Cookies, condoms offer new twist on safe sex idea

Using condoms to educate students about safe sex is not a new idea. Giving away free cookies for the same purpose is a new twist on sex education.

The "Cookies and Condoms" booth outside the Student Union Tuesday provided an opportunity for members of the campus HIV/AIDS committee to educate students about safe sex, absti-nence and sexually transmitted

"This is a lighter way of approaching a serious subject," said Martha O'Connell, co-chair of the HIV/AIDS committee.

Students were challenged to throw Beanie Babies through the open mouth of a clown, which was painted on a wood board, to win the free cookies and condoms.
They were also encouraged to pick up informational pamphlets about abstinence, birth control, using condoms, HIV, AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

Michaela Black, a nursing major who participated in the Beanie Babie toss, said increasing awareness about safe sex is

"This is a good reminder," Black said. "It's not just people with interesting lives that get AIDS."

"Everyone knows they should use a condom," said Jeanne Scott, a staff physician at San Jose State University's Student Health Center. "But I hear questions from some of my patients that indicate to me they don't know about safe

Wahlquist conditions criticized

Dangling wires, falling ceiling fragments and stress-related doctor visits are all signs working conditions in Wahlquist North need improvement, said California State Employee Association union representa-

Steve Sloan, one of three repre sentatives for the San Jose State University chapter of the employees association, is concerned about the grievances employees working in the building have brought him. Despite Sloan's insistence that management must recognize and respond to union concerns about working conditions — something it is legally required to do — Leon Washington, associate vice president for Enrollment Services, said management must know which employees have voiced complaints before it can proceed.

"If employee complaints were oil, this would be Saudi Arabia," Sloan said, while leafing through

Confidentiality a concern

SJSU union chapter No. 307 is the sole bargaining representative for campus employees con-cerning all matters of hours, wages and working conditions. Management is legally required to respond to union concerns about those issues, under article 1.1 of the Higher Education Employer-Employee Relations Act. All employees, regardless of their union membership, are enti-tled to legal representation by the union. Should they bring forth grievances, they are protected from having their names revealed.

That protection contradicts section 23.6 of the Health and Safety guidelines in the California State Employees Association/California State University Memorandum of

Dancers break language barriers

By Cindy Arora Staff Writer

A class on campus is trying to break the barriers of language with body movement.
The San Jose State University

School of music and dance will present a "Student Dance Concert" at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, in SJSU's Spartan Complex Central Theater, room

According to dance instructor, Fred Mathews, body movement is a universal language because one can experience so much visually. this choreography class will be demonstrating that point as their final project. Dawn Wiley, a graduate dance student at SJSU, said the dance concert is the final project for Choreography 2, taught by Mathews.

Wiley said the choreographed dances consist of solos, duos and trios of modern dance.

"Modern dance evolved as a rebellion from the structure of ballet," Wiley said.

The final for these students is about the movement, performance and choreography they've learned, Mathews said. "It's a lot of pressure, but it's not anymore than doing a presentation. It's a challenge but these students are ready for the challenge," Mathews said.

The dance concert, according to Wiley, will have 10 different dances. Nine of them were choreographed by students in the class. Dancers were recruited primarily from the department.

Mathews said the idea behind modern dance is highly personal

SJSU golfers adjusting to one coach

By Brandy Sailors Staff Writer

On Oct. 5, 1998, San Jose State University's two golf teams underwent a transformation.

Earlier in the year, it was decided by the athletic depart-ment that instead of one head coach for the men and one for the women, there would be a single coach for both teams. The title and job of director of golf was given to Nancy Lewis on Oct. 5. Lewis graduated from SJSU in 1987. Between 1982 and 1987, she played on the golf team under the direction of Mark Gale. Lewis was a part of the team that won SJSU its first NCAA Golf Champion tournament in 1987 "San Jose State has one of the most successful women's golf programs in the United States," Lewis said.

Finding love on the Internet: Can cupid's arrow hit the mark online, or are traditional methods for dating still best?

Online dating risky, judgment can be skewed by inaccurate profiles

Adam Paklava

Trying to find love on the Internet is like playing majority of people are going to get burned.

The proponents of online romance always spout off about "looks don't matter," and "you really get to know the person."

The truth of the matter is, online love is a fantasy. It is

One of the matter is, online love is a fantasy. It is a nice fantasy, but it is still a fantasy.

One of the pillars of the Internet, with all of its chat rooms, e-mail and bulletin board systems, is anonymity. Anyone can get on the Internet and easily be someone he is not. The 29-year-old, overweight computer programmer can become the 21-year-old body builder with a physique that would make Joe Weider jealous. The with which this can be done is amazing, and it only underscores the point - you don't really get to know the other person.

We as a species are a very interactive sort. When put together in a common area people will naturally begin to size up their companions. Judgments are made based on body language, dress, tone of voice and interactions with other people. These judgments allow us to determine who we can trust and who we should be wary of not many people would start chatting with a man hiding in a dark alley.

Online, none of the traditional mechanisms of dating work. We only know what we see on the screen, and what is on the screen is easy to manipulate.

In the online world, you are trusting the other person to represent himself accurately. On a Web page, the other person could lie and post a completely inaccurate picture of himself.

This deception is more common than many would like to think. Children have flown across the country to meet "friends" who turn out to be pedophiles. Women have met "wonderful" men online, only to find out later the man they knew online was nothing like his real-life counterpart.

Men have fallen for women online, only to be taken for large sums of money as they fall victim to a con artist. Unfortunately, the newest members of the online community are the ones most likely to be taken advantage of by predators. There is nothing wrong with being friendly online, but don't go trusting everyone blindly. If you do get interested in someone, there are a few precentions to take before developing a romance.

cautions to take before developing a romance.

1) Don't give out personal information over the Internet. With as little as a phone number and a city of residence, online search engines can determine your

2) If you do agree to meet someone, make it in a public place. Don't go blindly to someone's house. Don't have them pick you up, and don't go off to an unpopulated place. Meeting in a public area provides a safety net and allows you to walk away if things are uncomfortable.

3) Just because you've chatted with someone for six months does not make that person your "lover."

Infatuation is fleeting, true love is not. An online meeting may provide the initial spark for a real-life relationship, but a purely online love affair is not healthy. People need people, not machines.

Internet romance: looking for love online has benefits

Ginny White

'e didn't rescue each other while on a secret mission behind enemy lines. We didn't bump into each other on a train or at a crowded museum. We didn't even make steamy eye contact over raised wine glasses at a friend's wedding.

It was by chance and it seems like fate. Perhaps even kismet — whatever that is.
It shouldn't matter that we met in cyberspace.

Yes, two anonymous nicknames in the lottery-ball machine called the World Wide Web. We certainly aren't the first couple to find romance on the Internet. If you buy into the plot of the movie "You've Got Mail," starring Meg Ryan and Tom Hanks, anything is possible if you follow your heart. Or in this case, scroll with the mouse.

The love story of cybersweeties isn't much different than it is for anyone else. Digital dating is quickly becoming the most efficient way to meet other singles.

My boyfriend and I started out as complete strangers. We began contact because of common interests. That's generally how it goes for everyone else too. He was polite and inquisitive, while I was smart and intriguing (He tells me I was, and who am I to argue?). He was articulate and revealing, while I was receptive, yet hesitant. Luckily, it turns out we only live 1.2 miles from each other. So we decided to meet face-to-face. The only differ-ence is we got to know each other before we actually met.

The positive points to finding love on the information super-highway far outweigh the negatives.

First, you know the other person must have at least a rudimentary knowledge of computers, and you find out right away whether he can read and write. Secondly, you are able to discuss important issues without the same fear of rejection you may have face-to-face. It's easier to determine compatibility because you can think about what you have to say and erase what might make you

And lastly, you can do it all in your underwear. Yes, you can have a cold and a horrible case of hiccups but you can have a cold and a norrible case of niccups but come off sounding like an eloquent poet.

But the art of turning circuitry into chemistry isn't easy. Several books have been published to help those so inclined make a love connection on the Internet.

The two most interesting books are "Romancing the Net: A Tell-All Guide to Love Online" by Richard Booth and Marshall Jung and "Men Are from Cyberspace: The Single Women's Guide to Elisting Detice and Finding Single Women's Guide to Flirting, Dating and Finding Love On-Line" by Lisa Skriloff and Jodie Gould.

"Romancing" includes advice from experienced surfers of love, and it describes relationships gone wrong. "Men are from Cyberspace" also looks into cyberseav and flirting but includes ties for a mail and and sex and flirting but includes tips for e-mail and some tough practical advice about online romance.

There are downsides to dating online. But they are no rse than meeting someone at a nightclub or bar.

Online, you never really know what people look like, the sound of their voice or how they smile — unless you have video conferencing on your computer, complete with camera and speakers.

It's the same at a bar or club: the lighting is so bad everyone looks great, the music is so loud you can only hear someone who's yelling and if you get a smile, it might mean they have had too much to drink.

Talking Heads Is online dating a safe method for finding romance?

"I'd rather meet a guy at a club. Online is unsafe. They can find out things about you — it's more dangerous."

-Rochelle Pascua freshman management information

"It's just as safe as what you would do in personal ads in the newspaper. People should keep their options open so they can hook up."

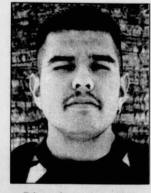

"I think it's all the way safe You never have to look at that person. Their hands are on the keyboard and not you."

"I don't like it. It's not a good alternative. Physical attraction is what attracts you to the person."

"I think it's safe but not a good alternative. It's a good way of meeting someone without the pressures which are based on looks."

"It's another option — I've done it, but it's a let down so far. You end up making lots of friends."

Farewell to newsroom family

am in love with myself. No, really I am. And since this is my last column, I can write whatever I want. So in reality, this column could be about how my best friend is my mirror, but who says I live in reality?

I work at the Spartan Daily. So here I am trying to find a good topic for my last of the Last of the Moh'Ricans' column and I am at a loss, but I think I got it.

As the executive editor, I receive all the good credit the newspaper gets. Guess what?

I don't do a damn thing. My editorial staff does all the work, while I just sit around and ... well, look at my mirror. So this column is for the Spartan Daily

Clay Stalter: photo editor. You are one of the tallest white boys I have ever seen. Even though you have been the butt of most of my racial jokes, it is done out of love. I wouldn't call you Typhoid Larry, Part-time wookle and Dig if I didn't have any love for you. Plus, you needed me to do that. You need to learn how to put people down. You might as well learn from the master. Thanks for You might as well learn from the master. I am still trying to teach you how to be cool. We need to go shopping, so I can buy you some saggy pants and some anime shirts. After that, you can hang ground my edd stemping grounds where I can hang around my old stomping grounds, where I can show you how 6-year-olds smoke weed and how to clean your blood off of the street. Thanks for being a pain in the neck and keeping me in check when I got too overbearing by saying, "Look, I am the editor, and you will respect my authoritai!"

I have three words to describe my copy editor. It is what I always say when people talk about her. Here they are: I love Margaret ... man. OK, that was four words, but a lot of people don't know that Margaret was my editor at San Jose City College. She knew me when I was a quiet, unassuming little kid. She kicks herself every day for not keeping me that way. Margaret, you owe the world an apology.

JoAnn Peach: opinion editor. JoJo, whenever I was stressed out, mad at the world and felt like nothing was going right, I looked at you and realized that there was someone worse off than I am. Thanks a lot. No really, Jo you have been my minority in crime. You were always ready with a cancerstick on hand when I was really mad. I enjoyed our gripe sessions and I am indeed sorry for leaving you alone when I saw a good looking girl walk by. Hey, my bad.

John Meyer: entertainment editor. John, you are the best writer I have ever seen. You saved me when I was managing editor last semester by writing stories that made me look good. Not many people understand you, but your real friends do and that is all that matters and you know it. Kick ass. Before I get all loveydovey by saying if you were a woman, I would marry you, I'll stop and say one thing: Johnny, we're boys. Now, get off your ass and get a job that will utilize your writing skills.

Jeremiah Oshan: sports

Miah, me and you have always been rivals. I Miah, me and you have always been rivals. I know you look at me and say that you are 10 times better than I can ever be. That's OK, I do the same thing. You were my antithesis to my arrogant, womanizing behavior in the newsroom, and that rivalry slowly turned into respect. You are a loud, opinionated drunk. I would hate you if you were not. Especially the drunk part. Hell, we are both drunks. Thanks for getting hammered with me before we started the day. We didn't do it enough. Hey, I am still better than you, yo.

Julia B. Wright: managing editor.

OK everyone listen, the managing editor does the most work of anyone on staff. They also don't get any credit, so this is long overdue. Julia, you made my job easy. You were the true force of this paper, 'nuff job easy. You were the true force of this paper, 'nuff said. Even though this will make some people in our department mad, you are the best managing editor this paper has ever seen. I will never work with a more driven, self-improving person. With all that said, I still don't like you. As a matter of fact I am ready to brawl with you right now. Now, you may not ready to brawn with you right how. Now, you may not be America's No. 1 cracker, but you are Jon Perez's No. 1 cracker. Now, let's go get plastered.

Aaron Williams: production editor.

Aaron, there is no way in hell that I would ever talk to you or be your friend if it wasn't for this paper. I didn't like you when I first met you, and I know you didn't like me. We were jackasses when we was and we still are We represent the true power of met, and we still are. We represent the true power of a newspaper. Two totally different people got to know each other because of our field. You were my best friend this semester, and I couldn't have survived the constant criticism this paper gets from our department without you. Tag team partners, production gods and brothers — these are just a couple of phrases I used to describe us. The funny thing is, I am more of a Mr. Bad Example than you are, I'm just better looking. Friends are supposed to learn from each other, that is what we did. Now teach me how to play golf. Minorities don't have access to golf

Well, there it is, I'm done. Thanks for reading my bad writing. I hoped my readers learned how not to write from my columns.

Golf: One coach for both teams

Lewis, a member of the Ladies Professional Golf Association — LPGA — was managing the Saddle Creek Golf Club in Copperopolis, when she heard of the opening at SJSU. Being an alumna, she decided to apply — and was hired.

John Glass, the senior associate director of athletics for external operations, is in charge of the fund raising for all sports at SJSU, and he said Lewis was the best candidate.

"We have certainly made the right selection (with Lewis)," Glass said. "We were very

For the men, she wants to boost their ranking from 75th of 400 schools to 50th by next year. In two years, Lewis' goal is to bring currently aren't an active force.

"Maybe they just need to be approached to show their Spartan alumni pride," Lewis said.

Ted Bakelis is the only senior on the golf team. This is his third year with the Spartans and said having Lewis as the director of golf has been good for the program.

"She's very organized and easy to get along with. She (has) had a lot of experience with men, so she coaches us," Bakelis said.

Even 3-point shooting, usually the province of the Rockets, belonged to the Lakers. Los Angeles hit 10 of 18 3pointers and a flurry of long-range baskets by the Rockets got them no closer than nine points in the second quarter. The Rockets hit 11 3-pointers, but shot only 40 percent from the floor

The Lakers still couldn't stop Charles Barkley, one-third of Houston's trio of future Hall of Famers, who had 19 points and 13 rebounds. The scoring load fell to Houston's bench. Sam Mack led the Rockets with 20 points and Brent Price added 18.

Scottie Pippen struggled offensive ly for the second straight game, with three points on 0-of-7 shooting. Hakeem Olajuwon was saddled with three fouls in the second quarter, when the Lakers led by 23 points. He finished with eight points on 3-of-10 shooting.

The Lakers' defense ignited from the start, limiting the Rockets to just 12 points in the first period, fewest by a Los Angeles opponent in a quarter this season.

The Rockets began Tuesday's game just where they left off in the series opener, committing six turnovers in the first quarter. Late turnovers by Pippen and rookie Cuttino Mobley cost Houston in a 101-100 loss

Four more relievers followed, with Tim Worrell allowing pinchhitter Frank Catalanotto's tworun single in the sixth — which ended Detroit's 18-inning scoreless streak.

Rookie Jeff Weaver (3-3) had the shortest and worst of his six major league starts, giving up major league starts, giving up four runs and seven hits in four-plus innings. Weaver gave up four doubles, including two to Giambi. His ERA rose from 2.48

Ben Grieve's RBI single and a run-scoring double from Eric Chavez gave Oakland a 2-0 lead in the fourth.

Giambi hit a two-run double after Tony Phillips was hit by a pitch and Jason McDonald sin-gled in the fifth. A walk to John Jaha finished Weaver, but Bryce Florie escaped further damage two strikeouts and a groundout.

A.J. Hinch doubled and scored on a bases-loaded walk to Scott Spiezio off Matt Anderson in the eighth. Tejada homered off Masao Kida in the ninth.

Understanding, which states employees who believe they are required to work under unhealthy or unsafe conditions should give both their name and concern to the appropriate administrator. Administrators are required to investigate the concerns, inform the employee of what was found and, if necessary, make any changes to correct the condition.

Union steward Virginia Barrios served as a representative four years ago. She currently possists representative Lize representative Herrera, who, with Sloan and representative Carlos Quilez, examines employee concerns.

"A lot of employees like their jobs, and they just want a workable environment," Barrios said. "We don't have that here."

Barrios said some employees have been harassed at work for going to the union with complaints. They fear talking to supervisors, she said, because many supervisors have said they don't like the union.
"We know of no employees that have come forward with any complaints," Washington said, describing enrollment services employees as "vocal." "If people don't want to talk to us, they can play the little games they want to

Although the union offers protection from retribution, working through the three-level process of filing grievances can take months, Barrios said. Rarely do grievances advance to the state level. "It's (filing) a drawn out thing. It's hard for people to stick with this," Barrios said, adding personnel involved with complaints may turn over before problems are solved. "A lot of times, employees can't deal with this, so they just go

Potential health hazards

Wahlquist 135-C, known as the wandquist 193-c, known as the file room by employees, is the room in which hard copies of all student records are kept. Materials from both the Admissions and Records and Rec Financial Aid offices — known collectively as Enrollment Services — are stored on bookshelves and enclosed by floor-to-ceiling wire fences.

Sloan said he has maintained consistent contact with three of the department's employees, who have complained of excessive dust problems, illogical storage of materials and concerns about the

Concerned with what he saw in writing, Sloan and Jones arranged — two weeks in advance to walk through the area three times with a supervisor.

"It wasn't a surprise inspection," Sloan said. "You can see why they wouldn't have wanted a surprise inspection.

Request for change

The first visit, on March 29, yielded a list of concerns that included narrow pathways, dirt in the work area and improper storage conditions. Sloan submitted those concerns to Washington in a series of memorandums with the most recent dated May 6.

Sloan said Washington has not yet responded to the memos — verbally or in writing. He said he is puzzled why Washington has not voluntarily come forward and addressed the concerns.
"He (Washington) may make the legal argument that he doesn't have to answer those ques-tions, but if he knows of the condi-tions, why wouldn't he want to?" Sloan asked.

Washington said he is under no obligation to do so. Managers in each department meet each week with the employees working for them, he said, at which time employees have an opportunity to voice concerns. If the dispute remains unsolved, complaints are then taken to Washington's office.

To the best of his knowledge, he said, there is no condition he should address.

In a May 5 memo to Sloan, interim director of Admissions and Records John Bradbury acknowledged he received Sloan's memos addressing employee con-

He finished the correspondence by saying, in accordance with the university contract, he needed to know the names of the employees with complaints.

Frank Corigliano, employee association president for SJSU, said he thinks the employees working in Enrollment services may be too intimidated to go directly to an administrator with directly to an administrator with complaints. He said there were incidents in which employees committed minor infractions and were dealt severe penalties that later went through the labor board.

Sloan wondered if the gender of the employees working in Admissions and Records is a factor for intimidation.
According to Bradbury, approximately 90 to 100 people work in that department. Of those, Bradbury estimated 77 are women. Sloan said he doubts the poor working conditions would exist if the area's staff consisted primarily of men.

"I wonder if ... white males worked down there, they'd be allowed to work in those condi-tions for a decade," he said.

Washington said the department followed cleanup recommendations made by Jones and San he said boxes blocking pathways were moved and some files were reorganized shortly after the fire marshal's visit.

"We feel that we have already fixed the concerns that were raised (there)," Washington said.

No use for cages

Yet the fences - known as "cages" by employees — still remain, Sloan said. He said employees worry about not being seen amid the high shelves and being mistakenly locked inside

"What if there was an earth-quake while you were down there?" Sloan said, adding the files could potentially fall on and injure employees. Sloan said employees see no practical use for the cages. They have complained it is difficult to move in and out of them with armfuls of files.

Washington has defended the fences by saying they provide security for the materials stored inside them. He said the area is locked after hours, and he knows of nothing taken from that area during the day while it is open.

"The building has been this way for a number of years," he said, in reference to a time the area was used for storage of excess library materials. "It's still secure storage."

Sloan said having the fences for security reasons is an argument that doesn't stand. If students want access to their records badly enough, he said, they can easily cut into the area with the pair of bolt cutters.

Quilez, vice president and chief steward of the SJSU chapter of the employee association, said he was concerned after Washington failed to establish a labor/management committee that would address some of the concerns. He saw it as a practical means of solving conflicts instead of submitting a formal grievance.

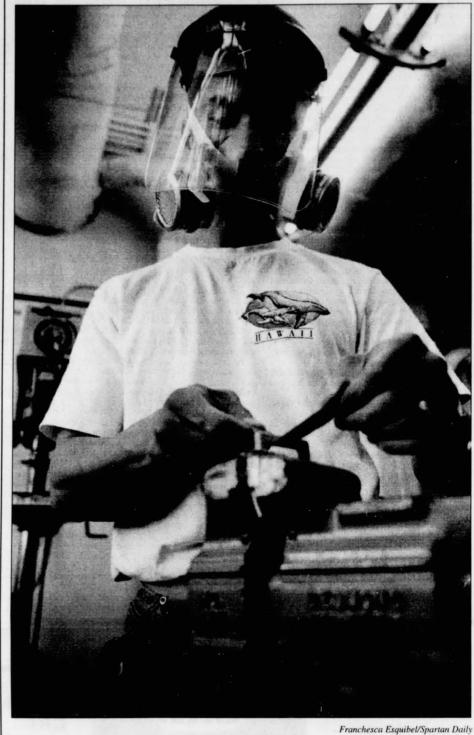

Washington said it was not the right time to establish the committee.

"There is nothing that obligates us to do it," he said, adding the union cannot tell management when committees must be established. "If that's the decision the management makes (to create the committee), that's the right time to do it."

Corigliano said complaints about working conditions in Wahlquist were first brought to his attention 18 to 24 months ago.

"When we sit down and talk about something and agree on something, and the other side backs out, that's bargaining in bad faith," Corigliano said. "From what I understand, that's not enlightened management going

Toy sales boosted by Star Wars craze

NEW YORK (AP) - Santa isn't coming for seven more months, but it sure looks like Christmas at the nation's toy

Thanks to the eagerly awaited "Star Wars" merchandise and demand for anything tied to Pokemon and Furby, business is booming at toy stores big and small during what is usually the slowest time of year.

That's good news following a disappointing 1998, when a shortage of blockbuster hits caused toy sales to fall.

"I can't believe how many peo-ple are here," Stephanie Klein said on a recent visit with her son to FAO Schwarz in New York. "This is the time of year that you aren't supposed to wait in line.

Toy stores make most of their money in the fourth quarter, during the holiday season.

Sales a year ago were particularly soft, after movies such as "Godzilla" and "Mulan" were big disappointments at the box office and the tie-in toys didn't do well.

But this year, stores are getting a big sales jolt. In recent weeks, there have been reports of checkout lines 10 people deep.

Adding to the buying-frenzy: a healthy U.S. economy that is giving Americans extra money to spend, and a wider assortment of must-have toys than in the past.

"These popular toys are the cat-alyst to draw them to the store," said Alan Marcus, a spokesman for FAO Schwarz. "But many are buying something else once they are in the store.

That's what Gina Diaz did this week while at FAO's New York store. After grabbing a few "Star Wars" action figures for her nephews, she also bought some Play-Doh and a Barbie doll for her nieces - both impulse purchases.

"I usually avoid toy stores except for Christmas," said Diaz, who is from the Bronx. "But I came for the 'Star Wars' stuff and decided to get a few other things while I was here just for fun.'

The new "Star Wars" merchandise - from action figures to spinning lollipops — hit store shelves on May 3.

While the first wave of buyers has been mostly adult collectors, stores expect sales to really soar once the movie hits theaters on May 19 and children want the toys they've seen on the big Toymakers plan to stagger the release of new "Star Wars" prod-ucts over the next few months, eeping the shoppers coming.

Also luring shoppers is the okemon craze, which hasn't slowed a bit since taking off late last year. More than 2.6 million of the $30 Nintendo video games based on the Japanese cartoon have sold, and the trading cards tied to the show's 150 animal characters are so hot they're hard to find.

"The cards are so popular that kids even want them in Japanese," said Bart Kaplan, manager at The Toy Box in Thornwood, N.Y. "I sold out of 600 packs in four days. It was incredi-

Furby, meanwhile, remains the best-selling doll on the market. Since Christmas, more than 3 million have sold and stores continue to bring in the talking, furry dolls from Asia by plane to keep up with demand.

New to toy stores - but attracting crowds on the West Coast — are Tech Deck Fingerboards, miniature tabletop skateboards that are operated with the fingers instead of the

Disabled Jews' separate school district unconstitutional

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - The third attempt by the Legislature and governor to create a special school district for disabled Jewish children is unconstitutional, New York state's highest court ruled Tuesday.

Continuing a decade-long, unbroken string of judicial defeats for the special Kiryas Joel school district, the Court of Appeals ruled that the latest law "has the primary effect of advancing one religion over others and constitutes an impermissible religious commodation.

However, the court split 4-3, with the three dissenters saying the latest law, created in 1997 by the legislature and Gov. George Pataki, had removed the constitutional problems of earlier versions and was now acceptable.

Kiryas Joel is a community of ultra-Orthodox Jews in Orange County, about 45 miles northwest of New York City. In the late 1980s, its leaders first asked the legislature to create a special school district so its disabled children could be educated in their schools rather than in the local school district.

The leaders of the religious community, considered a potent political force, said the children did better in a Hasidic setting.

However, the state School Boards Association attacked the district as an illegal accommodation for the benefit of the religious Kiryas Joel community and no others. Both the Court of Appeals and the U.S. Supreme Court

A 1994 law re-establishing the district was also thrown out by the Court of Appeals, again citing the separation of religion and state.

Supporters of the latest law emphasized that under its provisions Kirvas Joel was not the only community that could establish a special school district. A district in neighboring Rockland County also could qualify, though it has chosen

The majority of the Court of Appeals said Tuesday the third law remains too exclusive.

90210 voters decide on fur warning tag

Voters in the nation's most famous ZIP code turned out Tuesday to decide whether merchants should be required to tag fur products with labels that describe how the animals were killed.

The credit card-sized tags for furs costing more than $50 would carry warnings that the animals have been electrocuted, gassed, poisoned, clubbed, stomped, drowned or snagged by steel-jawed traps. Sellers would be fined $100 per item for violating the law.

Measure A is the only measure on the ballot and would the first law of its kind in the country. The price tag of the $60,000 special election irked Judith Karlan, one of a steady trickle of voters who visited the polling place at the posh Beverly Hills Hotel on Monday morning.
"I think it's a total, total waste of our time to put this on the ballot and spend all this money to put one thing on the ballot," Karlan, 60, said as she walked down a red carpet to pick up her car from the valet.

"It's a terrible waste of money," she added. "It could've been put on a ballot with six other things to vote on. What is so important about this?

But did she vote yes or no?
"That's a secret," she said,

The group behind the initiative, Beverly Hills Consumers for Informed Choice, said retailers have misled consumers by telling them the animals are mercifully put to sleep. The campaign raised $75,000 and sent 5,000 videotapes to registered voters showing hidden camera excerpts of Beverly Hills fur merchants claiming the deaths humane

Some famous residents including Jack Lemmon, Sid Caesar and Larry King support Measure A.

The No on A campaign has spent $81,000, saying the initia-tive is another attack by animal rights extremists who want to hurt the fur industry. They also say the ordinance would be difficult to enforce and is a waste of time

Behrouz Mahboubi, who works in property management, called Measure A "ridiculous."

"I don't know how a city could handle such an (ordinance)," said Mahboubi, 55. This should be a federal matter to be handled by Congress. I'm very much against the ordinance.

The city clerk's office expected a high voter turnout, with 5,500 of the city's 20,000 registered voters requesting absentee ballots. More than 3,400 of the absentee ballots had been completed and returned Tuesday.

These mentors make a difference.

Catherine Velazquez (Biochemistry major) meets with her mentor David Matthes (Asst. Prof., Biological Sciences). About the Faculty Mentor Program Catherine says, "It offered somewhere to go. It was like I belonged. You have a connection with a professor. You can actually talk to them and feel like school is comfortable. If in doubt, they can point you somewhere so you don't miss out."

Successful learning is the product of the relationship between the teacher and the learner. It is together that they are both challenged to learn and to create new knowledge. The Faculty Mentor Program is one formal way of fostering that relationship and creating an environment in which teachers and students can thrive

My thanks to those members of the faculty who have participated in this year's Faculty Mentor Program. Please know that your contributions are valued.

In appreciation,

Rut Cout Robert L. Caret President

Thank you to the faculty and staff mentors who volunteered their time to the Faculty Mentor Program this year.
