SJSU scuba class practices for the real thing in the Spartan Complex

By J. E. Espino DAILY STAFF WRITER

The Spartan Complex pool's deep end appeared to boil Thursday as ripples formed furi-ously on the surface — all caused by students blowing bubbles under water, and not for fun and play.

Submerged beneath warm, humid air, the beginning scuba diving class practiced breathing and air-sharing drills, also known as octopus breathing, underwater.

HuP 8 students have been acquiring the skills and techniques necessary to prepare them for scuba outings to Monterey Bay scheduled for April and May. "We can't hold our breath. We have to release the air," said Mike Sierra, an industrial technology major. Sierra said he wanted an activity for the summer, and he

Senate agenda: online classes

classes online after the Academic Senate begins a scheduled policy review of the distance-learning programs Monday.

PREVIEW

Whether or not the new policy guideline effects any real change, however, is uncertain. While the resolution provides structure for the creation of distance-learning programs, any decisions regarding the creation of such programs would remain with the departments. Distance learning, as opposed to the standard course held on campus, allows students to communicate directly with faculty and fellow students from the comfort of their home, said Henriette Langdon, an associate pro-fessor from the communicative disorders and sciences department and member of the senate's curriculum and assessment committee

Questions concerning homework, tests, or other class business can routinely be relaved through e-mail. Discussions can also be held in what amounts to large "conference" calls.

As a result, the programs pro-vide students greater freedom and flexibility in completing their work, Langdon said. "Distance learning has been terrific," said Chris Hagie, an assistant professor of special education and rehabilitation, who is currently teaching "Man-

Students argue for morals at Ethics Bowl

By Vivian Bejarin

DAILY STAFF WRITER

Three months ago, the San Jose State University debate team was given a copy of 15 cases about moral issues it would debate at the Seventh Intercollegiate Ethics Bowl.

The team of four had to research and prepare its arguments three months prior to the tournament held March 1 in Cincinnati, Ohio, said Richard Greene, the team's adviser.

The team tied for fifth place in the tournament. It was the first time the team has qualified for the preliminary round

"We got to the quarterfinals and we were eliminated by Texas Agriculture and Mining at Corpus Christi, the team who went on to win the championships," Greene said. Beth Griffith, a senior majoring in philosophy and the newest member of the debate team, said she enjoyed competing.

"It was an honor to be there." Griffith said. "It was exciting to be in the same room with intellectual giants." Greene said it was the first time the SJSU team qualified for the preliminary rounds.

During the tournament, Greene said the teams are unaware of which cases would be chosen for them to debate.

"The cases are chosen by random and in groups of two," he said.

Vlad Sankin, a senior who is double majoring in computer science and phi-losophy, said he was happy to reach the semifinals.

"I felt we were much more prepared than the other teams," Sankin said. "We did much better than last year." Gary Buzzel, a senior in psychology

Finding peace in a different kind of vacation

Death penalty justifiable in certain circumstances

n response to J. Martin Nysted's queries in his letter, which was published Wednesday, some clarifications are in order.

I am in utter agreement with Nysted's statement that "the cornerstone of any religion has to be sanctity of life.

However, I do not see an absolute contradiction in a religion supporting the death penalty in certain, very limited circumstances.

As Emily B. Zurich stated in her excellent col-umn, published Feb. 20, "when convicts are put to death, we should remember who was killed at their hands." The basic point being that convicted mur-derers are what they are because they have proven their disrespect for the sanctity of life

So, while the Catholic position is unambiguous in terms of the value of innocent human life, certain situations could exist in which Catholic teaching would support the death penalty.

This would involve the convicted murderer being in a situation where he or she was still a threat to other people and no effective means of incarceration were possible.

Since this is almost never the case today, Catholic teaching is generally against the death penalty but hardly in an unqualified manner.

Pope John Paul II's "The Gospel of Life" is an excellent resource for those wishing to understand Catholic teaching on such matters.

S ome people work hard for months, or even years, before they get worn-out and decide they need a vacation. When choosing to go on vacation, these people have to schedule time off from their jobs and spend por-tions, if not all, of their savings on airplane tickets so they can take a trip to some exotic place like the Caribbean Islands or Hawaii, where they can wade in clear waters or bask under the sun on a beach.

Some may want to travel to a foreign land such as Africa or France, where they can intertwine them-selves with the natives and experience different cultures.

I have a different plan. I don't have to do extensive planning, budgets or research. But the result is the same

With Spring Break coming up, I will get a chance to distance myself from the routine of waking up, going to classes, editing and laying-out pages here at the Daily and returning home to study, only to do it all again the next day.

My method is composed of one thing: freeing my mind. You've all heard the phrase "Free your mind, and the rest will follow Maybe this is what the saying was supposed to mean: Allow your brain to lead the way, and happiness will ensue.

I could just sit and relax, or take a long drive to allow my instincts to guide the way. Some people call it pure laziness or being a bum. For me, it's paradise.

All I have to do is find a comfortable spot on a patch of grass, a soft chair in a room, a large boulder near a body of water or a stretch of road where I can absorb my surroundings

ing than an extravagant trip. Maybe you enjoy the nonstop hustle and bustle life and find hap-piness at the sight of 18-wheel trucks passing by as you stand on a street corner trying to return to your busy lives.

Or perhaps you enjoy spending hundreds or thousands of dollars to travel many miles to see some of the world's greatest attractions. Or possibly you think all this "relaxing" is a complete waste of time and would rather spend your time doing something useful such as running, reading or working. But letting my mind roam freely is something I call peace. It is a hiatus from the pressure and drama the world provides.

When I'm in my little world, I don't have to think about my grades or what classes I have tomorrow. Nor do I have to think about how I'm going to pay my bills or what I'm going to do next sum-

I'd rather let my mind wander, allowing it to shift gears as the scenery changes in front of me

I could find joy in staring at a blade of grass as an ant or a ladybug travels across the blade's waxy surface. Or even watching a bird flap its wings as it flies through the sky while fluffy white clouds quiet-ly roll by in the background. Or watching a limp branch and its leaves gently sway in the slight breeze that comes from the west.

I can also be at peace by taking a trip to a local lake or pond as I watch its clear water mirror the cow that grazes in the grass on a cliff that lingers in the distance.

Perhaps you think I'm crazy for thinking this way. And perhaps you find such mentally relaxing activities useless.

Nonetheless, they are peaceful and alleviate the stress the world brings

The great thing about all of this is that these places are in a different world - my world.

SJSU may have benefited from Aguirre's experience hile reading though the March 8 edition of the Spartan Daily, I came across an article that really disturbed me.

The cynicism expressed in the opinion section has never been a surprise, but how petty can one get? Carlos Aguirre was criticized for stating that he had recognition.

I'll hand it to Osegueda — he is a talented guy. He has the ability to sift out the most minuscule details of an incident and blow them up in the media.

I hope, though, that Osegueda, as an educated student, doesn't actually believe that Carlos Aguirre's sole campaigning strategy was to win on name recognition.

As for Aguirre not campaigning on the first day: If you had doubts about running, would you?

I happen to know Aguirre, and I would have to say that he is one of the brightest and most compassionate representatives the students have. I find it truly despicable that one can manage to belittle an individual on such shallow grounds

Rather than praising the withdrawal of Aguirre, students should recognize the detriment of what has occurred

As an incumbent executive of Associated Students, Carlos is, perhaps, the most experienced stu-dent at San Jose State.

But she hasn't changed the world in any significant way. Too bad I didn't live in the era of Susan B. Anthony.

She was aggressive and intelligent, and she changed the way people thought. She fought for women's suffrage. In the 1870s Anthony, three of her sisters and a group of other women were arrested in Rochester for the simple act of voting. In 1877, Anthony managed to accumulate 10,000 signatures for petitions in 26 states Congress members laughed at Anthony when she presented the signatures to them.

For 37 consecutive years Anthony made her presence in front of Congress asking for the passage of women's suffrage, and for 37 years she was denied.

Anthony campaigned non-stop from 1852 to1904, and died in 1906. It wasn't until 1920 that women in the United States were given the right to vote. The 19th Amendment secured this right and was named in honor of Susan B. Anthony.

drinking alcohol or having sexual intercourse

"You cannot always under-stand how you feel about your-self," Nuzzolillo said. "It depends on your choices." Nuzzolillo said people often care more about their appearance outside than what is going on inside their body. One's self esteem is influenced during childhood. People don't always understand they feel about themselves, Nuzzolillo said.

"You don't have to be skinny to be fit," she said. "My main point is for people to make choices to enhance their health." Nuzzolillo said there are three basic things needed to stay fit: sleep, water and food. But people also need exercise and spirituality to help maintain themselves.

"We have to make time to be healthy," Nuzzolillo said. "Or else you won't be able to do your best." Oftentimes people push them-selves beyond their limit, Nuzzolillo said. Most students try to do every-thing they can, balancing the stresses of school and work, thinking they can set aside their bactet health.

"We need to know what health is," Nuzzolillo said. "You can't ignore things and put them off until spring break." Jenny Chang, a staff member in the accounting department, said she was concerned about her difficulty sleeping. Nuzzolillo said she recommended Chang drink less caffeine, take naps in the afternoon and watch what foods she eats.

Ignacio Ferrey, an art depart-ment staff member and SJSU alumnus, voiced his concerns about his pregnant cousin's unhealthy fast-food diet.

"Fast-food has a lot of salt," Nuzzolillo said.

She advised him to make sure his cousin goes to get checkups and takes the necessary supplements.

Nuzzolillo said the baby is usually healthy because it gets what it needs from the mother, who suffers the consequences. The Student Health Center offers an array of services from physical therapy to sports nutrition to sexual education, and Nuzzolillo recommended that SJSU students take advantage of its services.

"Fast-food is not good for an everyday diet," Nuzzolillo said. "You can eat it sometimes, but not all the time." "Listen to your body," she said.

Melissa Alvarez, a senior, said because she is a nursing major she knew most of the facts in Nuzzolillo's presentation but thought it was beneficial.

Starr added that she began teaching a new SJSU class featuring her woodwind quintet, which consists of bassoon, oboe, flute, clarinet and French horn players.
