Writer's myth of psychics debunked

By Melissa Matchak Staff Writer

The psychic fair sounded like a room full of crystal-ball-reading, old ladies with colorful scarves tied around their heads, predicting futures for the believers of psychic ability.

It wasn't exactly that, but I entered into this psychic adven-ture as one of the skeptics, not really sure what to expect.

With a certain sense of doubt, I walked around the small room, bordered by palm readers, reiki massage healers and even an aura photographer, it was easy to see the majority of the people pre-sent had a strong faith in the spiritual world and methods of alternative healing such as massage

A group of tables held a display of books about astrology, tarot card reading, wicca, angels and developing psychic skills. Audio tapes, such as "101 ways to transform your thoughts," and "101 power thoughts" did not lessen my skepticism on the subject at hand. The presence of magic crystals and sacred prayer fans supported my thoughts that this was just another gathering of people who heard voices telling them to show up at the fair.

I read a flier titled "choosing a psychic," and decided to give it a try. I followed the suggestions on the flier to form a question in my mind, and to choose a psychic I felt an immediate liking to. Rachel Davis, an intuitive counselor, was the psychic I chose.

As I sat across the small table from her, with wooden flute and drum music playing behind me, I was hesitant.

At first, I placed my hands on hers for a moment, and she explained she needed to connect with me spiritually. Then, she dealt the tarot cards, and began to tell me about what kind of person

Drop in campus STD cases doesn't reflect national trend

By Laurie Philips

Despite a 25 percent increase in the number of sexually transmitted diseases reported in the last decade on a national level, reported cases of those diseases at San Jose State University have decreased 15.3 percent from last year's statistics.

"The (national) rates are probably not higher than they were before," said Allison Wright Kalloo, of the American Social Health Association, the organization that convened the panel in December. She attributes the national increase to better detection methods, not necessarily changes in individual behavior.

The study conducted by the panel, called on behalf of the Kaiser Family Foundation, estimated 15.3 million new cases in the United States in 1996. The last figures, conducted in 1988 by the Centers for Disease Control Prevention, estimated about 12 million

The panel, which included academicians, politicians and members of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, attributed the sharp increase in overall numbers to two specific increas-es: human papilloma virus (HPV, or geni-tal warts) and trichomoniasis. Kalloo said the papilloma virus is linked to cervical cancer, while trichomoniasis is a bacterial

According to the Santa Clara County

Public Health Department, the most prevalent sexually transmitted diseases in Santa Clara County are chlamydia, gonorrhea and syphilis, with higher trans-mission rates among women and African-Americans. Individuals between the ages of 20 and 24 years had the second highest infection rate for these three diseases between 1992 and 1994. A total of 13,223 cases of these diseases were reported in Santa Clara County for that same period.
At San Jose State University, the Student Health Center reported checks for sexually transmitted diseases were the eighth most common cause for a visit, the most frequent cause being family plan-ning. Checks were down 15.3 percent from

KSJS radio show shines spotlight on cinema world

By John Meyer Staff Editor

Ask Tim Sika about his age, day job or personal life — and he's as evasive as President Clinton under oath in a courtroom.

Bring up "Citizen Kane,"
"Psycho" or "2001: A Space Oddessy," and Sika lights up and goes into his own cinema-adoring world. He can talk for hours. Without rudely interrupting him, getting a word in edgewise is diffi-

Sika's fascination with film has lead him to Spartanwood, also known as San Jose State University's KSJS radio station. No one's going to interrupt him there—on the air at least. When you host your own radio show, it doesn't matter. The only thing working against Sika is the one hour a week of air time for his show, "Celluloid Dreams" (Monday 5 p.m.).

Sika, along with engineer/producer Larry Jakubecz, are the foundation for "Celluloid Dreams" — a show dedicated to movies. Sika and Jakubecz label it "celebrating the art of filmmaking and the moviego-ing experience."

The entertainment show covers the basic informative segments from movie news to new video releases and audience interactive prize giveaways.

However, "Celluloid Dreams"
main hook is interviews. The ambitious show has interviewed every-one from actors such as Matt Dillon, Kevin Bacon and Peter Fonda to filmmakers such as Oliver Stone and Ron Howard.

As Sika and Jakubecz watched the Golden Globe Awards last Sunday, they saw many familiar past interviewees — Bill Paxton, Francis Ford Coppola and Peter Weir ("The Truman Show" producer — presenting and accepting awards and visible in the star-studded audience.

For Sika, talking to his idols is one of the major benefits of his radio show.

"I admire what they do," Sika said. "It excites me to see what they do, what they create."

The interviews help them dis-over how down to earth actors and filmmakers can be.

For instance, they remember interviewing Peter Weir. It amazed them how tense he was.

"Peter Weir was nervous," Jakubecz said. Sika takes the description a step higher, "Peter Weir was shaking."

The show also features a third movie fanatic member an on scene movie-fanatic member, an on-scene reporter/movie reviewer named Ken Karn. Karn went to the Sundance Film Festival in Park City, Utah this week and did a live report on the show. His job is to seek out celebrity interviews and badge, someone actually thought that San Jose State University students would wear their tower cards like a badge. At least that is what Associated Students Executive Director Alfonso De Alba said in a Jan. 28 Spartan Daily

I have heard of stupid fashion statements, but this one takes the cake.

Just imagine it, all of the SJSU students wearing their tower card proudly on their front pocket. Now, that would be a sight.

Students, from a generation which has done everything it can to look different, are not about to conform by wearing a badge. A badge that tells the world — in case someone wasn't sharp enough to figure out that since we are on campus that we might be students — that "Hey, I am a San Jose State student and I am proud. Look, my badge

Come to think of it, maybe the badge thing would not be that bad afterall.

In a pinch it could save a student from the pesky police, who as we all know, would much rather be out catching bad guys than poor, starving students with fake IDs.

If students would really buy into the whole badge concept, then maybe we could all wear

This way, we would have the double bonus of never having to go all the way into your wallet or purse to find your tower card when riding the bus, and being able to easily recognize each other at

Female students would appreciate this because they would no longer have to deal with the horri-

Male students would appreciate it for a similar reason. They would no longer have to deal with the humiliation of unknowingly hooking up with a high school junior, whose father will forever hunt them down.

While I'm bagging on the ol' tower card, I do not understand why we need that bulky-ass card

Anyone who owns a wallet has discovered that the adminstration made the cards just the right size for them not to fit in a wallet.

My wallet is already full with everything but money, and the last thing I need is some big sleeve that does not fit. I do not see why the powers-that-be could not have come up with a sleeker card helder.

Oh yeah, we needed room for the badge. Jeremiah Oshan is the Spartan Daily sports editor. His column, Prophecies, appears from time to time.

Hosting Olympics a benefit to university

BAD

Aaron Williams

o you think I can get a stu-dent loan for $300 million? I want to host the 2004 Olympics in San Jose.

I don't have a specific plan of attack, but all I have to do is get the International Olympic Committee members all liquored up and make a "contribution" to their favorite "charity."

Right?
If bribery and extortion are good enough for a two-bit town like Salt Lake City, then San Jose should have no problem buying the

I can see it now, San Jose State University could play a major role in the ultimate amateur game.

Spartan Stadium would host the Opening and Closing ceremonies and the ever-popular track and field events. The athletes could use the dorms. Then, some pimply-faced freshman could truthfully proclaim a Gold Medal winner actually slept in their bed. President Robert Caret could host IOC President Juan Antonio Samarach in his Monte Serrano "estate." They could hang out at the Country Club and leave the expenses for the university.

Of course there would have to be some improvements made to the university.

We'd have to build a Veladrome, the oval track maniac bike riders fly around at break-neck speeds. We could erect it on the Tower Lawn. This building, which would only get used once, would look stunning next to the Mausoleum that is to be the Joint Library. It's perfect, two senseless wastes of resources all within Caret's view from his ivy-covered tower.

We'd need to expand the Spartan Gym to accommodate all the gymnastics fans. Of course, this would mean kicking Yosh Uchida and the judo program to

But who really cares about them? I mean it's not like they've put SJSU on the international map with more than 40 national and world titles in judo.

Actually, we could relocate them to the "Library Mausoleum" since no one uses it. Who needs to go to a library, when you can find anything in the world while sitting naked in your dorm room, using the internet?

Next we'd have to improve the menu at the campus After all, Olympians are highly trained athletes.

The last thing they need is to suck down a Spartan burger before the big event. Actually, I hear most high-caliber athletes sit down at the Carl's Jr. training table nightly. Then finally, the biggest problem of all, where are all these corporate freeloaders going to park? I think if all the people who shelled out their $81 for a semester parking pass donated it to the Bad Example bribery fund, we could ease congestion

Still, we'd need more spaces for things such as "the Dream Team's" entourage and Team's" entourage Samarach's hangers-on.

I think we could tear down Greek Row and build I think we could tear down Greek Row and build what should have been built 15 years ago, a 100-story parking garage. This massive structure would be able to hold hundreds of thousands of smog-belching automobiles with Diplomat plates. Of course, the engineering department could design and build the structure that could withstand a 2.5 earthquake.

It could be Caret's legacy. The Robert Caret Memorial Parking Edifice. Has a nice ring to it, huh?
Of course, don't try to get around the Olympic compound without your AT&T Olympic tower card. Big brother will be watching.

Seriously, I just can't believe, a) how sad it is to see the last bastion of pure athletic competition fall to the vultures of greed and corruption and b) how poorly vultures of greed and corruption and b) how poorly this university is run.

I grew up watching Bruce Jenner, a slow white guy with a snowball's chance in hell of winning the decathlon, to take the 1976 Olympics ultimate track and field prize.

I remember when hosting the Olympic Games was an honor of global proportions. It was a source of national pride and an immeasurable boost to the local Now, hosting the games means paying "Guido" his extortion money in order to avoid a newspaper covered

I also know if Caret and the powers that be don't find the pulse of the students and take care of our real needs, SJSU will slip further into red-headed stepchild status in the Bay Area.

We need parking, not libraries. We need winning teams not corporate sponsors on our transit cards. We

Jeopardizing life not worth yielding to anger, road rage

It's time people take responsibility for their driving and view their vehicles as merely one more on the road, not the only one.

A study recently released by the National Highway Traffic Safety Association revealed people think something should be done about other, unsafe drivers. It's the phenomenon called "road rage," an "us vs. them" mentality. It's time people realize they are often the perpetrators as much as they are the victims.

When this area's populace crawls into its cars lace crawls into its cars each morning, the drivers don't plan to harm anyone else on the road. Not con-sciously, at least. Few know one another person-ally, but thoughts may change 10, 20, or, depending on the commute, as much as 100 miles down the road.

About then, other drivers on the road cease to be people — they become competitors for space. Following 10 feet behind the woman one car length ahead will show her she's driving too slow. Swerving in the direction of that man to the right will show him he can't sneak up and sneak in. Without even realizing it, people often press down on their accelerators or swerve in the direction of others on the road.

others on the road.

It's when the mentality reaches this point that problems - always serious, if not fatal - occur.

You may have suffered at one time from road rage if you believe any of the following:

1. Everyone drives too slowly, even if they're going 80 mph in the fast lane.

2. Women and people of other cultures aren't qualified to have driver's licenses.

3. It's not necessary to let people merge on the freeway — it's their responsibility to work their way in — not yours.

4. Red lights are merely a test of will.
5. Sports cars need to go fast — really fast — because they can.

6. Signaling isn't necessary. Only we need to

6. Signaling isn't necessary. Only we need to know where we're going.

Speeding is a form of road rage I've suffered from it as long as I can remember. I can't rationalize driving the speed limit if I can get to my destination sooner and won't get caught.

Well, I did get caught. I had been driving 12 miles over the posted limit, not much by California standards. After all, as the police officer pointed out, Californians typically drive at least 10 miles faster than they should.

Yet, as I now understand from attending Santa Clara County Traffic School, driving fast increas-

Clara County Traffic School, driving fast increases the chance of a collision exponentially.

A 30 mile trip driven at 65 mph takes about two minutes longer than the same trip driven at 70 miles per hour. People often justify speeding by saying they want to arrive at their destinations

That's selfish. What would happen, in your impatience or rage, should you kill or injure someone - perhaps yourself?

Driving is no longer the luxury it once was. It has often become a chore getting from point A to point B, and people are consistently looking for new ways to do it faster.

Yet, driving is a responsibility. The vehicle you drive — regardless of its size or quality — has the potential to end lives. There's a reason police refer to them as "lethal weapons."

How much is your life worth?

Comedy induces 'Rush

By Lance Swanson Staff Writer

"Rushmore" is an exuberant film that lovingly satirizes the conventions of college preparatory life, while being one of the most original comedies today.

The film tells the story of Max
Fischer (a brilliant debut performance by newcomer Jason Schwartzman), a 15-year-old stu-dent at the prep high school, Rushmore Academy. Fischer is one of the most complex characters ever presented in a contemporary comedy. He's something of a nerd, but that doesn't spell his enthusiasm about attending Rushmore. He is the editor of the school newspaper, captain of the chess club, originator of Rushmore's bee keeping club, founder of the dodge ball society, captain of the fencing team and director of the Max Fischer Players, a drama club. writes plays about society's dark side; his plays are about police corruption, crime, and war. ally runs the school.

Fischer meets a first-grade eacher at Rushmore, Miss Cross, (a radiant and sensitive Olivia Williams, in her second filmed performance) and falls immediately in love with her. He is inspired by Cross' love of tropical fish, so he decides to build a marine aquarium in her honor, to try to win her love.

However, Fischer needs money to fund the aquarium, which does-n't have the academy's consent. This financial dilemma leads him to Mr. Blume (Bill Murray, in his best performance on film, by far), a steel tycoon and Rushmore's biggest monetary provider. They become fast, close friends.

The relationship between Blume and Fischer is amazingly complex, with all the emotions of life. Blume — an alumnus of Rushmore — is sort of a loner, unsatisfied with his life.

He might be the only person in the world that loves Rushmore as much as Fischer, which gives them a strong connection.
Their friendship leads Blume into the company of Cross, and he instantly falls for her as well. This displeases Fischer greatly, and he plots revenge against Blume, who has become his best friend. This is one of the many conflicts that he is forced to deal with in the film.

"Rushmore" American comedy. It presents Max and Blume as sensitive characters who want to be loved and respected in all aspects of life.
Wes Anderson ("Bottle Rocket"), the film's director, has molded real characters, who are flawed and vulnerable. The film's comedy is fueled by the behavior of the people who inhabit the film. Also, there are moments of reat emotion and sadness in the film, which makes everything in Rushmore" seem even more believable.

"If you take any reasonably smart person and tell them to spend a year researching an industry, they can become an expert if they work at it." Christy Haubegger > crazy," she recalls. "But I figured the worst thing that could happen would be that the business wouldn't fly and I'd end up being a lawyer after all."

As President of her class at law school, Christy already possessed the leadership skills that entrepreneurs need.

Her publishing experience, however, was limited to editing the Stanford women's magazine aimed at African-Americans. Christy convinced the magazine's president to meet with her, and his company agreed to help fund her start-up. Christy launched Latina magazine in 1996, and it was an immediate hit. Today, it has an impressive circulation of almost 200,000, but it wasn't easy getting there. One of the hardest things about being a young entrepreneur is simply the fact that you are young.

Potential business partners often assume you are inexperienced. "Nobody saw me walk into a meeting and thought they were looking at a magazine publisher. But I persevered. You have to be prepared to get over your pride and fake your confidence when you need to."

While there is a certain glamour associated with being the publisher of a major magazine. Christy still relishes the role of underdog. "Each milestone means so much more when you're a start-up," she says. "A major retailer just advertised with us for the first time. To a larger publication, it wouldn't be such a big deal. But when they agreed to be in our magazine, we jumped up and down and cried and hugged. Then, "she laughs, "we ate ice cream." As an owner of a growing company and Publisher of magazine into a leading lifestyle publication, read by thousands of dynamic, educated young women just as well.

The Secret Success Series brings you information designed to help you achieve your personal and career goals. Watch for the rest of this series in future issues of your school newspaper.

30 Age: Career: Entrepreneur-Founder & Publisher

Latina Magazine

For someone who is only 30 years old, magazine magnate Christy Haubegger has already put together a pretty impressive resume. She's won an award from the Ms.

Foundation (also given to Oprah Winfrey and Madeleine Albright), and Tom Brokaw named her one of the "most influential people of the year" in 1996.

So how did she end up in company like that? Turns out it all started with one simple question. "I took a few business classes in school with some great professors, and they always talked about the search for that mythical big idea," she recalls. "As a Mexican-American. I'd always wondered why no one had ever produced a magazine for Latina women. Then I wondered if I could do it myself."

Christy graduated from the University of Texas in 1989 with a philosophy degree and immediately headed off to Stanford University Law School. But as law school graduation approached, she couldn't shake the magazine idea from her head, so she decided to devote a year to chasing her dream. "My friends thought I was

Law Review. Still, she figured she could learn what she needed to know pretty quickly. "If you take any reasonably smart person and tell them to spend a year researching an industry, they can become an expert if they work at it," she says. "All the data I needed was in the public library. Census data, information about the magazine industry, books on how to write a business plan, it was all there." In the meantime, she lived on the cheap in San Francisco's Mission District and did legal research to pay the bills.

Once Christy's business plan was done, she started to show it to people who might be willing to invest the millions of dollars she would need to launch a glossy publication. "192 people told me no. I counted," she says. "But most of them didn't slam the door in my face, and I was able to learn a lot by asking them how I could improve my business pitch."

Eventually, some good old-fashioned networking led her to her first big investor. "If you don't believe that stuff about using all of your contacts, you should," she says. Turns out that Christy's classmate's aunt's neighbor (follow that?) knew the editor of Essence, a

By sending reporters to the huge festivals and staging formal interviews, "Celluloid Dreams" isn't messing around. Being on college radio isn't just practice; it's a launching pad to syndication and larger markets, Sika and Jacubecz said. They want success.

They want to be in the big leagues. They want to get paid.

None of the three major contributors to the show are students. Although they hope to recruit students, the only student who works on the show is Jean Battiato a communications major. Battiato, a communications major who has been the show's vocal analyst and right-hand person for "Celluloid Dreams" brings satisfaction, no doubt. However, if they can get paid for doing something they love, that's their goal.

"I want to get paid for interviewing (actors and filmmakers),"

Sika said. "I want to do this professionally. To me, professionally is getting paid."

"Celluloid Dreams" originated in May 1996 as what Jakubecz calls "a loose forum to shoot the breaze about files in an information. breeze about films in an informative manner."

Three shows later, Sika came aboard as a co-host and movie reviewer. Together, Sika and Jakubecz decided to set the show's standards higher. The higher standards meant working 30 to 40 hours a week preparing (tape interviews, research and movie screenings) for the one hour the show runs — remember, they aren't getting paid.

The hard work may not be paying off in dollars, but respect has

"The response is always posi-tive," said Battiato, who also works as an assistant to KSJS's alternative music director.

After Monday's show, Sika was agitated. He couldn't get his mind off the 10 seconds of dead air between a taped interview and a prize give away. He takes the show seriously, and breaking the radio golden rule of "no dead air" annoyed him.

Due to the structure and ambitiousness of the show, tension is at increased levels during the show. Sika might yell at Jakubecz to play a station I.D. Jakubecz may holler out "You're on the air!" if Sika is unaware.

Depp chases paparazzi

LONDON (AP) — Johnny Depp was back to his bad-boy ways when he chased off photographers with a piece of wood outside a trendy restaurant, police said.

Psychic: foresight

I am, and I was fascinated. I hadn't told her anything about myself, yet she seemed to know it all. Not to say she knew my deepest darkest secrets, but her statements regarding my personality, family and other relationships were incredibly accurate.

I asked her questions regarding several life choices I am trying to make, and she advised me about what I should do. As Davis talked about my life, I realized she was right about too many things, and my skepticism slowly began to vanish. She did make some state-ments, which to some people might seem like broad generaliza-tions, but what she said impressed me. She told me she has been a professional intuitive counselor for the past three years and both her mother and grandmother had psychic abilities. Davis said she believes psychics have a natural ability that can be developed

I'm still not sure if I believe in magic crystals or healing by essential oils, but there's something to be said for someone that can tell what kind of person you are without having met or seen you before. Perhaps it really is all luck and intuition on the psychic's part, but my suggestion is for peo-ple to try it before they brush psychics off as a group of mental institute escapees with candles and a strange deck of cards.

last year, and the most common type of disease detection was genital warts, with more than 200 cases.

Student Health Center
Director Robert Latta said many factors can explain the drop in the number of detected cases at SJSU, including the age of the student population and the education offered by organizations on campus about sexually transmitted

The center's staff, Latta said, has been thoroughly trained in speaking to students about what many consider to be an uncomfortable and embarrassing subject.

"What it gets down to is talking to the health care taking to the health care provider about your own behavior," Latta said. "You want to get in a dialogue with someone about what constitutes risk." That, he said, involves acknowledging and changing risks to individual behavior.

Latta said all information shared between a doctor and patient is kept confidential.

"We're just interested in assessing risk," he said.

assessing risk," he said.

Renee Allen, co-manager of the HIV Team, runs the Condom Co-Op on campus. The group, which is not funded by SJSU, organizes safer sex presentations and sells condoms. Last year, Allen said, the Co-Op sold 13,846 condoms at 25 cents each — which she estimates to be a 25 to 30 percent increase over the to 30 percent increase over the previous year's sales. "Some things (sexually transmitted diseases) can't be cured by a shot or a pill," Allen said.
