Forum turns heated debate

Affirmative action discussed among students, staff

By Shawna Glynn

The intention was not to launch a heated debate, but when 18 people disrupted an academic forum titled "What is Affirmative Action" held by the Associated Students and the Academic Senate, a heated debate is what it became.

Four panelists had just spoken for seven minutes, each on affirmative action, when members from MEChA (Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlan) walked single file into the Student Union Ballroom clapping hands — ready to make a statement. Carlos Contreras, SJSU student and member of MEChA, walked up to an open micro-phone, placed for audience questions to panelists, and spoke directly to President Robert L. Caret who sat in the front row of

"Why is there a meeting taking place inside when there is one taking place outside?" asked Contreras, referring to the "A Day of Unity and Resistance" teach-in at the Student Union Amphitheater. Contreras pointed to Caret and demanded to know why Caret was not attending the teach-in and why Caret "had planned another meeting.

Caret stood, faced Contreras and answered: "I didn't organize this academic forum, I was invited here. The reason I am not outside is because I was specifically not

A.S. President Marilyn Charell told Contreras the forum was not planned to overshadow the outside event. It was simply planned first, she said.

The purpose of the forum was to have panelists speak on affirmative action, then answer questions from the audience of about 150 people. Caret's only role was to welcome the panelists.

Flu shots available from college of nursing

By Ginger McDonald

Achoo! Getting a flu shot this season is going to be very convenient for SJSU faculty, staff and students — but for a fee.

Shots can be obtained from the college of nursing for $10 and from the Student Health Center Dr. Daryl Canham, professor in the college of nursing, said the vac-cine is being offered on campus because "some of our research identified that there was a need. The faculty and staff are in daily contact with the public, a fact that places them at a fairly high risk of getting the flu. Many medical agencies are making it easier for the community to get shots. County clinics and Longs Drug store are providing walk-in and drive-through vaccine shots. County clinics and stations, she said.

of transportation or time constraints, will benefit by having the vaccine more accessible, Canham

Drs. Robert Latta, of Student Health Services, and Jayne Cohen, school of nursing professor, said the preventative vaccine will be available from mid-October to mid-November, which is the peak of the influenza season.

"It's a new influenza vaccine that has been formulated for the 1995-1996 influenza season," Cohen said. "It is composed of two new subtypes and one from last year's flu season."

The three strains are: A/Texas, A/Johannesburg and B/Asian. They were selected as a result of the research conducted by the National Institutes of Health Center for Disease Control and Prevention, she said.

Cohen said the nursing department's goal in providing the service is two-fold: to ensure those at

Race card a dangerous historical reality

he Juice is loose. But who really won this court debacle? My guess is nobody. Not blacks, not whites, and not our judicial system. Did O.J.'s $8 million "dream team" play the race card? It sure did. Even team member Robert Shapiro decried

The dream team, Johnny Cochran and company, successfully led the jury to ignore any DNA and other scientific evidence, by rapping (" ... if it doesn't fit, you must acquit ... ") and by quoting from scripture. The reasoning? His malleable jury needed to send a

They did.

Despite Simpson jurors' claims to have based their decision on evidence, or lack of it, many Americans believe this to be a case of jury nullification — the rejection of the law in favor of the juror's own view of justice. Cochran's message is dividing America along racial lines. His message is, it's OK to free a criminal of wrongdoing if that person is a minority.

For me, this case was never about a black man. It was about "The Juice," the first man to rush for over 2000 yards in a single football season, the man who fought the Towering Inferno with Steve McQueen, the man who ran through airports. I watched the Bronco spectacle in disbelief.

The Wall Street Journal calls the willingness of many blacks to side with African-American defendance. dants against a mostly white-dominated justice system a relatively new phenomenon. But O.J.'s case would not be the first instance of nullification. The Journal pointed out that during colonial times, jurors acquitted colonial defendants of political crimes against the crown, and in the mid-19th century, Northern jurors acquitted people who harbored runaway slaves. Cases of white juries acquitting white defendants or railroading black defendants are undeniable.

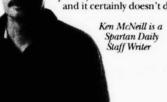

Jury attempts to release criminals on the basis of minority status are trivial next to a jury using nullification to overthrow the tyrannical influence of a foreign power. It sets a dangerous precedent. The criminal justice system may collapse should any jury begin to make acquittals wholly on the basis of skin color.

The paradox facing the black community, said Ronald Brownstein, a Los Angeles Times political correspondent, is that racism cannot be fought through racial separatism. I agree. Racial solidarity negates thought beyond group rights, to take on challenges individually and to hold each other, whatever race, to the same high measure.

A conviction by this jury would have struck a mighty blow against racism, whose bony finger points to those seeking to divide the races instead of focusing on the highest of human standards — people like Cochran, Mark Furhman, Louis Farrakhan, multicul-

Martin Luther King Jr. sought to have people judged by the content of their character. Did we judge O J. on his character or his race? The world will never know. The jury has rendered its verdict and America has to live with it. So does O.J., who played the real winning card — his bank card.

Freedom came to O.J. for the low price of $8 million, a figure most Americans will never see in their check-books. Money talks in America, and poverty walks, or at least it takes the bus, and it certainly doesn't drive a Bronco.

The church should listen to lead

The pope was in the United States last week, for the 50th anniversary of NATO. Along the way he stopped in several cities to speak to some of his flock of 60 million practicing Catholics, to say that the United States was in the throes of moral decadence.

While sometimes it may seem as if our society is going to hell in a hand basket, I did not hear the pope offering any solutions. He espoused the same old rhetoric and unbending principles I've heard for

Armed with his two-thousand-year old teachings, the 75-year-old pontiff takes a hard line on most subjects, and will not budge when it comes to defending the church's principles. While I admire the man for his moral integrity, in a world that seemingly has no concept of the words, I fall into the category of people who think he is out of touch with the times

I don't think anyone would argue with the more basic teachings of the Catholic Church: thou shalt not steal, kill, or commit adultery. Even the more obvious lessons of showing kindness and tolerance toward one another and helping the poor and less fortunate, are things we all should have learned in kindergarten. What I disagree with are the pope's stand on manmade issues such as: the celibacy of priests, the ordinate of the pope's stand on the conditional states of the celibacy of the pope's stand on the celibacy of priests, the ordinate of the celibacy of the celibacy nation of women to the priesthood and its stand on birth control.

I have always wondered how priests, who have never been married, or had children, can responsibly dole out advice to their parishioners who are having marital problems. And how priests have the audacity to suggest abstinence as a good form of birth control, to people who all ready have more children than they can support. Catholics, just like the rest of the popula-tion, should be responsible and practice reliable birth control, in an all ready over-crowded world.

In order to alleviate the problems facing the short-age of priests, why not ordain women to the priesthood? There are many qualified women who are more than capable of taking on the job. There are women ministers in other religions, and the world has not come to an end yet. The pope's principles are not only out of step, in some cases, they are down-right negligent. I say this because I grew up in an all Catholic community, attended a Catholic school for 12 years, and saw first hand the harm some of In Rochester, Minnesota there is a facility for alcoholic priests.

tion to pretend there aren't any serious internal prob-lems with these unbending principles.

of morality, are accused of being careteria Catholics.
We want to be Catholics on our own terms. We want to pick the things we like and leave the rest behind.
While it's an interesting analogy, I disagree. I feel that the churches primary function is to minister to the spiritual needs of its congregation, whatever they may be. The world is not the same place it was two the ward were and I think it would be prudent. thousand years ago, and I think it would be prudent for the church to rethink some of its positions as we approach the 21st century.

I agree that the fundamental truths of the church should not change, and for that, I admire the pope for his unwavering stance. However, those requests, that are more traditional than truths, need to be changed. If it is the purpose of the church to serve its people, than it should listen to what they are saying.

Homecoming snafus not the same as racism believe Thursday's Spartan Daily, racism has appeared on campus again. In a front-page article (Outgoing Homecoming court complains of racism), Dwayne Hearn and Nicole Padellan say they have been the victims of a racial backlash during the past year because they were the first black Homecoming King and Queen.

"I guess you could say it's just a lot of seemingly little things that have really started adding up, and Padellan was quoted in the article.

Those little things include not receiving their scholarships; not having their names engraved on the trophy until two weeks ago; not having their picture on the front page of the Daily; and the Associated Students Board of Directors decision to strip the two of the right to vote for this year's king and queen.
The A.S. — along with other campus groups — organizes and finances homecoming.

This is a fairly daunting list and certainly points to another inci-dent of campus racism. But if you do a little digging behind the allegations, a more complex picture

As far as not getting their names engraved on the trophy, that's a fairly common occurrence no mat-ter what the color of the king and previous years don't have their names on (the trophy) either, said the promotions director for A.S. program board, who sits on this year's homecoming commit-tee. "We're trying to track them down, the kings and queens, and get their names engraved.

The promotions director said the problems — including the scholarship snafus — Hearn and Padellan experienced are due to the inefficiency of last year's homecoming committee

"I understand the frustration of the king and queen," she said. What about the Daily's part in the racial backlash by not printing Hearn and Padallan's picture on 1994 Daily sports editor, said previ-ous Dailys had treated the story as front page news

I looked at the Daily's coverage of homecoming from 1989 to 1993. During that five year period, only one king and queen's picture appeared on page one. Most kings and queens didn't get their pictures in the Daily.

In fact, Hearn and Padellan got better coverage than the previous five kings and queens. Quite a racial backlash.

Larry Barrett, executive editor of the Daily during fall 1994, said:

"I'm sick of this shit. It wouldn't have made a difference if the king and queen were white, Hispanic or gay. In my news judgment, it's not news and doesn't belong on the front page.

Now we come to the A.S. taking way Padellan and Hearn's vote Here's where I admit my bias. Last fall, I was the beat reporter for A.S. and I found our student govern-ment to be a swamp of skulldug-gery, incompetence and petty jeal-

I would not put any malfeasance, ineptness or stupidity past our student government. I might even say A.S. doesn't need any motive — racism or anything else — to do a dumb thing like taking the vote away from Padellan and

It does dumb things all the time. that I've vented my spieen I'm feeling a little embarrassed. Hearn and Padellan are right when they say they experienced a racial backlash this semester.

But on a diverse campus like SJSU, where we are supposed to celebrate our differences and we have task forces and committees and subcommittees to promote tolerance, I get tired of hearing about blanket indictments of

Homecoming article was not complete or fair

I was disappointed upon reading the article on Thursday, "Outgoing Homecoming court complains of racism," in the Spartan Daily. As the city editor for the Fall '94 semester, I am speaking on behalf of the staff who were not represented in the article.

As student journalists, the members of the Spartan Daily this semester should have been aware they were printing a biased, onesided story

While there was mutual mudslinging between the members of the Associated Students, Mr. Larry Barrett was singled out as the one member of the fall '94 Spartan Daily staff who decided where the Homecoming Court story would appear, without the opportunity to explain his side.

This is untrue. The decision to put the story on the sports page was a majority vote in the editors' staff meeting. After discussion, the editors chose to create a full-page dedicated to the Homecoming stories and photos. The issue of race was never mentioned. Dwayne Hearn and Nicole Padellan should know that the fall

'94 editors never intended to make them feel unimportant. Their accomplishment was not ignored. Finally, the Homecoming Court article and the two articles before it were all well-written and researched.

I am well aware that the Spartan Daily is a student newspaper and mistakes are a part of the process, but journalism students know that both sides of a story are needed.

"Outgoing Homecoming court complains of racism" was neither complete, nor fair.

A joyous farewell

Macedonia

Gliner, along with cameraman Cary Cremidas, ventured out to Macedonia last April. At the time, they weren't sure what to expect with all the misconceptions of the situation in former Yugoslavia.

"Everyone has the same stereo-type, they thought we were going to Bosnia," Gliner said.

What they found ended up being quite different.

"The people there acted very peaceful, even to American standards," Gliner said. "A woman can walk around at night without any problems. It's better than Europe."
"Once we got them

(Macedonians) talking, they had very strong opinions," Cremidas said. "Once they found out we Cremidas were Americans, their eyes lit up. They never see Americans. It was a wonderful experience."

Gliner said viewers of the film will see a very beautiful, scenic country side with the towns and villages rich with culture. The resi-dents of Macedonia are also very loyal to their country and very interested in making a model country of themselves. They intend to try and make the move toward capitalism in a very peace ful manner. While ethnic tensions are evident in neighboring Bosnia is almost non-existent in Macedonia.

"They are trying to be a model country. They are trying affirmative action programs. Lots of lessons could be learned from them," Gliner said.

The film mixes footage of the landscape, with interviews of families, people on the street, and key policy-makers, including their president, Kiro Gligorov. The interviews with the different groups of people really brings the situation of the Balkans home. The people there are very adamant about trying to stay away from ethnic conflicts

In the film, Vasa Robev, a chore-ographer of folk dancing and interpreter for the film said interpreter for the film American companies are hesitant to do business with Macedonia because they think it's like Bosnia. He added that the country needed to get the correct information out, using documentaries and journal-

"It was an eye-opening experience to go from Los Gatos to such a small country," Cremidas said. "Everything there is such a gray scene. I'm very fortunate to experience the trip

Local school district bans Halloween festivities and parade

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) There will be no Halloween parade in the schoolyard this year. No 9-year-old witches haunting the halls. No jack-o'-lanterns colored orange by earnest first-graders unless they're offered a non-satanic alternative. Halloween has been banned from Los Altos schools, along with Christmas carols, Hanukkah songs and Easter eggs. And they're not too sure about those paper drag-ons used to celebrate Chinese New

The decision has angered some parents in the upscale community overlooking Silicon Valley, who see it as political correctness gone

Patrick Ferrell's 7-year-old daughter came home from school and said the teacher told them "the Halloween parade would feed the devil" - or at least that's how she understood it, he said "She's confused. I'm confused," Ferrell said. "We sanitize our schools and then wonder why our kids come out politically corrected, with less of a sense of identity, of values. It's a damn shame.

Los Altos school board president Phil Faillace, who wrote the new policy, doesn't see it as stripping schools of all values.

Are you interested in teaching at a community college? Have you completed at least 50% of a Master's Degree? Are you a member of an underrepresented group?

....then consider the Bay Area Faculty Diversity Internship Project

About the Project ...

The goal of the Project is to prepare members of underrepresented groups to become community college instructors through internships. The Project assumes that interns have subject matter expertise in the subject area, but need an opportunity to learn and practice the teaching techniques which are appropriate for community college students.

Underrepresented persons (African American, Asian Pacific, Disabled, Latino, Native American, and Women) interested in a career in as a community college instructor, who have expertise in a subject area, and have not had paid professional teaching experience at the community college level are eligible. This includes graduate students nearing completion of Master's degrees from accredited colleges or universities, and Master's degree holders who have not had post graduate teaching experience.

Compensation

Interns are paid to teach one to three classes at the part-time faculty rate at the college they are teaching at for Spring or Fall 1996. Observation or team teaching a class is not subject to compensation.

Captain tunes back into football for Homecoming

Lineman returns to the field after missing first five games of the season

By Eddie Zacapa Spartan Daily Staff Write

Every Wednesday night, Chris Hill sits intently in front of a television set, with a bag of popcorn, watching "Beverly Hills 90210," his favorite show.

"I religiously watch it," the San Jose State University offensive lineman said. "I watch it all the time — for the last six years. I'm up to date with all the characters, it's kind of like a soap opera where you have to watch it every day to keep up." And the University of Las Vegas will be trying to keep up with him in this Saturday's Homecoming game as Hill, who has been sitting on the sidelines for more than six weeks after suffering a sprained medial collateral ligament in his left knee, returns to action. And the 6-foot-2-inch, 258 pounder, who also tunes in to his soap opera to find out who's making the next move on who, will get a chance to put his moves on the field as he has for the last four years, earning him All-Big West honors.

In fact, over the years, his moves have reaped huge dividends for the Spartans and placed him as the number-one lineman going into the 1995 season. Hill, voted team captain, moved to right tackle for the remaining two games last sea-son and the Spartans (3-8 last year) won both games.

Hill, who was on crutches for three weeks hopes to make enough of an impact to take the team to the Las Vegas Bowl.

"I think it's a tremendous impact," offensive coordinator Roger Theder said of having Hill back. "The key to whatevery we do back. "The key to whatever we do offensively is in our offensive line, and no matter what anybody says we're only as good as they are. I think having him back just makes a world of difference."

Hill made a difference in his most memorable games against Washington State and Minnesota in 1993 and 1992. The lineman made a dramatic showing as he took on the Huskies' D'Marco Far, who now plays for the St. Louis Rams in the NFL.

Before the game, Hill received a call from an former player who told him he was going to get his butt kicked and beat. But, Hill, unfazed by the comments, held Far to no sacks and a mere four tackles. "I just decided I had to represent my town and my team," Hill

In his freshman year, Hill got his first chance to represent the Spartans, as he made his debut against Minnesota — the school's first win against a Big-10 opponent. In the game, he did not allow a sack and helped energize the running game in the victory. Since then, the walk-on player has been a fixture as a leader in the offensive line.

The senior, who had played in 29 straight games before his injury, plays football every chance he gets, including spring breaks, Christmas vacation and summers. "There came a point in my life where I said, 'I have to have fun later in life," Hill said.

Hill, who started tossing a football with his dad when he was about 7 years old, may have been influenced by his father who was a high school coach. His father played for Glendale Junior College and Whitworth College.

His parents try to make it to every game. His father has only missed one game in five years and quit coaching to be able to see his quit coaching to be able to see his son play.

"Kids only play once," said his father Ed Hill. "Many (high school) coaches never see their kids play because they're coaching. I felt that was horrible and that's why I made that decision (to quit)."

That dedication appears to have been passed on to his son, who excels both in the classroom and on the field. In the 1992 spring semester, Hill, an advertising major, was a "Scholar-Athlete" award winner and will graduate teammates are happy to have him

"Just with his presence he leads the offensive line, he's one of those types of players (a leader), and that's crucial for us," quarterback Carl Dean said.

And the latest gossip from the ultimate soapy on how much the Homecoming game means: "It's real big, it's a must-win situation, it's the biggest game of our lives."

Strategy pays off big

Women's soccer team shuts out Hayward 5-0

By Shawna Glynn

When the women's soccer team lost to Cal State Fresno back in September, they swore revenge. The teams met a second time, but the Spartans still could not beat the Bulldogs. So before Wednesday night's game against Hayward, SJSU head coach Philippe Blin used the Spartans rivalry with Fresno as a weapon against Cal State Hayward.

Blin told the team that Hayward had played Fresno and had tied the Bulldogs.

This pep-talk prepared the Spartans for a battle against Hayward.

But Blin wasn't telling the whole truth

Fresno never tied Hayward, and the Pioneers weren't as good as he said.

"Hayward had goly your two of their

"Hayward had only won two of their twelve games," said Spartan midfielder Tennille Ruggiero. "When Philippe told us that Fresno could not beat Hayward, it made us even more determined to beat the Pioneers. We found out after the game that Philippe made it up. He just didn't want us to get overconfident."

The Spartans, now 7-4, had little competition Wednesday night at Spartan Stadium. They beat the Pioneers 5-0, dropping Hayward's record to 2-11. SJSU began scoring early in the first half, with forward Michelle Vargas grabbing the first goal, assisted by midfielder Katy Doyle. Vargas, who has 31 shots on goal and has kicked the ball into the net seven times this season, came back in the second half and scored again.

Midfielder Momi Aiu also scored two goals for the Spartans: one in the first half, assisted by midfielder Tennille Ruggiero and midfielder Karol Kay and one in the second half, assisted by Vargas and forward Megan Meermans. Aiu has made eight goals for the season and has had 56 shots on goal. Ruggiero not only had an assist, but she also scored against the Pioneers, giving her four goals for the season.

The Spartans have only five games left and only one is at home. They will play Pacific on Oct. 30 at 7:30 p.m. at Spartan Stadium.

Because it is the Spartan's first year, the team is non conference. Non conference teams are not eligible to compete in the playoffs. Next year, the Spartans will join the Western Athletic Conference.

"Next year we will be able to compete in the playoffs. We know we will make it. We would have made it this year, if we had been eligible," Philippe said. "As soon as we finish our scheduled games, we don't play again until next season."

Aiu said that she is looking forward to next year's soccer season. "I am learning to play all positions well, and I know the

"We didn't expect to play as well as we have," Ruggiero said. "We thought we'd win a couple of games, but had no idea we'd win so many."

The Spartans will play the Santa Clara

Basketball teams start practice

The SJSU men's and women's basketball teams will practice for the first time this season Sunday at the Events Center. The men will be practicing from 8 a.m. until 11 a.m. and the women from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The sessions are open for viewing by the general public.

The teams will open their season with exhibitions games on November 15 at the Event Center. The men will face the United Arab Emirates team, and the women will play the Canadian National Team.

Swim meet held for students and staff

The SJSU women's swimming and diving team invites students, faculty, alumni and "friends of SJSU" to join them in the Blue and Gold

"fun meet" 2 p.m. today at the Aquatics Center. According to head coach Roseann Benson, the meet offers the chance for those who like swimming, and who are above high-school age, to compete in standard swimming and diving events. In addition, the events will include some short relays "so that people who are not in great shape can participate," she said.

Anyone who wants to participate in Aquatics Center by 1:30 p.m. to register. to participate in events should arrive at the showed up as the uninvited 13th guest and shot Balder with an arrow made of mistletoe.

The most famous group of 13, however, is Jesus and his 12 disci-ples at the Last Supper. Although Judas is considered the unlucky 13th, in some accounts Jesus is the 13th — depending on how one would count. This would be in keeping with Ann's theory of the 13th disappearing.

"Disappearance is associated with death," Ann said. "That's why the death card in tarot is the num-

However, Richard Keady, SISU professor of comparative religious studies, is leery of the idea that groups of 13 are unlucky.

"That kind of probability is tricky," he said. "One might find as examples with the number 12 or 21. A lot of other people die on other days."

Negative associations about the number 13 abound in history. For example, the Romans believed it was a symbol of death, destruction and misfortune.

Thirteen is not an unlucky number," said Bonnie Wilde, a numerologist. "The idea of misfortune around it is just part of a lot of old folklore."

But what sets Friday the 13th apart from the 13th occurring on any other day

It's probably because biblically, Friday seems to be an unlucky day.

Friday is the day that Eve ate the apple, the day of the Last Supper and the day Jesus was crucified. It's also said that the Great Flood started on a Friday, as well as construction of the Tower of Babel. But Friday's bad reputation may have roots in other religions as well.

According to Norse mythology Friday is named for Frigga, the goddess of cloud and sky, married love, fertility and housewives. When Norse and Germanic tribes converted to Christianity, Frigga was banished to a mountaintop and called a witch.

For revenge, Frigga, a gathering of 11 witches and the devil (a total of 13) would get together on a Friday and make plans to wreak havoc for the rest of the week As a result, Friday was known as the Witches' Sabbath. So, with the combination of the unlucky 13 and Friday's bad reputation — it makes for a double-whammy of bad luck. But not everybody thinks Friday the 13th is so terrible.

"I'm a rationalist," Keady said. "I don't think God or some sort of confluence of days decides our unlucky, that might make 13 unlucky." fate. If a person believes that 13 is opportunity."

Lidia La Garda Rios, SJSU director of the office of equal opportunity said, "Affirmative action was intended to address new instances of discrimination against women and minorities."

Lela LLorens, associate academic vice president for faculty affairs, was the third panelist and defined affirmative action as "a process for actualizing equal opportunity."

"Is 30 years enough time to resolve years of discrimination?" asked final panelist Lewis Bundy, director of student development services. "Probably not."

He said affirmative action should be about representation and the demographics on California State University campuses should reflect the demographics of "People think affirmative action is about reverse discrimination. That is a misconception and people actually believe it. It is not true and that is why we are here," she said.

she said.

"This whole thing is a colossal failure," said SJSU student Michael Curran, who came to the forum to listen to the panelists. "If this is such a polarizing issue, why such a low turn out of people? I counted about 120."

Caret said an institution acting as a catalyst for change has one very important goal — to educate. "It is important to talk, and that is what happened today."

Campus fliers urge students to protest

Spartan Daily Staff Repor

On Wednesday and Thursday, a small group of students handed out fliers titled "communique." They claim they are not an organization but a group of friends who want to inform students about alternatives to expressing power.

"The paper or the tract is a discussion on strategy and tactics for students — to have power, to make demands within their own lives," said Rob Banks, history major and group representative, "like how they want their immediate environment to be." This group of three believes students have no power and are forced to conform to a system. They want to create a "new awareness" and a "new activity" that students can use to express their power outside of organized rallies such as Thursday's "A Day of Unity and Resistance" teach-in.

"If one group has a rally there is no reason why students have to accept that," Banks said.

In order to create a "new activity" to enable students to take more power, the group advocates disrupting rallies and their speakers, taking over campus buildings or striking at public places and schools.

Julie Alguilar, a social work major, felt the "A Day of Unity and Resistance" rally was effective in its

"I think the rally we're having is getting the point across," Alguilar said. "Then it's fine."

Elena Carrasco, a graphic design student, thought strikes like the one on Thursday at UC Berkeley would help create more awareness for students' causes.

Six student organizations will compete, bringing their own message in the form of a yell to encourage the football team. During the week, each of these organizations — which includes fraternities and sororities — earns points for their school spirit. After Friday's yell, the winner will be announced and the prizes — a plaque and a free pizza party courtesy of Associated Students — will be awarded.

Assistant student board advisor, Ted Gehrke, who has been organizing the program for more than 20 years, said, "It's nice to see students, the athletic department and alumni working together because they truly believe in this university.
Because our football team is looking strong this year, I expect a good turnout."

Also during the Yellfest, the new Homecoming court will be announced during the halftime period of Saturday's game. The winners will be introduced then ferried off in convertibles provided by Capital Ford.

Organized by A.S., this event is a product of long hours that "best reflects the student and what students want to see. Everyone is a contributor," said Marie-Rose Karamanlian, advertising director.

Colorful T-shirts displaying the SJSU Homecoming insignia will be available at the Yellfest for $10. The T-shirts can be used after the game for free admittance into Ajax Lounge, F/X and Toons.
