More light has been shed on a Saturday morning altercation between a San Jose State University football player and the president of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

Monday, Michael Bugliarello — president of ATO— shared his side of the story.

Bugliarello said he was Coats approached outside of the fraternity house by four men, including Coats, after a party the fraternity was hosting was shut down.

A fight ensued and Bugliarello was punched by Coats several times before the struggle spilled onto the sidewalk. Bugliarello bit Coats' finger while the brawl continued on the sidewalk.

After biting Coats' finger, Bugliarello ran into the fraternity house, according to police reports. "It was in front of the house, the rest of the guys jumped in," Bugliarello said.

"I managed to get away and go into the house ... and they followed."

Police said Bugliarello then ran into a bathroom and when he exited he was again confronted by

The scuffle continued, spilling again unto the side-walk outside the Eighth Street fraternity house, according to police reports. Coats was not available for comment as of Monday night.

"There were three other people detained, but we were unable to determine their involvement," University Police Sgt. John Laws said. Three of the four men involved in the attack were identified in the police report as Coats, Kevin Michaelis and Patrick Battle according to UPD.

Michaelis and Battle are both on the Spartan foot ball team. The fourth person involved in the fight was not identified According Bugliarello, it took five to six people to pull Coats and the others off him.

Outrigger pulls trigger for new career

At dusk, light spills onto the sidewalk through the double doors of an ordinary looking barn on on Washington Street.

The light draws the eye to the bright yellow outrigger canoe stretching the barn's entire length. The canoe is about 15 feet long and rests on supports just inside the doorway. Stenciled in a bright blue and standing out against the yellow background is the outrigger's name, 'Moloka'i Express

The barn is now home to Chongas Outrigger Canoes, owned and oper-ated by Cullen Chong, who designs and builds the canoes himself.

"Chongas was my nickname in college," Chong said.

After graduating high school in 1988 and earning his degree in architecture Indiana, Chong returned to Hawaii, where he worked at a boat manufacturing store building canoes

Ad opinions

A s a former editor of the Spartan Daily, as a person who believes very strongly in the First Amendment and as a Jew, I would like to voice my support of the Daily's decision to run the Bradley Smith ad. Smith

While I was more than a little disappointed with the editorial, which took a very noncommittal stance on the ad, I do think the paper made the right deci-sion to run the ad, as repugnant and disgusting as it

It is a sad state that we live in that there are still people who have convinced themselves the Holocaust did not occur, but it is a reality of life. Bradley Smith has a right to voice his opinion, and while the Daily does not have to run his ad or even report his point of view, I believe it has a moral obligation as one of the last true defenders of free speech to run the ad. How can we, as gatekeepers of information, print all kinds of radical viewpoints — from the legaliza-tion of drugs to anti-police sentiments — and deny Bradley Smith his soap box? I am led to believe that nothing he said in his ad is actually false, but rather misleading.

Yes, I wish we could silence the likes of Smith, but that is not a possibility. We must learn to live with him and those who are far worse.

In some ways, I actually think running ads such as this have a positive effect. People may want to do their own research and find out the atrocities committed by the Nazis, as well as those committed by the Japanese, Italians and yes, even the Americans. Information is a wonderful thing. We should seek to promote the seeking of it, not dissuade it.

Jeremiah Oshan class of '99

lthough I found Bradley Smith's advertisement for Holocaust revisionism to be ridicu-lous and offensive, it had equal right to be printed in the Daily. The Daily had the right to deny the ad but chose to run it.

The Holocaust is undeniable and any doubt that it didn't happen is abhorrent. But we live in a democ-racy where free speech has guaranteed us our rights, that "Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech and the press." To quote John Stuart Mill's "Of the Liberty of Thought and Discussion," "If all mankind minus one were of one opinion, and only one person were of the contrary opinion, mankind would be no more justi-fied in silencing that one person than he, if he had the power, would be in silencing mankind." It is not right for the many to censor one person, just as it is not right for the one to censor the many. It is frightening when someone blatantly speaks lies about an issue that is so familiar, but more frightening than that is the chance that an individual wouldn't be given full rights to publish controversial literature.

Feminism put to death by millionaire marriage eminism is dead — and as a self-proclaimed male chauvin-ist, I couldn't be happier. As Rick Rockwell slipped the wedding ring on the finger of Darva Conger on the two-hour special "Who Wants to Marry a Multimillionaire?" last Tuesday, you could hear cries of anguish across the country. The cries? Well, they were from every femi-bemoaning the death of a failed 30-year movement to gain equality for the "fairer" sex. In fairness, I have to admit I nor-mally find Fox television's pitiful brand of "Reality TV" appalling. Such enthralling specials as: "When Animals Go Bad," "Banned in America: The World's Stupidest Television" and "World's Stupidest Criminals" just make me cringe.

Criminals" just make me cringe. This "Beauty pageant-style" courtship and subsequent marriage — where 50 women vied for the hand of an unseen bachelor — might very well be the beginning of the end of Western Civilization as we know it, but I wouldn't mind a bit if it was.

After years of feminists and their magazines — Cosmopolitan, etc. — telling me I'm a pig and women are every bit equal as a man, I would be

He was a poet and a descriptive songwriter.

This past fall, James' killer, Daniel Sanchez, was put on trial and found guilty of murder. Sanchez's sentencing trial took place almost immediately after

As it turns out, Rockwell, alias Richard Balkey — the stand-up comedian/motivational speaker who allegedly made his money as a real estate investor — is a feminists' worst nightmare. He is reported to be a "flake" and a "loser" whose only investment property is "a low-end condo that leaks.

A former girlfriend reported Rockwell did the show "only to further his career."

He was also accused of hitting and threatening to kill an ex-girlfriend in 1991. According to court records, Debbie Goyne — who describes her-self as an ex-fiance — accused Rockwell of shoving and slapping her, twice entering her home without permission and vandalizing her car.

Fox sure picked a winner. I admit I didn't watch the whole show. I was one of the 22.8 million who tuned into the last 30 minutes to witness the five-minute courtship, the rapid-fire nuptials and the final breath of feminism.

After hiding behind a screen like the Great and Almighty Oz himself — for the better part of two hours, Rockwell emerged and stood in front of five wedding dress-clad finalists.

As he plucked Conger -the future Mrs. Multimillionaire - from the pack, he leaned over, gave her a kiss which would have made Hoover vacuum cleaners proud and mouthed what looked like an "I love you."

Nice. What he should have said is what all men who watched were thinking. He should have asked her, "Who's your Daddy? We are baby.

Uncircumcised men: a cut above the rest

'm glad to not have been born in a highly advanced American hospital.

Instead, I was brought to the Earth in a developing country with the help of a midwife. I consider myself lucky even though my chances of survival at birth were, for obvious reasons, slimmer than a child born in an American hospital because, unlike the 90 percent of American-born males in the mid-70s, I was not circumcised.

Mid-708, I was not circumcised. Circumcision is the most com-mon surgical procedure done to males in the United States, although the number is less than it was in the mid-70s. About 59 percent of newborn males are still subjected to this form of mutilation according to form of mutilation, according to the Journal of Men's Studies.

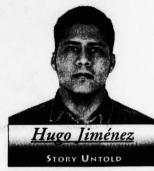

One would think people in the most advanced nation in the world would have more sense than to chop off 50 percent of a newborn male's penile skin.

In fact, it wasn't until last year that the American Academy of Pediatrics declared there were no significant advantages to cir-cumcision. In the past, doctors have cited many health reasons as a justification for circumci-

People who favor circumcision cite risks such as penile cancer, which is more prevalent among uncircumcised men, as the reason to cut off an area of skin the size of a three-by-five card.

The truth is only one in 100,000 males a year are affect-ed by penile cancer — hardly a significant number.

Another reason doctors h ents should consider the benefits of the foreskin.

The foreskin contains a rich concentration of blood vessels and nerve endings which make it as sensitive as the fingertips. Having this sensitive tissue cut off will limit the amount of pleasure and intimacy during intercourse, according to Dr. Paul M. Fleiss, assistant clinical professor of pediatrics at the University of Southern California.

The foreskin not only helps create sexual pleasure for men but also for women. One of the foreskin's functions is to facili-tate smooth, gentle movement between the mucosal surfaces of the two partners.

The foreskin enables the penis to slip in and out of the vagina nonabrasively inside its own sheath of movable skin. According to Dr. Fleiss, without a foreskin, a woman might suffer abrasions from the friction caused by the bare, dry penis.

San Jose gets a taste of tart-tongued Slam Poetry

f you're going to show up for open mic night at Channel One on Fridays, you'd better dress for the occa-

And if you show up in the suit you wore to work that day, at least be pre-pared to loosen your tie and recite some ick-ass poetry.

Some show up with dyed-black hair and pale makeup.

Others choose a '70s motif and wear brightly colored bell bottoms and long flowing hair

Still others go out on a limb and invent styles of their own with colors and styles that were probably never meant to co-exist.

And then there's the good ol' T-shirt and jeans lad folk.

Poetry slams started in the late '80s and have since become a regular occurrence in San Jose. Note the word slam.

These aren't your traditional Walt Whitman-type oems

The "slam" gives it a wicked little twist, making no topic untouchable. "Usually for slams, what works best is sensuality, sexuality and some social justice," said James Brown, a slam poet and English major at San Jose State University.

He said slam poetry balances out academic poetry, which "a lot of times only the author understands."

Sex, relationships, drugs and self-acceptance are all popular slam poem topics. Geoff Trenchard publicized his secular opinions when he started off 'last Friday's readings with a sarcastic "I said-uh can I get a Hallelujah!"

"Hallelujah!" the crowd replied "I said-uh can I get an amen?"

"Amen!"

Trenchard hosts poetry sessions at 8 p.m. on Fridays and starts the evenings off with words designed to rile up the audience.

One man played the guitar while another sang songs with a child-like voice. During the innocent sounding song, the word "vagina" came as a comedic shock.

Another poet lamented the passing of a lonely Valentine's Day. "I feel broken as if there was a great female conspiracy to break me, and they've finally succeeded."

Yet another performer described his childhood conception of masturbation

'My friend said, 'Dude, I did it last night. I busted a nut!' "

People can get on stage and do just about anything they want to on open mic night, from singing a song to donning a mask adorned with feathers and swinging their arms in the air.

Technically, the readings that take place weekly in various clubs around the Bay Area are not slams. San Jose's "real" slams take place

Water polo dunked by Cardinal Spartan

SJSU players still upbeat despite 6-3 loss to Stanford

Monica L. Ewing DAILY STAFF WRITER

The women's water polo team lost to the Stanford Cardinal 6-3 on Saturday at the Aquatic Center, but the smiles on the Spartan's faces and the sense of victory in the air made it feel like a win

That's because the Spartans — ranked No. 5 in the nation — had played their best game yet against Stanford, according to Patty Goldman, a member of the team.

Stanford is ranked No. 4 in the nation, but Spartan head coach Lou Tully said Stanford could just as easily be No. 1, because the top four teams in the nation are so closely ranked

He said that although the Spartans are fifth in the nation, there is a big gap between them

"Stanford is a tremendous team," Tully said, "This game has helped convince the players that they are good enough to compete with the top four teams — mentally. Physically, they are on the same level.

The last time the team played Stanford they lost by 11-1, but this game was an entirely different story. The Cardinal made the first three goals of the game during the first period, but the Spartans didn't back down.

San Jose State University came back with a goal by Liz Garcia in the first quarter and another by Neva West in the second quarter. Christy Taylor made the final SJSU goal of the game, bringing teams showed. She said the water polo team goes to Spartan basketball games and other SJSU sporting events, and they expected the same from the other teams on compute the other teams on campus.

"Lack of respect is not cool," said West, who was celebrating a birthday on Saturday as well.

Despite the absence of support om Spartan teams, a lively from crowd filed the bleachers and stood around the pool, clapping, yelling and singing the Spartan fight song. Goalie Melanie Nichols, who played the entire game, got the crowd excited when she made a great save in the second quarter. "We have never played them so well and we had great defense," Nichols said. "We really worked together as a team."

Matt Anderson, assistant SJSU coach, said the game was played well by both teams, and it was a clean game, with not a lot of kicking and punching going on. West played much of the game and seemed to take the brunt of the aggressive Cardinal defense. "The game is tough," she said. "There is always stuff that isn't going to be called. You just have to play through it." Both the SJSU players and the coaches acknowledged their team has improved a lot since the start of the season.

"The score was so much closer," West said. "We knew what we were coming into, so we practiced real hard this week.

"We have a very young team, which is exciting," Nichols said about the team, which is made up season to the fourth-ranked Cardinal. SJSU lost to of mostly sophomores and juniors. She also said there was a big difference in the team's performance over last year, when they were ranked No. 9 in the nation. Most of the players were freshmen. "The team is really starting to believe in themselves," Nichols said.

said what is exciting Tully about the players is that they play like a team. He said he played 12 players and all of them made great contributions. Christy Taylor, a team captain, was also upbeat about the game. "Even though we lost, we played at their level and that is what we meant to do," Taylor said. 'We'll get them next time."

The team will travel to Santa Barbara next weekend to play in a tournament against the top teams of the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation, which consists of teams from the Pac-10 and the Western Athletic Conference.

SJSU will open the tournament by playing Pacific. Should the Spartans win, they will get another chance at the Cardinal.

The Spartans will then com pete against Hawai'i and Stanford again on the road in Hawai'i on March 4.

Roundup Staff report

The women's basketball team remains winless in Western Athletic Conference play after a 66-37 loss to Tulsa Saturday. The Spartans grabbed a 11-10 lead in the first seven minutes of the game, but Tulsa utilized a 16-0 run in the final 7:39 of the half to go ahead for good. Crissy DiLuzio led the team in scoring with 11 points. The Spartans have now lost 16 straight games and 27 in WAC play.

■ San Jose State University's gymnastics team defeated Alaska-Anchorage Saturday behind Kim Cianci's and Tasya

Talbot's performances. Cianci took first all-around with a mark of 38.275 and Talbot took third with a 37.800.

The Spartans finished with a total of 188.550 compared to the 183.950 score of Alaska-Anchorage.

Tracy Cheshier also took first in the vault for the Spartans. On Sunday, the squad took fourth in the UCLA Invitational with 190.000 points.

The Spartans return to action Saturday at 7:30 in the Spartan Gym against California.

■ After dropping its first match, the tennis team went on to capture its next two matches in Northern the Arizona Invitational.

On Friday, the Spartans fell to Memphis, 6-3, before coming back to beat St. Louis 5-4 on Saturday.

On Monday, the Spartans beat the host Northern Arizona team 5-4. Marta Zivanov, Helen Van and Vanessa Pinot all won in singles play to pace the victory. Zivanov and Caroline Stenman also won in singles play Saturday.

Spring Break! You've been lugging books and stress around all semester. Now's the time to lighten the load and take a break...Spring Break, that is! Spring Break is definitely a great stress-buster and the best party ever! More friends, fun (hopefully, sun) and guys than you can imagine! To help get ready for the college What You MUST Bring:

Wear Playtex Gentle Glideall you feel is comfortable.

It's true. With pads, even the thinnest ones, you always know they're there. And that can make you feel like you're wearing a diaper. Try Playtex Gentle Glide tampons. They offer you a more comfortable way to deal with your period. Playtex Gentle Glide tampons have a unique design that adjusts to comfort fit. So they're more than invisible - they're completely comfortable!

experience of a lifetime, here are some helpful tips (from someone with personal experience) that will get you off to Spring Break 2000 and out on the beach as fast and fabulously as possible! Cardinal Rule #1: At all costs, do NOT over pack! Have you ever lugged a heavy bag with a sunburn?

Sunglasses, cool hat and lots of suntan lotion! The basics: travel-size soap, shampoo, lotion, (Banana Boat[®] sunblock is my personal favorite because it comes in a variety of SPFs and smells great.) Remember, a burn on the beach means no more fun in the sun.

2 bathing suits to add some pizazz and to always have one that's dry.

2 to 3 pair of shoes - Definitely bring cool sandals for cruising the beach and a comfy set of walking shoes so you can hit the board-

- toothpaste and razor Pack in plastic to avoid gross surprises at the other end when you unpack. (Throw a couple of Wet Ones* Singles moist towelettes in for you and your friends. You'll find a million uses for them - at the beach, after lunch and to wipe that suntan lotion off of your hands.)
- On to the good stuff... a Camera to record the memories and something to play your favorite tunes on the beach - Remember to Wear a pad - it can feel like a diaper.

So comfortable you can't even feel them:

- walk
- Sundresses are a great space saver and look awesome on the beach during the day or out on the town at night. The perfect excuse to show off a tan!
- A stash of tampons Just in case! (As a tip, try Playtex* Tampons. -They're perfect for packing and really are so comfortable you can't even feel them.)
- buy extra film and batteries BEFORE you leave...
- Of course it won't rain, but bring a deck of cards - just in case.
- One credit card (and only one) for emergencies. (What if the cash machine doesn't work?)

Don't torture yourself - leave it at home:

- Your heavy-duty hair dryer Check with friends and vote for one person (whoever has the smallest) to lug it.
- Laptop, or any other expensive electronic equipment. Sand, sun and sea air will wreak havoc, and tempt theives. Why risk it?
- Your entire CD collection. Grab a few of your favorites and hope you like your friends' choice in music too.

SPRING BREAK 2000, HERE YOU COME! ENJOY!

- Too much make-up. It will melt in all that sun - and anyway, the natural look is in.
- Text books! Intentions are always good, but a good paperback is much more practical to pack and won't scare anybody on the beach.
- Last but not least. Leave your boyfriend. your ex, or your current love interest behind. There's plenty of fun to find on the beach. Keep your options open!

He introduced and built his own one-man outrigger canoe about six months ago, while the idea for his design has been around for about two-and-a-half

The design is a one-man canoe with an "ama," or outrigger attached to it, which makes the canoe more stable and less likely to flip over.

Chong modified the ama on the canoes with one of his own design

"It is built to have a higher volume so it will work better in the ocean, especially with the choppy waves around the Bay Area, Chong said.

"Cullen applied the knowledge he had from making surfboards and wind surfers and incorporated it into the design," said Mitchell Chong, Cullen's brother. "The design has really clean lines It's very appealing to people.

time if more than one boat is being worked on at a time, Chong said.

"The canoes are actually built from the outside in," Chong said. "The first thing I'm actually doing is putting the coloring on. and I just spray that on the inside of the mold. Then I put in the foam and either the carbon or fiberglass. But the thing is actu-ally hollow inside." Chong said.

The boat is made of high den-sity foam sandwiched between either carbon fiber or fiberglass. "The foam by itself is actually pretty fragile in this state," Chong said "But sandwich it between two layers of glass or carbon fiber and it's super strong

His current customers are mostly racers who compete in the six-man outrigger canoes that do not have enough time to practice with the five other members of their team.

"My canoes give them a chance to practice away from their team, but to keep in shape for racing,

"I liked the design and the way handled," Fernandez said. "Especially in the open ocean — I could feel it catching the waves." Fernandez took a brochure Chong had at the competition and called him later to order his outrigger canoe

'He's local, he has experience in building boats. It's more convenient than buying from the Islands. And on top of that, if it ets damaged, he can fix it, Fernandez said.

Chong sells his outrigger canoes for around $2,000 to $2,400 each — while other com-panies start selling their canoes at $2,300 and up to $5,000 apiece.

He sells the boats internationally and locally, from Australia to South Africa and New Zealand. Most of his business comes from his Web site, http://home.pacbell.net/chongas.

"That's where I get most of my contacts," Chong said. To ship the canoes to his buy Rex Painter, director of disaster services, said, "There are levels to what volunteers can do. There's basic, which is helping a single family who for instance, lost their house in a fire." The Red Cross would assist with finding the family a hotel to stay in, buying groceries and find-ing clothes to wear.

communications and running shelters for victims," Painter said. Volunteers can help locally or sign up to travel cross-country or worldwide to help disaster victims in other countries. Besides the introduction to disaster services class, the Red Cross also offers classes for other possible disaster situations. The "Going on Disaster Assignment" class teaches volunteers - who want to travel to other cities or countries to help with disasters — what to do in preparation for their trip. Another possible class for volunteers to take teaches how to talk to the media covering a disaster and another covers how to open, maintain and close shelters. "There's definitely a good feel of the Red Cross and how it benefits disaster victims. Our volunteers learn how to be an asset to communities that are going through disasters," Borgstrom said.

blood alcohol tests were conducted, according to police reports.

Objective symptoms - a term police use to describe a person they feel may be intoxicated --include red, watery eyes, the odor of alcohol and lack of coordination. "We only conduct alcohol tests for investigations in which alcohol is an element of the crime," Laws said.

Bugliarello claimed he was not under the influence of alcohol dur-ing the time of the incident.

"I cannot be intoxicated at any ATO events," Bugliarello said. It was not clear whether any disciplinary action would be taken toward the football players involved in the incident.

Just like any other students. they are expected to maintain good citizenship," said Lawrence Fan, sports information director for SJSU. "If problems or situa-tions arise where action needs to be taken, then it will be taken.
