural

Although I don't cringe at the sight of a black cat or stay indoors on Friday the 13th, I do make sure I say "gesundheit" when a friend sneezes and I always avoid walking under ladders, when possible.

Superstitions, beliefs or notions which attempt to explain the unexplainable, are based on neither reason nor fact and have no logical foundation in society

They are merely mysterious, even entertaining, remnants of man's ignorant past. A past which relied heavily on religion and supernatural beliefs to explain the unknown and the misunderstood.

According to Carole Potter's book "Knock on Wood," almost every modern superstition can be traced back to ancient civilizations.

During Roman times, if someone broke a mirror or reflective, shiny surface, people believed they were actually injuring their own soul or their "other self." They believed bad luck would rule them for a period of seven years, the amount of time they believed it took to renew life.

The only way to break the cycle of bad luck, they believed, was to bury the pieces of the mir-

Shelley Spackman

staff reporter

During the Middle Ages, black cats were believed to be the mascot for witches. If one crossed your path, it was a sign that Satan had been taking notice of you.

During the days of the Druids, people began using the concept of knocking on wood to ward off punishment for bragging. People believed that if you pointed out your good fortune to the evil spirits, they would be jealous and take it away; so they knocked on wood.

Today, modern society has adapted these and other superstitions into everyday life.

Many people are still habitually fearful of black cats, cross their fingers for good luck or knock on wood to avoid retribution.

Most public buildings even avoid labeling the thirteenth floor.

Although some people can go overboard with their superstitious beliefs, most believers, who treat superstitions as the innocent notions which they are, can find them entertaining, even helpful.

When performed in moderation, superstitions can take the fear out of the unknown and give believers the small glimmer of hope, luck, or peace of mind for which they are searching.

After all, if believing in a harmless, unswerving belief can make life a little easier, what's wrong with that?

Brown supports future of universities Students must not let narrow-

Dear Editor:

The Republicans don't want you to vote this Nov. 8. They know that if college students don't vote they can keep raising your registration fees and offer you fewer and larger classes.

You don't have to sit idly by and wait for things to happen. You can make a difference and save our public universities. Vote for Democrat and friend of education, Kathleen Brown.

California has entered its fifth year of budget cuts. College students have been forced to bear the burden of the state's financial troubles.

Not only are college students paying more for less education - they're taking longer to do it. The average CSU student takes 5.5 years to graduate. Students must juggle the demands of work, family, school and studies while coping with rising fees and overcrowded classes.

minded and short-sighted politicians bankrupt our state's future. You have the opportunity this election to do something about the future of our universi-At the same time, you will be voting for a candidate who has a plan too bring jobs to California when she is elected. Brown has committed herself to stopping the fee increases and restoring the CSU budget. Under the Pete Wilson administration registration fees have increased dramatically (88 percent). Kathleen Brown will help restore the California dream of access to affordable, quality education for all.

Students are our greatest resource and our greatest hope. The CSU system alone adds over $4.5 billion to California's economy through payroll and purchases of goods and services. This is nearly double the CSU's budget of $2.3 billion. Sounds like a pretty good investment.

Once the economy recovers from its temporary downturn, where will we be? In the global economy, education is the key to investment in a productive future.

We need to stop the fee increases. We need to make a college education more affordable and available. We need to increase the numbers of professors and classes. Brown will certainly do more for our state than Pete Wilson. He had his chance.

Now let's give Brown a chance to turn this state around. For our future and for our universities, vote for Picking up trash gave one fraternity member a new view on life, one from the gutter.

"I never noticed how dirty everything is until now," said Niki Naumchik, a sophomore sociology major. "It's so sad."

But Naumchik said it could have been worse. "Imagine if this was Philadelphia, New York City or San Francisco?" she asked.

She also got a new perspective on students' eating habits.

"People eat out - lots of Taco Bell and McDonald's wrappers, but we're next to the dorms," Naumchik said. "What does that say about San Jose State eating habits?"

Shirley said one of the reasons the fraternity decided to do a campus cleanup is to motivate other people to get involved.

"We are modeling behavior I would like other people to do," she said. "I want to live in a clean campus environment.

At least one resident appreciated the fraternity's efforts.

San Salvador Street resident Karen Clementi said the cleanup was "cool. That's a real nice thing to do. It's getting better and better to live around here."

At the end of the cleanup.

the fraternity had collected 30 large plastic bags of trash, including 40 pounds of aluminum cans and bottles that will be recycled.

Among the food wrappers, cigarette butts and beer bottles, the fraternity also picked up a spoon, one pair of black shoes, a spark plug, hair brush, a pair of panties and one condom still in its wrapper.

And one seashell.

Economy still remains strong

WASHINGTON (AP) economy surged ahead at a 3 1 percent annual rate in the third quarter, practically assuring another increase in short-term interest rates soon.

The Commerce Department said today that most of the larger-than-expected expansion in the quarter that ended Sept. 30 was due to accelerated consumer spending. It advanced at a 3.1 percent rate, more than double the gain in the previous quarter and the biggest increase since a 6.4 percent jump in the fourth quarter last year.

Analysts said in advance of the report they expected a 2.8 percent growth rate in gross domestic product. They predicted that even that relatively moderate advance would be enough to persuade the Federal Reserve to raise interest rates next month to check possible inflation.

Fearing the economy is heating up, financial markets had nervously awaited today's GDP report, which measures the total output of goods and services produced in the United States.

Right now the economy is exceeding the speed limit. We're going to get some more tickets in the form of higher interest rates.

Sung Won Sohn

Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan has suggested that the optimum growth rate after inflation is 2.5 percent. The economy boomed ahead at a 6.3 percent rate for the last three months of 1993, slowed to 3.3 percent in the first quarter and picked up speed to close out the second quarter at 4.1 percent.

Also, analysts have said they expect the economy is gaining momentum in the current fourth quarter with many expecting a strong Christmas shopping season. Still, inflation appears to remain under control. One gauge of inflation tied to the GDP actually declined in the third quarter, to 2.7 percent from 2.9 percent the previous three months.

The economic recovery is more than 3 1/2 years old and has surprised many observers by its continued strength despite five interest rate increases by the Federal Reserve since February.

"Right now the economy is exceeding the speed limit. We're going to get some more tickets in the form of higher interest rates," said economist Sung Won Sohn of Norwest Corp., a Minneapolis bank.

In the second quarter, much of the robust expansion was due to a big buildup in inventories that analysts said could be a drag on the economy if consumer spending slows.

But a series of reports in recent weeks, confirmed by today's data, suggested that interest rates have not slowed spending appreciably - particularly for cars and homes. Today's report is a preliminary estimate and will be revised in the months ahead.

As a coach, Craig Choate has done well, leading the San Jose State University women's volleyball team to a 27-20 record during the past one and one-half seasons. But as a fortune-teller, he stinks.

Conference match against the University of Nevada at Reno, Choate said, "I hope we survive the match. Everyone is hurt. We're in a little bit of trouble."

The Spartans then took the court and beat the visiting Wolf Pack 15-6, 15-6 and 15-5 to improve their record to 11-7 overall and 7-5 in conference play. The Wolf Pack fell to 8-15. and 4-10.

"I was surprised as anyone else in the arena," Choate said after the match. "Our kids played well. It's the best match I've seen for teamwork.

Spartan outside hitter Kami Schmedding said teamwork kept the Wolf Pack off balance. "I would say we neutralized them because we spread the sets around tonight," she said. We kept their blockers guess-

Spreading the offense worked for the Spartans as they hit .290 for the match compared to the Wolf Pack's minus .020. Hitting average in women's volleyball is the equivalent to batting average in baseball.

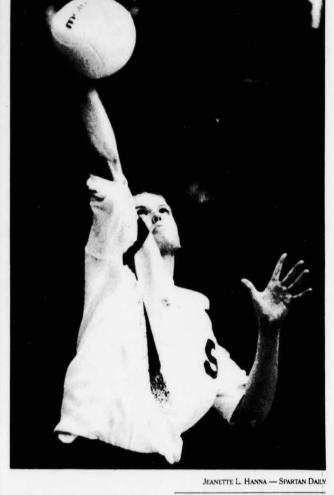

"If you look at the hitting statistics, our two middle blockers (Tanya Hart and Cristin Rossman) both went off, hitting .571 and .444 - that's pretty scary," Choate said.

Choate said he thought injuries would prevent the Spartans from playing well. All six starters and the reserves who get playing time are all hampered by ailments, from sore knees and bad backs to stiff shoulders.

"We're two-thirds through the season and everyone is taking a beating," he said. "We talked about sucking it up. What else can you do?"

Hart, who has a bad back and knee, said that's what the Spartans did Friday night.

"We're really hurting, but we put our injuries and aches behind us," she said. "We have goals - 20 wins and the playoffs. We have to go out and beat teams, no ifs, ands or buts."

Spartan hockey team hammers Long Beach

By Jim Seimas

Defenseman Keith Shore and the rest of the San Jose State University ice hockey team had a battle on its hands, even while leading 9-0 against Cal State Long Beach.

The Spartans, three-time defending Pacific Coast Hockey Association state champions, are continually

"We were hoping the ice wouldn't melt or they'd kick our butt," said Spartans center Greg Bruins.

"Yeah, we're not to good at playing hockey in a swimming pool," chimed Mike Bruins, Greg's brother, and SJSU's goaltender.

In the net, Bruins went into the game with a goalsagainst-average of 1.73. He Shore was one of four Spartan skaters battling for a hat trick (three goals) during a 12-1 blowout over the visiting 49ers at the Ice Centre on Saturday.

Forwards Jake Avis, Tony Destro and Brent Faulhaber all had two goals, when Shore delivered a shot past Long Beach goalie Jiro Wada late in the third period to earn the hat trick.

"It went down to the very end. Everyone was going for it," Shore said. "The forwards gave me some set ups."

Wada was pulled after Shore's goal gave the Spartans (5-3) a 10-0 lead. Long Beach (0-1) goal-tenders faced 58 shots and recorded 46 saves.

"(Wada) is the key to our team right now. Our team is structured around him," said Long Beach Coach Steve Bumbar. "Our strategy was defense. We knew after the second period, we were going to change our strategy, regardless of the outcome.

Bumbar was pleased with his 49ers trailing 4-0 heading into the third, especially since his team has had only three opportunities on the ice heading into the game.

Some of Bumbar's off-ice training for his team entails his team getting into a swimming pool with their sticks. This helps the team practice balance, while facing water resistance in practicing slap scored. The one shot was the least number ever in SJSU's four-year history. Faulhaber, aside from producing a game-high five points (two goals, three assists), was upset that Long Beach even scored.

"The guy I was going back to pick up scored the goal," Faulhaber said, "It puts a downer on everything I did in the game."

The Spartans led 4-0 heading into the third period and then their offense exploded for eight goals.

"We didn't want to have four on a team like this," said SJSU head coach Ron Glasow.

The Spartans are contending with the University of California (5-4) and Stanford (2-0) to gain the attention of a panel of eight coaches the American Collegiate Association (ACHA).

These eight coaches will select a West Coast representative, along with seven other teams nationally, to compete in the ACHA Championships at Colorado State University from March

The Spartans and Cal are 1-1 against each other this season. The panel will look at the team's record, difficulty of schedule and margins of wins and losses

"Winning isn't enough," SJSU winger Joey Vela said, "because we're to close with Cal because of our losses."

Forwards Nick Jones, Dave Gaylon and Bruins also scored goals in the lopsided

Competition gives Spartans good early test

By Lana M. Jang Spartan Daily Staff Write

The San Jose State University swimming and diving team was satisfied with its performance during two meets Saturday at the Aquatic Center, although the team scored low in competition against three universities.

"I am real pleased on how they are swimming, (considering) this is some of these swimmers' first collegiate competition," Head Coach RoseAnn Benson said.

"We had at least one or two swims that became personal bests for two-thirds of the group," Assistant Coach Steve Vahle said.

Washington State University, Oregon State University and University of Pacific were all invited to compete against each other in two meets on a sunny Saturday.

San Francisco State University, a division II school, also competed unofficially in the second meet.

SJSU's Jennifer Pelayo, who dived unopposed, scored 22 points for the team for her performance in the one meter and three meter diving events.

Swimmers can earn points for first, second and third place in relay events and first through fifth in individual events. Since Pelavo scored first in both diving events, she contributed top points for SJSU

Personally, Pelayo felt she wasn't giving herself enough time on her one meter dives, but improved on her three meter dives - even after crashing into the water and landing on her back during her second to last dive.

"Within one diving event one could find out what kind of divers there are. It's a tough situation to get right back to do a dive (without any time for preparation)," Diving Head Coach Jack Taylor said. Pelayo responded to the hard hit with dignity and came back for her best score of two 6 1/2's and one 6.

Freshman swimmer Gina Raineri was able to beat her personal time in the 200-meter breast stroke event (2 minutes 35.97 seconds) and the 200meter individual medley event

"It feels really good to be successful this early in the season," Raineri said.

Roise Dawes and Katie Kascht both swam six of the more strenuous events and earned the nickname "Iron Women."

"The swims were really demanding because of the distance (of the swims) and the strokes," Kascht said. "As a whole we did really good. We came together and were really supportive."

UNLV handles SJSU, 23-10

It seemed like even when the San Jose State University football team did something right, it ended up in the books as something wrong.

The UNLV Rebels' (5-3, 4-0) special teams helped knock off the Spartans (1-7, 1-2) 23-10 at Sam Boyd Stadium on Saturday.

The Rebels had a fake field goal, a blocked punt and a variety of other plays that turned into scoring drives, usually as a direct result of SJSU special teams miscues.

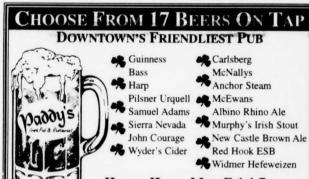

Even when the ball bounced the Spartans way, cornerback Wardell Crutchfield and safety Marcus Galbreath each had two interceptions, quarterback Alli Abrew was unable to put it in the endzone.

Abrew completed 13 of 30 passes for 125 yards, while being sacked six times and throwing an interception.

Although Abrew's handoff to Patrick Walsh, which resulted in an 11-yard touchdown run, was monumental when compared with the Spartans' 1-7 campaign. The score gave the Spartans a 7-0 lead, their first lead in the first half this season. Abrew left the game in the first half after suffering a broken nose on a running play. He

L.A. mayor picks Feinstein

Support gives former S.F. mayor a lift in Southern California

Republican Mayor Richard Riordan plans to endorse Democratic Sen. Dianne Feinstein, who is locked in a tight race with GOP challenger Michael Huffington, a newspaper reported.

The endorsement would be helpful to Feinstein because much of her support is in Northern California where she was formerly the mayor of San Francisco.

Word of the planned endorsement was reported in Sunday editions of the Los Angeles Times, which cited unidentified Feinstein supporters.

A knowledgeable source confirmed to The Associated Press Riordan planned to endorse Feinstein's campaign at a news conference scheduled for Sunday.

In a recent Times poll, Feinstein led Huffington, a congressman from Santa Barbara. by a mere 3 percentage points among likely voters.

Feinstein and Riordan worked closely this year getting federal disaster aid for Southern California's fires and the Jan. 17 6.7-magnitude earthquake that devastated the Northridge area.

Riordan was in Washington to lobby for the $30 billion crime bill, including the assault weapons ban provision in it that was authored by Feinstein. Riordan made a campaign promise to beef up the city's Police Department, and when the bill passed he appeared with Feinstein to announce the bill would help with additional

Scuffle: GOP rally ends with assault charge

I could see the fist.

"(Rowen) used this karatetype of specialized blow where all of one's fingers are extended like a knife and curved into a triangle formation. He jabbed that hand structure into the soft tissue of my back between my shoulder blades and spine. He was obviously trying to get me to drop the mike."

When asked how he could see the exact formation of Rowen's hand with his back turned, Smith said, "My head revolved around. I don't know, but I felt the impact.

Rowen, who would not comment on the battery report, said, "That guy's a nut. That's goofy Lyle Smith. He got up there and endorsed the American Independent Party, wellknown as a neo-Nazi organization.

In a phone interview Thursday, Rowen said he removed Smith from the stage "basically because he was embarrassing the Republican Party. He was blasting Gov. Wilson and the event was endorsing the Repub-right to speak. I stopped him because he went over his time limit.

In an interview Friday, Rowen

Neighbors said Smith was removed from stage because he had gone over the two-minute time limit allotted to each speaker. Neighbors said the content of Smith's speech had nothing to do with his removal, and no violence was involved.

"No one expected Mr. Smith to say what he said," Neighbors said.

"But he had freedom to speak just like anyone else.

Neighbors said he and Rowen went up on stage to urge Smith to step down.

"Mr. Rowen put his hand gently on Mr. Smith's right shoul-der," Neighbors said. "When Mr. Smith didn't stop talking, Mr. Rowen poked him (Smith) with his finger. And that's what Mr. Smith is saying the battery charges are about.

Both Smith and Jim Petersen, Smith's campaign manager, said nobody told them about the time limit. Petersen, who said he plans to resign as Smith's said, "I never denied (Smith) the campaign manager, said the issue is one of a First Amendment violation rather than time restriction.

"Mr. Smith's right to speak in that forum was viciously interrupted," Peterson said. "Although his message was extremely inflammatory given the circumstances, he should have been allowed to speak."

Petersen, who was standing at the Campaign top of the Amphitheater stairs when the alleged scuffle occurred in the pit, said he saw Rowen strike Smith.

"I was shocked," he said, "He (Smith) was an invited speaker. Even if he had been endorsing Josef Stalin, they had no right to stop him.'

Another rally organizer, Frank Jewett, a Republican candidate for 23rd District State Assembly, agreed with Neighbors and said Smith's speech was cut short because of time limitations, not content. Jewett, who also spoke at the rally, said a time limit was set in the rally's

"In some people's opinion, Mr. Smith said some inflammatory speech began to drag and some people said, 'We need to get on with the program.

As for the alleged battery. Jewett saw the three men on stage together but said, "I can't be clear that I saw anyone touch Mr. Smith.'

Lowe said the incident is "basically a question of one person saying, 'Yes, he hit me,' and another saying, 'No, I did not.' At this point, no other witnesses have come forward, so we have one person's word against another.

"It happened in front of 200plus people," Smith said. "Somebody must have seen something, unless they were sleeping.

Smith said although he was angered and upset by the incident, he does not intend to press further charges against Rowen.

"I'm not a litigious person," he said. "My purpose in calling the police was one of simple justice. It was an insult to my character and my soul for them to violate my civil rights.

"I'm not making any of this up," Smith said. "I'm a Congres-

Carlos construction, said Alan Freeman, SJSU director of space management.

"But that's a relatively small amount of money compared to the loss of an historic building," Fogel

Tom O'Donnell, attorney for SJSU, questioned if Scheller house is historic because an early district attorney lived in it. Victor Scheller served as Santa Clara County District Attorney from 1891 to 1894.

"If we have to save every building a district attorney lived in 50 years ago, we'd have a lot of buildings," he said.

San Jose City Councilman David Pandori, who represents downtown San Jose, wants the house saved.

"This is a grand old house. It's not just any house," he Pandori is working with Councilman Frank City Fiscalini to find a site and funding for the house. They are currently looking at the Willows Senior Center on Lincoln and Curtner streets in San Jose.

The university also wants the house moved and saved. But after four years of trying to give away the house and finding no takers, they now want it demolished.

The judge gave permission for the university to go forward with the paperwork regarding demolition. It takes 10 days to get a demolition permit from the Bay Area Air Quality Management Board, Freeman said.

The university will begin that process so if there is no injunction issued Nov. 10, they may move ahead immediately with demolition.

"I feel pretty good the judge will issue the injunction." said Tom Simon of the San Jose Preservation Action Council. "There's new and significant pieces of information that could easily move the house into landmark staents split the bill for everything. He believes there are many hard working students at San Jose State University who pay their way through college.

"Things are tough for people and they are strapped down with jobs," Polanich said. "People are paying their own way through school.

The Greek system is run like a business said Swander.

"We sill have a lot of fun but ...this is still a business," Swander said. "We do have to pay our loans and bills. The sororities know that students are going through difficult times and are willing to help those people who are considering joining a house. "If people are having financial difficulty, we do offer a payment plan to help people out," Paul said. "It's run like a business, but we don't shut people out. We work with them and can set up a payment plan to help them get through it.'

Polanich believes there is no need to panic. As a whole, the sororities need to work together during the year. That will portray them in a positive role as a whole Greek system, he said.

"We are stereotyped as a tavern business. A lot of people don't know all the good philanthropic and community service that the Greek system does throughout this campus," Swander said. "They focus only on what goes wrong with alcohol or if there is a fight."

Swander and Paul believe the financial hardship and will rise to the level of membership enjoyed in the 1980s.

"People say it's going to come back alive. Give it three or four more years and all the sororities on the campus will be like it was in the '80s - completely packed," Swander said.

technology."

Since the inception of American Music Week, SJSU has been a part of the celebration by providing musical events showcasing the diversity of American music to the students and public to experience.

"Most major organizations do not regularly perform a lot of American music. It's kind of a shame that symphony orchestras and opera companies don't perform more American music on a regular basis," Aldag said.

"American Music Week makes it possible to have special programs once a year.'

Aldag feels American composers deserve to have their pieces played regularly. But there is a reason why they don't get their just reward.

American music is a 20th-century phenomenon audiences Music in the 20th Century is not attractive to concertgoers and the general public.

have not caught up to yet.

"Music in the 20th Century is not attractive to concert-goers and the general public. It's not a very popular style," Furman

The repertoire, or song works, used by today's orchestras are based on the European tradition. Symphonies, like the San Jose Symphony Orchestra, devote much of their time and attention to the classics music by Beethoven, Mozart, Johannes Brahms and Franz Schubert.

"It's a problem of economics. If you don't play that kind of music you're going to lose a lot of revenue," Furman said.

There are no scheduled events for American music this week at SJSU, but the following week will feature three concerts on Nov. 8, 9 and 10, featuring works of SJSU professors of the past and present.

"You will hear very interesting sounds. Again that's one of the reasons why American music isn't popular, but it is American. It is a part of our tra-
