SJSU faculty take action; plan 'holiday'

By Peggy Flynn Staff Writer

It's great weather for a faculty holiday.

Approximately 250 San Jose State University faculty, including department chairs, are participating in a CSU-wide "personal holiday campaign" as a symbolic action to demonstrate concern over current contract negotiations.

The 24-campus CSU system is currently negotiating a new contract involving wage and employment issues with faculty. The current three-year contract expires on June 30.

The campaign, beginning today and ending Wednesday, involves faculty taking a personal holiday on a non-teaching day. This will prevent the disruption of classes.

"Since this operation is symbolic, the objective is to have a slightly ratcheted-up petition drive," electrical engineering professor Jack Kurzweil said. Bizarre as it may seem, (the campaign) is a tactical device to take a step that we thought had

Among the proposals offered are removing department chairs from the bargaining unit and eliminating the faculty salary schedule in favor of open salary ranges. According to Kurzweil, who is also an active member and former chapter president of the CFA, there is an 11.2 percent faculty salary lag behind those of comparable universities.

"We (the CFA) think that this contract is not going to be an easy one," Kurzweil said. "We are expecting tough negotia-

Storm chases sunshine away

By Leah Bower

Spring-like weather will end tonight as a moderately strong Pacific storm system moves into Northern and Central California, the National Weather Service forecast Wednesday

Say good-bye to sunshine for the rest of the week.

Rain will develop today, and may become heavy by tonight, according to Channel 11 weather forecaster Chris Donahoe.

"We could see a chance of thunderstorms (Thursday) or early Friday, Donahoe said.

Dr. Jerry Steffens of the Meteorology Department at San Jose State University said, while satellite photographs indicated El Niño is weakening, strong storms are still possible.
"Whether or not we have El Nino, you should expect storms through April," Steffens said.

"We may still have a strong storm, but if we do it will be harder to blame on El Niño."

Steffens said El Niño is warming of the castern balf of the Pacific along the equator.

According to Donahoe, this storm does not exhibit the signs of an El Niño storm.

The typical El Niño signature storm forms in a much lower latitude and has a subtropical moisture tap," Donahoe said. "The storm this week is a fairly typical winter storm.

A subtropical moisture tap occurs when a storm draws moisture from the tropics.

According to Steffens, computer simulations that track the warming and cooling of ocean waters indicate that El Niño will be gone by summer.

As clouds increase in the north, lows tonight will range from the mid-20s through the 30s in the mountains, to the 40s to 50s elsewhere.

Thursday will see rain spreading from the north, although it will continue to be mild in the southerly portions of Central California.

Rain, wind and cooler temperatures are expected to continue through Friday, Donahoe said.

This weekend should be warm and sunny according to Donahoe, with temperatures in the low to mid 60s

Graduation day and all that fuss: forget ceremony

emember Rechool gradua-tion? When you got to sit and make fun of everyone's name as you waited for your own to be called? When you walked across the stage in a retarded cap and gown draped over your cheesy outfit, all the while hoping you wouldn't trip and fall and have your teeth scattered everywhere? Well, that was fun wasn't it?

I used to think that graduation day in college would be better than that experience. I thought it would be glorious. I'd have tons of friends and family in attendance. The sun would be shining brightly. I'd have a new outfit. And then we would party for the next two

Well, that little fantasy will have to remain exactly that, a fantasy I'm starting to think I should just return to my high school in June and do it all over again.

Graduation here is no easy task. After seeing your adviser to make sure graduation is even possible, you have to get his signature, the director of your school's signature, pay $25 at the Cashier's Office, register with the Career Planning and Placement Office and have your application stamped and then submit your completed forms and receipted application to the Office of Admissions and Records. Don't forget about your minor forms either, it's almost the same procedure.

The irritation doesn't end there; you still have to get a cap and gown. When you finally do make it to the stadium for the ceremony, all your years of hard work (term papers exams, presentations, speeches, labs, finals, internships, parties and so on and so on) have been dwindled down to a minute's worth of

You are lucky enough to sit among the sea of other graduates and wait for your department to be called. When the time has arrived you get to stand up and then sit down.

Congratulations, you've just graduated!
What's even better, is that the 30 people who actually found a parking spot and came to your commencement probably didn't see a bit of it. To them, you and your fellow graduates were dots which collectively looked like a 3-D Magic Eye poster. Chances are they were clapping and pointing at someone else when your department was announced.

A possible solution to this graduation day nightmare is to participate in a smaller ceremony such as those offered by certain departments, or even by some ethnic-based organizations. At least you will receive some individual recognition and you will probably get to say a few words to those whom you would

Tasteless greeting cards reach new low

Scott Shuey

FRUIT LOOPS & BEER

allmark has finally come out with a greeting card that Jack Kevorkian would be proud of.

You'll be able to find this new card next April, presumably next to the few remaining St. Patrick Day's cards in a section titled "suicide sympathy."

The card reads: "When someone we love flees from life, it's so hard to understand. It's impossible to know just how much suffering there must have been. But our compassionate Creator sees clearly into what is beyond our understanding and already has welcomed your loved one home... with love."

This should come as a welcome surprise to all those people who have been awkwardly forced to actually deal with the emotional aftermath that follows most suicides.

It will be great. Instead of having to help Uncle John and Aunt Judy deal with their little speedballing hellion who decided to suck on the working end of a .357 because he couldn't deal with rehab, you'll be able to just pop on down to the local drugstore, buy a card, slap a stamp on it and away it will go. No messy tears need be shed.
You can feel good about having done your part in their emotional recovery for only $1.85

But perhaps Hallmark hasn't gone far enough. Maybe what's needed are a few cards that focus on the individual acts of suicide such as gunshot wounds, sleeping pills, hanging or even, my personal favorite, autoerotic asphyxiation. Can't you image how much Michael Hutchen's wife would have been helped had she received a card that said:

We're sorry for you're loss, and we're happy to hear that at least he got off a

We heard they found him hanging naked in the

but according to the church, he's probably burn

He loved it when he sang for INXS, but he never figured he'd kill himself for illicit sex

Or maybe Courtney Love would have gotten some relief if she had received this card when her husband, Kurt Cobain, committed suicide.

When someone you've done blows their head off with a gun we can't imagine that's it's too much cleaning the wall, where his brains were baked on by the sun.

We heard he sat for several days, and we're sorry to hear it,

We can image that it didn't 'smell like teen spirit.'

The rumor is that it was heroin, not marijuana that sent your boy Kurt off to nirvana.
But rock stars aren't the only ones who kill themselves. Sometimes people kill themselves with their own stupidity. Hallmark could have made this card which could have been mailed to Washington after the recent death of Sonny Bono.

We heard that Sonny was doing just fine until he had a little run-in with that pine. People knew he loved to ski, but things like this happen, when you try to impersonate a Kennedy. Now, we realize that hill was kind of slippery, but what can you expect from an aging ex-hippie?

Touching, isn't it? Who knows, maybe, Hallmark will also come out with cards for mass suicides, ritual cult slayings and victims of serial killers.

Won't that be nice. No more dealing with the actual problems and certainly no more trying to stop these little social inconveniences from happening in the first place

It's the true blue All-American way of dealing with these problems, isn't it: Quick, easy and very, very cheap

Common sense abandoned: zero tolerance laws oday's school con-duct codes are showing no mercy to some students who have violated them unwittingly. This overreaction to juvenile acts can only bring an education system already bogged down with rules to a standstill. A one-sizefits-all punishment for acts that are in no way the same in scale makes

American educators are jumping en masse on the bandwagon of zero tolerance. This is a policy that, under the guise of student safety, imposes Draconian punishments for violators of drug or alcohol or weapon regulations. No excuses will be tolerated. It is a lame attempt to stop violence from spilling into classrooms by issuing mandatory punishments for any student who brings drugs or weapons to

One example of overstepping the bounds of common sense is the Texas teen suspended for carrying Advil in her backpack. Another recent news story recounted how a 13-year-old honors student in Georgia was suspended from school for giving his French teacher wine as a Christmas gift. He had violated the school's

The Federal Gun-Free Schools Act of 1994 was instrumental in setting policies that require immediate disciplinary action and/or expulsion for those who violate it. But as zero tolerance policies become more widespread, there is a debate about mandatory punishment in cases where there is no intent to cause harm. The policy does not allow administrators to use their own discretion when determining punishments.

Here are more examples of students who violated the zero tolerance policy: a 13-year-old Oregon boy, punished for taking a swig of Scope; a seventh grader in West Virginia suspended for sharing a zinc lozenge with a friend; and the widely publicized North Carolina case where a six-year-old was charged with sexual harassment for kissing a

Many critics of zero tolerance say these policies are there to appease parents, worried about school safety, with tough sounding measures that ignore the true sources of the probalems. In many ways, the zero tolerance policies in schools parallel the move to "three strikes" laws and mandatory sentencing rules.

Texas Education Committee Chairman Ted
Bivens has created a bill which has guidelines for these cases so authorities can act logically, utilizing prudence as well as the rule of law.

More states need to have legislation enacted like the bill drawn up by Bivens. That way, educators can temper their punishments with mercy instead of causing misery for any student who inadvertently breaks a rule

Student praise for outstanding professor

I just read the story on Terry Christensen who was recently selected as Outstanding Professor for 1998, and would like to add to the chorus of congratulations.

It was 22 years ago that I took a medley of political science classes from Christensen that were required of journalism students.

As a working journalist, I have found these classes invaluable, especially the senior seminar in political research.

The course required that students do research in the law library, use microfiche to research issues that were reported in publications and dissect a Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area for demographic and political research.

It was hard, time-consuming and tedious work. I remember cursing Christensen under my breath because it was so much

However, when I began working with the Los Angeles Daily News, I was assigned to cover Agoura Hills and Westlake Village, two cities in northern Los Angeles County.

The very first thing I did was bury myself in the library, researching issues with the skills I developed in that class. I poured over years of microfiche so I could know what I was about to cover as a government reporter.

After sufficient research, I felt comfortable enough so I could write accurate stories with exacting nut graphs.

I have also helped several Hispanic publications develop home distribution strategies using the ability to dissect an SMSA via voter precincts. Also, dissecting the same voter precincts allowed me to enterprise many electoral follow-up stories as a government reporter. It was then that I realized how great an instructor Chistensen was and still is on campus. I no longer cursed him under my breath.

In fact, I have had and still have nothing but praise for Christensen.

Right-wing conspiracy targets Clinton

Why don't we just let the man do his job? I'm so sick of all the fuss over President Clinton's personal life. What he does (or who he does) on his own time is of no concern to me, just as long as he is doing his job

Kenneth Starr and the rest of the right-wingers should stop wasting time and tax dollars and let the president get back to work on the important issues that affect our lives.

Nowhere in the Constitution does it say that the commander in chief has to set a moral example for the rest of us.

Besides, if we want to talk morality, which is least ethical: a sexual indiscretion or something like selling arms to Iran in order to fund covert operations in Central America?

Clinton may be a womanizer, but I doubt if he has blood on his hands the way our last two leaders do.

the president is technically the same as any Silicon Valley CEO.

As the chief executive officer,

He is there to serve the best interests of the people who put him there — hopefully without distractions.

of any other corporation being scrutinized this way: threatened with impeachment or indictment for having an affair. The White House has never been a temple of virtue. As many as 11 past presidents have had alleged affairs, and they didn't have to endure the attacks Clinton has.

I wonder why? It seems to me there are many people who are out to get Clinton.

Starr was authorized to investigate Monica Lewinsky's story in accordance with the case of Paula Jones. Jones case is now being handled by the Rutherford Institute, a nonprofit legal defense organization associated with the far

And finally, Scaife is a prima-ry funder of Pepperdine University, where Starr has that dream job waiting for him. Something stinks of conspiracy to me, and the smell seems to be coming from somewhere to the right. It also sounds like a giant waste of money and a huge distraction for the president when

I'm sure he has more important

Lucci needs luck

NEW YORK (AP) - Perennial Emmy er Susan Lucci has yet another chance to break her string of bad luck.

Lucci on Wednesday received her 18th Daytime Emmy Award nomination as best ess for the role of Erica Kane on ABC's "All My Children."

To get the win, she will have to beat out soap opera nominees Eileen Davidson of "Days of Our Lives," Jacklyn Zeman of

"General Hospital," Cynthia Watros of "Guiding Light" and Kim Zimmer of "Guiding Light."
"The Rosie O'Donnell Show," with 13 nominations, had more than any non-soap opera. O'Donnell is up against "The Oprah Winfrey Show," which will compete for its fifth consecutive Emmy as best talk show. Other nominees are "Leeza," "Live with Regis and Kathie Lee" and "The View."

The soap opera best actor nominees were: David Canary of "All My Children," Anthony Geary of "General Hospital," Kin Shriner of "Port Charles," Eric Braeden of "The Young and the Restless"; and Peter Bergman of The Young and the Restless.

"All My Children," "Days of Our Lives,"
"General Hospital" and "The Young and the Restless" were nominated for best daytime

The awards will be given out May 15 in a ceremony on NBC.

SJSU raps Dons

By Jeremiah Oshan

A strong pitching performance is just what the San Jose State University baseball team needed Tuesday, according to coach Sam Piraro.

That is exactly what they got, as Christian Cooper paced the Spartans to an 8-3 victory over the University of San Francisco Dons (16-6).

"We knew if we didn't play well that USF would beat us soundly," Piraro said. "Cooper ate up some quality innings for us. We really needed to save some arms for the series (against New Mexico) this weekend."

Cooper, who went into the game without a victory and with an ERA approaching seven, struck out 10 while giving up only two runs in seven and a third innings.

The game however, was much closer than the final score indi-

The No. 29 Spartans (16-6) trailed 2-1 going into the home half of the sixth inning.

In the top half of the inning the Dons were able to put two runs on the board after a close call at first that would have ended the inning.

The sixth inning began ominously with a walk to Josh Goldfield and became more foreboding after back-to-back singles USF's Pat Walsh and Tony Hurtado that loaded the bases for the heart of the lineup with Mike Wright, Spartan catcher, slides safely around University of San Franciso Don Wright was safe. The 8-3 victory over the Dons was made possible by SJSU plating two third baseman Greg Omori as assistant coach Scott Hertler signals to the umpire that runs in the sixth and seventh innings and three in the eighth.

Cooper looked as if he had worked out of the jam when he induced a weak grounder to second, but the runner was called safe — dashing the hopes of a double play.

An angered SJSU first baseman, Kyle Richardson, pleaded his case to the umpire, lost in the confusion was Walsh sneaking home for the second run of the

"That really pumped me up," said Cooper, who went on to strike out the next five batters. It also worked to awaken the Spartan bats.

SJSU's Tony James started the rally in the bottom of the sixth with a one out single to left. Third baseman Casey Cheshier looked like he might have given the Spartans the lead, but his offer died just short of the left-field bullpen. After James found himself on second due to a wild-pitch, Richardson redeemed his mental lapse with a double off the end of the bat, allowing James to score

Richardson would later come around to score, hustling around third on a Rob Douglass single to left making the score 3-2 and prompting the fifth Don pitcher to be brought in.

"I felt like it was my fault (that the Dons had taken the lead)," said Richardson. "Even though it (the call at first) worked out well, I would have rather gotten the call.'

The Spartans added two more runs in the seventh.

Mike Wright lead of the inning by legging out a triple to right center, made even more impressive after catching for seven innings. His hustle was rewarded with a wild-pitch, allowing him to score. SJSU added a second run on Brian Forman's second sacrifice fly of the night, driving in Ryan Brucker, who had doubled earlier in the inning.

With the score 5-2, the lead proved precarious.

Cooper started off strong, striking out the leadoff batter, but walked the next batter When Piraro called reliever Jeff Baker from the bullpen, Cooper's night was finished. A single by Walsh allowed the tying run to come to the plate, all of a sudden Cooper's victory was in doubt. Baker settled down and sealed the victory.

A three run eighth for the Spartans essentially ended the game. Spartan hurler Brian Greene came into close the game and set the table for the Wednesday night match up with No. 1 ranked Stanford Cardinal.

"We'd like to win for the school and community," said Piraro.
"But you don't get five wins for it, it's still just one game."

McLachlan, Loeb sell out in SJ

By Mindy Leigh Griser Staff Writer

It was quite an emotional roller coaster for the 4,667 people who attended Sarah McLachlan and Lisa Loeb's soldout concert Monday night in the Event Center at San Jose State University.

As McLachlan said, "Tonight we are going to explore the love that should have been, could have been, and would have been." And that's exactly what she did, taking her audience's emotions up and then rolling them back down.

Lisa Loeb opened for McLachlan, performing five heartfelt songs and entertaining the crowd with her personal commentary about relation-

"I actually came here just to see Lisa Loeb," said Jennie Weston, who came from Modesto to see the show. "I love her personality. She's funny and her lyrics pertain to real life."

Decked out in all black, McLachlan looked like she could have been mourning love, but with her husband, drummer Ashwin Sood, performing right on stage with her, her expression was more about the celebration

From amid the estrogencharged crowd during Loeb's performance emerged a fairly diverse audience by the time McLachlan came on.

"Her theme of love and breakups along with her lyrics speak to all sexes and all ages," said Margee Bond, an attendee of Monday's concert.

McLachlan sang a variety of songs from all four of her albums. Her debut album, 'Touch" made her famous in her native Canada. "Solace" came next and was released in 1991. Then, after going on tour, she began working on "Fumbling Towards Ecstasy."

Her'htest album, "Surfacing," earned her two Grammys this year for best pop vocal performance ("Building A Mystery") and best pop instrumental per ${f R}$ EVIEW formance ("Last Dance") McLachlan is known for her golden voice and the sweet love-filled lyrics that she writes. "It's unreal that those sounds come out of her mouth," said Judy Mahtaban, a philosophy major at Stanford University. Last year, McLachlan created Lilith Fair, the first-ever music festival to headline all female musicians.

Lilith Fair's seven-week, 37-date North American tour reportedly grossed more money than any other American tour of that year at $18 million.

A second Lilith tour is reportedly in the works and McLachlan has Natalie Merchant, the Indigo Girls, Erykah Badu, Sheryl Crow and Sinead O'Connor confirmed to perform. Lilith Fair helped show that an all-female concert could be successful.

People seem to enjoy the freedom of interpreting McLachlan's lyrics for themselves

"I was immediately drawn in by her sound," said Jason Sidell, a freshman at UC Santa Cruz. "You can really comprehend her feelings and emotions just by listening to her voice.

Sarah McLachlan performed songs from her new album, "Surfacing," and old favorites from previous albums live at the Event Center Monday. The show was sold out as are most of her upcoming shows.

It is hard to stop Jack Nicholson once he's in front of a camera. "As Good as It Gets" is no exception.

Nicholson plays an obsessive-compulsive neurotic liv-ing in New York City who hates everyone -- gays, women, basically anyone not him. The boorish attitude might become tiresome from another actor, but Nicholson is able to pull it off. His character, Melvin Udall, writes romance novels for women. When questioned how he has such an insight into the female mind, he says, "I think of a man and then I take away reason and accountability.

That misogynist flavor is a great set-up for the inception of a relationship with Carol (Helen Hunt), the local waitress. She waits on him, but she doesn't take his ranting with-artist, Simon (Greg Kinnear), who has a dog that Melvin abhors. When Simon is beaten up one day, Melvin is coerced into taking care of the mutt.

A strange relationship begins to develop between man and beast, while Carol and Simon join forces to gang up on Melvin.

Directed by James Brooks, the script develops the characters in ways the audience can empathize with. Caring for the dog serves as a catalyst for Melvin to begin relating to people.

When he starts to help Carol's son with medical treatment, we begin to see his redemption. First with dogs, then kids, Nicholson realizes his neighbors offer him something he has never had before - human feel-

'Porn' to be wild

By John Meyer staff Writer

If "Boogie Nights" fans had any questions why Mark Wahlberg had to wear a 13-inch prosthetic penis to play his character, "Dirk Diggler," then old school porn star John Holmes answered them.

Holmes and his freakish 13incher starred in a double feature of late '70s pornos billed "The Real 'Boogie Nights" by the Towne 3 movie theater in Santa Clara last weekend.

The famous porn star, who inspired "Boogie Nights" and starred in over 500 movies before he died from AIDS in 1988, proved that some men are bigger than others.

And to rub it in the movies were in 3-D, something the average-sized man (6.25 inches, according to Playboy magazine) doesn't need to see poking him in the eye.

The movies, "Disco Dolls in Hot Skin, 3-D" and "M 3-D! The Movie," traced the roots of modern pornography: low budget filming, failed one-liners, overly faked orgasms and ejaculations that go for distance — in 3-D. These early movies had it all, including a not-so-stereotypical porn crowd for an audience.

The porno nostalgia attracted about 60 people to the smut showcase. The audience consisted of mostly groups of friends, both male and female, in their 20s. However, there were a few old perverts by themselves, looking like potential Pee-Wee Hermans. There were also a few older couples who looked like they were in the wrong theater, especially considering that the Academy Award-nominated movie "L.A. Confidential" was playing next door.

The audience made the interesting. Hearing movies some of the audience members reactions and comments about the horrible acting and graphic sex shown on the screen was comedy. Whether it was a scene where the nympho sounded like a chimpanzee while she faked a two-minute orgasm or Holmes showing one of the actresses who her daddy was, someone in the audience had a wisecrack.

There were also the sex scenes that were cut so the actors could take off their clothes. Obviously, low-budget porn directors, who film movies in their garages and backyards, don't mess around; showing footage of people taking off their clothes takes too much time and money. The audience had a field day ripping this amatuerish

The failed porno humor was also ridiculed. For example, when porn actor "Chick" had a talk with his psychiatrist about how he became impotent, he said, "(My family) was so poor when I was a kid growing up that if I didn't wake up with an erection, I had nothing to play

It's amazing that pornos even try for dialogue — outside of talking dirty — and plots. The transitions between sex scenes are the strangest things about pornography. Who cares about the stupid plot? Most of the people there wanted to see dirty, kinky sex in strange positions with toys.

This attitude was summed up during "M 3-D The Movie when there was a drought in sex. One of the audience members said, "This is too clean for

Aries

March 21 to April 20 Symbol: The ram. No surprise here. You have a beautiful rack and are always banging your head against a wall. Take a break from charging and kick it on your laurels this week. Famous Arian: Robert $April\ 21\ to\ May\ 20$ Symbol: The bull. You're bull-headed and like to shovel the bullshfast and furious. So revel in your bullishness because, face it, you'd look really sexy with a ring through your nose Famous Taurean James

May 21 to June 21 Symbol: The twins, named Castor and Pollux You have two separate and diverse personalities. Castor is your masculine side, while Pollux represents your feminine. Try melding them together, but remember to contact the Trojan Man first. Famous Geminian. Les Paul.

Cancer

 $\label{eq:June22} \textit{June 22 to July 22}$ Symbol: The crab, though it's a contradictory sign for you. While you're often crabby to others, you have no problem whatsoever emerging from your shell. Keep it up but keep a smile on your face at the same time. Famous Cancerian: Tom Cruise

 $July\ 23\ to\ August\ 22$

Symbol: Your sign is that of the majestic lion. King of the jungle, leader of the beasts. Make no mistake, though—others are gunning to sit at the head of your kingdom. Hint: Don't take your eyes off the tigers and bears, oh my! Famous Leonian: Robert DeNiro.

Virgo

August 23 to September 22 Yours is a very specific symbol. You are not just a virgin — you are a virgin holding to your breast a shaft of wheat. Virgin, Breast, Shaft, Get your mind out of the gutter — we're talking about virgins, after all. Famous Virgoan: Cindy Williams.

Libra

September 23 to October 22

Symbol The scales Usually your scales represent the ones of justice because you are often the cooler head that prevails. However, lately you've been worrying about scales of a different kind. Hey, but fear not, because your worries are solved. Weinerschnitzel is advertising that with your $2 chili dog and chili burger deal, you can get a 24-hour free pass to a local gym. This is true, so pig out and pump up. Famous Libran Tim Robbins.

Scorpio October 23 to November 22

Symbol The phoenix — a mythical bird which was consumed by the fire of the Sun and arose again from its own ashes. Congratulations, you are a master at saving your own ass, time and time again. And you'd better be, because you're gonna' need it. Famous Scorpian: Dick

Sagittarius

November 23 to December 21 Symbol: The centaur, and never was there a more fitting symbol. You certainly are half person and half beast, if ever there was one. In the oming week watch out for horse paddies. Famous Sagittarian: Billy

Capricorn

December 22 to January 20

Symbol: The mountain goat with a dolphin's tail ascending from the depths of the sea. This means that you will eat anything — anything and that you can do a smooth backstroke. What these have to do with one another? That's anybody's guess. Famous Capricornian: Jack

Aquarius

January 21 to February 19

Symbol: The water bearer Lucky you. In good of San Jose, where the ater runs like milk, you are quite a hot commodity. Package yourself well. Famous Aquarian: Burt Reynolds.

February 20 to March 20

Symbol: Two fish swimming in opposite directions. This last week in your birthday month is a hectic one: Friday the 13th and St. Patrick's Day Woah, buddy Just remember: Don't cross the path of a black cat while swerving your way down the street after imbibing Irish whiskey, and don't break a mirror while kissing the Blarney stone. Speedy access and a four-way split of a newly-established $5,000 scholarship fund from the Fairmont Hotel: these are the factors that helped Kelly Mull, Yoav Mokovsky, Kristi McAlpin and Vadim Klugman with books and tuition this semester. The money was awarded Dec. 18 to the four seniors of San Jose State University's Hospitality Management, according to Director of Hospitality Management Kate Sullivan.

The immediate access to the money allowed us to reward some good students before they graduate," Sullivan said.

The four recipients have fellow classmates to thank for the four-way split of the money.

"I approached my hospitality strategies class," said Sullivan. "I okay guys, what would be fair?' They decided to split the student from Israel, said his portion of $1,250 covered all of his tuition for winter semester and his books.

and financial need, according to Sullivan.

Sullivan said the recipients were selected by a committee that included two faculty members and two members of the Hospitality Management Department's Executive Advisory Management Board, including representatives from the Santa Clara and San Jose Convention and Visitors Bureaus. Providing incentive for the next generation of hotel managers in San Jose was the moti-vation behind establishing the annual scholarship fund, according to Broydo.

The Fairmont Hotel, located about four blocks from campus, employs 35 SJSU students, which is about five percent of its 650-member workforce.

The Fairmont has donated hotel rooms and meeting space to SJSU for visiting speakers and special events.

Holiday: Days off

"People don't need to use a personal holiday," Strafaci said. "This is no different from faculty memsigning a petition

Political science chair Terry Christensen disagreed. Most of us never take our personal holiday," Christensen said. "So even taking it is significant for ome of us. It's just a way of getting a point across to the trustees

Strafaci said it was too early in the bargaining game for this type of job action.

They (CFA) have yet to make a salary proposal," Strafaci said. "The contract negotiations must be done by July 1 to get (faculty) pay raises into effect."

However, according to Kurzweil, the CFA does not want to negotiate between the end of May through the beginning of October, when many faculty are out for the summer. "We want an active vote, not a passive one," Kurzweil said.

Dan Straus, a chemistry professor, said that the fac ulty should be ready to take job action.

"I haven't seen the actual proposals, but if some of the CSU proposals — like taking department chairs out of the bargaining unit — come to pass, faculty should be prepared to strike."

choose to maintain total anonymity. J.C. Cushman, an SJSU electrical engineer major, sees a similarity between egg donation and adoption.

"Td rather not know my biological mom," Cushman said. "The parents are the ones who raise you." The center also provides referrals to medical and legal services and therapists specializing in infertility. Ferguson treats the donor and the recipient at the Fertility and Reproductive Health Institute after they have been united by fertility centers, and screens participants for family and medical histories. Scott Dallas, a San Francisco State student, researched the high demand for Asian donors in the United States.

He spoke with Emiko Ono, a spokeswoman for a Bay Area fertility clinic called Family Line.

The clinic will pay more for Asian eggs because it is harder to find Asian donors, according to Family Line,' Dallas said. "The Asian culture disapproves the sharing of one's family's genetics outside the family unit. According to Family Line, Asian women who donate their eggs do so in secrecy to avoid scorn from their family and relatives."

Dallas also said that Ono told him that many Asian women come to the States because the procedure is not available in their own countries.

Gina Leonard, an SJSU psychology major, wishes couples would adopt. "God is the author of life," Leonard said. "He can make any life, and it's all beautiful, no matter how it is manipulated."
