A.S. drive attempts to bring new voters to polls

By Julia Cooper
Daily Staff Writer

Youths ages 18 to 24 may be bursting with energy when it comes to following sports and popular culture, but recent voting statistics reveal that many are not devoting much of that energy to political action.

Associated Students Director of Legislative Affairs Michael Reyes wants to change that as San Jose State University kicks off a voter registration drive today that leads up to the Nov. 7 general election.

"These issues that are coming up at this election are very critical to students on campus," Reyes said. "They should know that it's important to vote and voice their opinions. This is the only time that we can let the people in power know that we have a say."

According to a U.S. Census Bureau report detailing voter demographics for the November 2004 presidential election, 79 percent of citizens ages 55 and older were registered to vote, compared with 58 percent of citizens ages 18 to 24.

Joleen Horvath, a junior majoring in English, said she has not registered to vote because she has never had the desire.

"I'm just not very political," Horvath said. "I don't really pay attention to most of that stuff."

Horvath said if issues she cared about, such as stem-cell research and abortion, were under consideration, she would become more politically active.

"What would probably motivate me most to register to vote is if there was a chance that the side I believed in could make my beliefs happen," Horvath said.

James Brent, chair of the political science department, said many youths do not vote because of a lack of education, a lack

Cupertino hosts eighth annual Moon Festival to celebrate Chinese culture

Moon Festival visitors swarmed around the various advertising and vendor booths while enjoying food, live music and entertainment Saturday and Sunday for the eighth annual Moon Festival, an admission-free event held at Memorial Park in Cupertino.

"This year seems busier than prior years," said Leonard Chan, Asian American Curriculum Project book vendor.

He added that Sunday did not seem to be as busy as Saturday. He said that this could be due to the weather.

Sunday started out overcast and eventually rained.

"Or the smell of tofu," said Anna Sekimura, Asian American Curriculum Project book vendor, adding to Chan's observations.

Chan and Sekimura said they noticed that every time the smell of tofu would blow in their direction, the visitors would leave the area.

According to a press release, the mission of the Moon Festival is "to bring cross-cultural understanding to the multitude of nationalities in Silicon Valley, and promote unity within the family and the community as a whole."

The press release said the festival has something for all members of the family.

Kim Leung, a Moon Festival visitor, said the main thing to occupy children is the playground.

She added that the festival mainly consists of advertising booths and is geared more toward adults.

Advertising booths ranged from real estate to teeth straightening.

Leung said this is her second year at the festival and that she enjoys the park that the festival is held at.

Leung said one of the things that the festival represents is health and well-being.

"It's gotten a little better," Leung said, comparing the festival with last year's event.

Chan said one of the popular attractions is the "grand prize" that people could enter to win.

Chan pointed to the long line of people and explained that this was the line for the grand prize.

"Well, (a) box of cookies is the grand prize," Sekimura said.

Chan said he noticed that there are more stages set up for performances this year than in previous years.

Many entertainers, ranging in age, were dressed in flashy costumes for their performances.

Pete and Verna Normann were at the festival watching their granddaughter perform gymnastics on one of the stages.

"They've had a lot of dancing," said Verna

Greeks play kickball for fundraiser

$1,200 raised for local charities

Campus fraternities and sororities laced up their shoes Friday and flocked over to William Street Park to participate in Theta Chi fraternity's third annual Kicks For Kids.

The annual kickball tournament raised $1,200 for the San Jose Family Shelter.

Reigning tournament champion Kappa Delta sorority shut out Delta Zeta sorority to take its second consecutive Kicks For Kids championship, while Delta Upsilon fraternity ousted Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity for the men's championship.

Theta Chi Vice President Dave Elston said he was pleased with the participation in the event.

"Everybody did a good job," Elston said. "Everybody played with good spirits. It was competitive yet fulfilling at the same time, because we were doing it for a good cause."

The tournament had sponsorship from Chili's and Jamba Juice, which provided free food and drinks for participants.

Several Theta Chi members spent the afternoon volunteer-

Fountain's foul odor wrinkles some noses

Plumber claims chlorine may be the culprit

By Stefanie Chase
Daily Staff Writer

The San Jose State University Silva Family Fountain, better known as the fountain near the music building, reportedly gives off a foul odor.

"I have seen random people say stuff about it," said Mark Navasca, a junior majoring in occupational therapy.

Kym Bersuch, SJSU supervising plumber, said that the fountain was turned on Sept. 21. He added that the fountains are treated with a "floating chlorine arrangement" when they are initially turned on.

"There might have been a chlorine smell," Bersuch said.

This cleaning process is done to dissolve the calcium and anything else that needs to be treated before the fountain is turned on again.

He said there might have been a "chlorine smell" if the students who report this are referring to when the fountain was turned on for the first time

Center provides child care, education for students

By Ryan Berg
Daily Staff Writer

The Associated Students Child Development Center is hoping to spark more involvement from San Jose State University departments on the campus.

"We are open to collaboration from departments such as theatre or dancing," said Teresa Stuefloten, pre-school program coordinator for the Child Development Center.

According to an information pamphlet, the Child Development Center, located on Eighth Street, provides child care and education to the children of SJSU students, faculty members and staff members.

Stuefloten said in the past the Child Development Center has had nursing students come and teach the children about personal hygiene and safety.

LIFE ON STANDBY

Early breast cancer detection helps the problem before it can get worse

It will never happen to me, you say.
I am much too young for this, you think.

Yeah, I was one of those individuals that liked to think that I was invincible and could take on anything in the world. When flu season came around, my two brothers were the ones my parents would rush to the hospital for the in-demand flu vaccinations.

I, on the other hand, would be the one to tough it out and, usually, never get sick.

And even on the occasion that I would get sick, I usually drank jugs of orange juice and lived off some Campbell's chicken noodle soup until I got better. No bed rest for me; the world still went on, and I wasn't going to stop just because I was sick.

Then reality set in this past summer while doing my monthly breast self-exam, and I found a lump. Granted, I never really did the doctor-suggested monthly exams before, so I didn't really know what to expect.

But, to put it in simple words, I naturally freaked out.

According to the American Cancer Society, "breast cancer is a malignant (cancerous) tumor that starts from cells of the breast" and is the second-leading cause of cancer death in women. It is estimated that about 212,920 women in the United States will be diagnosed with breast cancer in 2006 and about 40,970 women will die from it, according to the society's

Of course, the first things that came running in my head, besides it possibly being breast cancer and needing to call Kaiser Permanente, was how this lump was going to be a pain to deal with, whatever it turned out to be. There will be the constant visits to the doctor, the tests and adjusting schedules to fit with the availabilities that the doctor had.

I'm not a big fan of hospitals and the process of waiting around in the waiting room to be called or told the impending doom of what's wrong with me.

That's another thing — something bad usually happens when you really don't want or need it to. And when it does, you usually want to get it over with as soon as possible.

However, with breast cancer, there is no saying how long it will take.

For some, like myself, the lump may not be cancerous and instead could be fibroadenoma, "knots of fibrous and mammary gland tissues that feel like solid lumps," basically fiber, which young women have plenty of in our early 20s and often disappear as we get older, according to a Kaiser Permanente breast lumps pamphlet.

Our fair and lawful rights should be practiced by all and not the few

Habeas corpus is a right enjoyed by U.S. citizens to challenge the legality of detention, a right that was suspended to the prisoners at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, by legislation passed by Congress Friday and expected to be signed this week by the president.

In a vote divided down party lines, Congress suspended the constitutional guarantee to those accused as terrorists, potentially paving the way to military tribunals.

The bill states that "no court, justice, or judge shall have jurisdiction to hear or consider any other action against the United States or its agents relating to any aspect of the detention, transfer, treatment, trial, or conditions of confinement of an alien. ..."

The vote was in reaction to the Supreme Court's July 29 decision in Hamdan v. Rumsfeld that Congress overstepped its authority in suspending the writ of habeas corpus.

Republicans defend the vote by declaring that passing such a bill allows the United States to better defend itself against terrorism.

"Our prior concept of war has been completely altered, as we learned so tragically on Sept. 11, 2001," said Sen. Saxby Chambliss, R-Ga., in a New York Times article. "And we must address threats in a different way."

Democrats correctly fire back that anything regarding the prisoners taken in the war on terror must be done under the rule of law.

"But in the process of accomplishing what I believe is essential for our security, we must hold onto our values and set an example that we can point to with pride, not shame," Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, D-N.Y., said in a New York Times article.

The United States Constitution requires that there be a clear need for Congress to suspend habeas corpus.

"The Privilege of the Writ of Habeas Corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in Cases of Rebellion or Invasion the public Safety may require it," the Constitution states.

In this case, there has not been an invasion by a foreign power, there has not been a rebellion since the Civil War, nor is there an imminent threat to public safety to suspend the rights of those detained at Guantanamo Bay.

Americans demand that our citizens are treated properly by other nations when they are captured by a foreign nation; however, President George W. Bush er's or father's sides, women are at risk at younger ages and should get checked as soon as possible.

Breast cancer is like any other form of cancer that strikes regardless of age, class status, ethnicity or gender. The American Cancer Society says that many may not know that men also are afflicted by breast cancer since they too have breast tissues that can develop into breast cancer.

And with October being designated as Breast Cancer Awareness Month, it is a good time to start familiarizing yourself with your body, methods, risk factors and other facts to detect breast cancer at an early stage.

The Kaiser pamphlet illustrates the breast self-exam, and your physician can also demonstrate the method as the following:

Feel your right breast with your left hand
Use an up and down or circular pattern using the pads of your three middle fingers
Feel for lumps or a thickening of tissues
Last, repeat on your left side

The process may seem tedious, but it's better to find something wrong with you now at its earliest stages than years later, when it may no longer be treatable and the risks are even greater.

and the majority of Republicans in Congress seem to think that the rules are different for the United States.

The Geneva Conventions, which lays out international law regarding the treatment of prisoners captured in a time of conflict, states that all enemy combatants, whether members of an organized army or not, must be afforded certain human rights, including a fair and lawful trial.

"... (The) passing of sentences and the carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording all the judicial guarantees which are recognized as indispensable by civilized peoples," states article three of the Geneva Conventions (III).

But despite this provision in the Geneva Conventions, Congress still voted that "no court, justice, or judge shall have jurisdiction to hear or consider an application for a writ of habeas corpus filed by or on behalf of an alien detained by the United States who has been determined by the United States to have been properly detained as an enemy combatant or is awaiting such determination."

Americans pride themselves on our laws and civil rights that define our nation. To turn around and deny those rights to others is hypocritical.

In this battle against terrorism, we are trying to win the hearts and minds of those who are on the fence between hating the United States and siding with us. By suspending those rights taken for granted by Americans, could potentially leave a sour taste in their mouths.

And there is the potential that the Supreme Court could once again shoot down this piece of legislation — a fear that is very real in the eyes of some Republicans.

"We should have done it right, because we're going to have to do it again," said Sen. Gordon H. Smith, R-Ore., in a New York Times article.

The actions of Congress are deplorable. Several Web sites have begun declaring the death of habeas corpus in this country, which have been around since before the country was founded.

It may be a little soon to be making such declarations, but the Supreme Court cannot act soon enough to reverse this miscarriage of justice.

of time and most of all, a general disinterest in politics.

Brent said he is cynical about student political interest increasing.

"The level of apathy continues unabated," Brent said.

He added that many youths appear more interested in surfing the Internet, watching MTV and keeping up with the lives of celebrities than following the government.

"Learning about budget deficits, learning about Iraq — these things aren't fun," Brent said.

For the SJSU registration drive, Reyes said voter registration tables will be set up in high-traffic areas on campus, including the Student Union and in front of the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Library.

After the Oct. 23 registration cutoff date, Reyes said A.S. will focus on educating students about candidates and issues under consideration for the Nov. 7 election.

"Registering is one thing," Reyes said. "Getting them (students) to vote is another thing."

Reyes said students should realize they can affect the decision makers who, in turn, affect college life.

"This year is a gubernatorial election," Reyes said. "Seeing as how the future leadership of this state is being decided, I feel students should voice out their opinions on who they want as the governor because that governor has the power to increase student tuition, decrease it or hold off?"

Amador Ramirez, a senior majoring in spatial arts, said he is unsure if he is registered to vote and claims disappointment with the outcome of the 2004 presidential election as a turnoff to voting.

He said students are politically uninvolved because they are busy with their daily lives and added that it does not seem like today's youths are faced with the crucial causes that motivate interest in government.

"I agree in a sense that we're not like the World War II generation where we are fighting for something," Ramirez said. "We have nothing to fight for."

Carlo Manglicmot, a senior majoring in occupational therapy, said he smells the odor every day.

Manglicmot said he and Navasca are just two of a group of people who hang out near the fountain.

"We kind of sit near the (Central Classroom) building, and it's kind of disturbing," Manglicmot said.

Manglicmot said he has no idea why it smells, but he noticed more when the fountain first turned on.

"We smelt (it) a little bit in the spring semester," Manglicmot said.

Bersuch said the fountain was shut off early in the spring semester because there was a problem with it.

"Odors (could be caused by) a lot of sources," Bersuch said.

"Oh, I'm sure it's the fountain," Navasca said.

Navasca said that in the past, there were some trees that gave off a foul odor.

"That was the stank smell last year," Navasca said.

He added that this year's odor is the fountain.

Bersuch said the fountain uses drinking water, so the water should not be an issue.

Kristin Benedetti, a senior majoring in corporate finance, said she thinks the fountain smells when the water is running.

"... (The smell is) hard to describe," Benedetti said. "It just smells dirty." Some people have more sensitive senses of smell, Bersuch said.

"I've never noticed (the smell), to tell you the truth," said Michael Sanchez, a senior majoring in business management.

CENTER- Students urged to volunteer

"They taught the children things like sneezing into your elbow instead of your hand so that you're less likely to pass on germs," Stuefloten said.

The Child Development Center serves approximately 100 families each day, according to Stuefloten.

"The Associated Students supports us," said Frances Roth, director of the Child Development Center.

According to Roth, the cost of enrolling a child is determined by family income, and the Child Development Center has a contract with the Department of Education to subsidize low-income families.

"It's a gift from the state," Roth said.

According to Roth, students pay a lower fee than faculty and staff members, who pay similar to what other childcare centers charge.

Stuefloten said she believes children learn best through hands-on experience and activity, so besides teacher instruction, the classrooms are divided into several "interest" areas, such as science, art, table activities and books, which the children can pick and choose from.

Marcia James, the infant and toddler program coordinator for the Child Development Center, said that the children, in general, are extremely enthusiastic to be there.

"The children are exploratory people," James said. "They want to see how things work."

According to James, the environment of the classrooms is totally sensory, so the children can interact, make friends and form bonds.

"I wouldn't be able to go to school if not for it."

—Jenah Nugent, Communicative disorders and sciences major

According to Stuefloten, younger children are taught relationships, and each child has a primary caregiver, who accompanies them for much of their time at the Child Development Center.

"Relationships are primary at that age," Stuefloten said. "It teaches them to trust."

According to Stuefloten, parental feedback has been very positive as well.

Jessica Janus, a senior majoring in kinesiology whose son attends the Child Development Center, said she was very impressed with the program.

"They've been super accommodating," Janus said. "They help me and they help him."

Adriana Corajeo, a junior majoring in accounting, agrees.

"I really like it, it's very different from other preschools," Corajeo said. "It's very clean and has good teachers."

Jenah Nugent, a junior majoring in communicative disorders and sciences, said that it is a lifesaver for her.

"I wouldn't be able to go to school if not for it," Nugent said.

According to Roth, families wishing to enroll a child must sign up on a waiting list about two months before the start of the semester.

"We will then poll the families to see who is returning, then fill up the empty spots depending on the age of the child," Roth said.

According to Roth, low-income families have priority for enrollment, and families paying full fees are first come, first served.

According to Roth, the Child Development Center hires approximately 40 paid students a semester to be teacher aides and supervisors, and of the students hired this semester, only four are men.

"Sometimes we only have one," Roth said. "It's not normally a field men think of."

According to Stuefloten, the Child Development Center would also like to see more male students in general come to help out.

"There usually aren't many men, so when men do come, the children will just swarm them," Stuefloten said.

According to Roth, students can also volunteer to gain service-learning hours.

"We will give them an orientation and decide on a proper time for them to come volunteer," Roth said.

FBI to pursue Foley e-mails

By John Heilprin

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The FBI is examining former Rep. Mark Foley's e-mail exchanges with teenagers to determine if they violated federal law, an agency spokesman said Sunday.

House Speaker Dennis Hastert asked Sunday for a federal investigation into the case — a lurid scandal that has put House Republicans in political peril.

"I hereby request that the Department of Justice conduct an investigation of Mr. Foley's conduct with current and former House pages to determine to what extent any of his actions violated federal law," Hastert, R-Ill., wrote in a letter to Attorney General Alberto Gonzales.

FBI spokesman Richard Kolko confirmed Sunday that the FBI is "conducting an assessment to see if there's been a violation of federal law." He had no further comment.

The White House and Democratic leaders in Congress also called Sunday for a criminal probe. White House counselor Dan Bartlett called the allegations against Foley shocking, but said President Bush hadn't learned of Foley's inappropriate e-mails to a 16-year-old boy and instant messages to other boys before the news broke last week.

"There is going to be, I'm sure, a criminal investigation into the particulars of this case," Bartlett said. "We need to make sure that the page system is one in which children come up here and can work and make sure that they are protected."

Foley, R-Fla., quit Congress on Friday after the disclosure of the e-mails he sent to a former congressional page and sexually suggestive instant messages he sent to other high school pages.

A law enforcement official, who asked for anonymity because the investigation is ongoing, said agents from the FBI's cyber division are looking into the text of some of the messages and checking to see how many e-mails were sent and how many computers were used. They are also looking to see if some of the teens who were sent messages will cooperate with the probe.

The scope of the investigation, Hastert wrote, should include "any and all individuals who may have been aware of this matter — be they members of Congress, employees of the House of Representatives or anyone outside the Congress."

Jennifer Crider, press secretary to House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi of San Francisco, questioned Hastert's efforts, saying he "seems more concerned by who revealed the Republican leadership's cover-up of Mr. Foley's internet stalking of an underage child than he was about ensuring the children entrusted to the House were protected."

Vice Mayor Cindy Chavez stopped by to help Theta Chi hand a check over to the San Jose Family Shelter.

"It's nice to see Greeks giving something back," Chavez said. "I was a Delta Gamma when I went to San Jose State, and I'll tell you that fraternities and sororities build leaders."

Theta Chi philanthropy chair Junior Villaseñor said organizing the tournament was something he will never forget.

"I learned how to organize better and improve my time management," Villaseñor said. "I'm actually impressed with the results, we overshot our goal."

Ilana Mabel, an after-care housing specialist for the San Jose Family Shelter, stopped in to accept the check.

"It's great to get a contribution like this," Mabel said. "The contributions will definitely help a lot and go towards several different services that we provide."

Mabel said contributions raised from the tournament will go toward clothes closets, food, programming, rental assistance and educational programs for a number of families who stay at their shelter.

The fraternity raised money through selling T-shirts, sponsorships and donations from other Greek organizations.

Each team had their own "Kicks for Kids" T-shirt with its house's designated color.

Previous fundraising went neighboring elementary schools and campus youth programs.

The annual tournament is usually scheduled during the spring semester, but was postponed last spring due to rain.

Theta Chi President Ty Parker said this year's event was the most successful in the tournament's history.

"I'm happy with the way things turned out," Parker said. "I'm honored to contribute to such a noble cause. It's also nice to see the Greek community come out and support."

Spartans win third straight

By Greg Lydon

Daily Senior Staff Writer

The San Jose State University football team gained some payback for last season's loss, moving its winning streak to three on the season, by defeating San Diego State University 31-10 at Spartan Stadium on Saturday afternoon.

SJSU vs. SDSU points by quarter

	1	2	3	4	Final
Spartans	7	7	14	3	31
Aztecs	0	10	0	0	10

"We're really pleased," coach Dick Tomey said. "After the way they whipped us last year, to come back and win in that fashion was tremendous."

SJSU players said they could see the team's confidence growing after each game. The Spartans' three-game winning streak is the team's first since 2002.

"We can walk around San Jose with our gear on now," said linebacker Matt Castelo. "We couldn't always do that around here and get respect, now we can."

The Spartans defense swarmed the injury plagued Aztec offense and avoided giving up the big plays that hurt them in last season's 52-21 loss against SDSU in San Diego.

The Aztecs were without top tailback Lynn Hamilton and starting quarterback Kevin O'Connell due to injuries.

SJSU Cornerback Dwight Lowery was part of three turnovers forced by the defense, recovering a fumble and intercepting two passes adding to his Division I leading seven interceptions this season.

Lowery is the third player in SJSU history to intercept a pass in four straight games.

The nation's leading pass thief didn't take long to record his first takeaway of the day with an interception in the first quarter. Lowery stole the ball after leaping over the Aztec receiver to gain possession for the Spartans at midfield.

"I initially thought I would try and knock it down, but I got high enough to be able to cradle the ball," Lowery said. "Our defensive coordinator says that when the ball is in the air, it's a 50-50 ball."

On the next play after the turnover, the Spartans coaching staff dipped into its bag of tricks, when wide receiver James Jones completed his first pass of the season by hitting SJSU wide receiver John Broussard on a 47-yard touchdown pass giving the Spartans a 7-0 lead in the first quarter.

The wide receiver reverse pass was called because Tomey said he thought the SDSU cornerback would bite when he saw Jones running a reverse, leaving the Spartan wide out to toss the pass right over the defense's head.

"John is one of the fastest wide receivers in the country," Jones said. "I actually under threw him a little bit, but he made the play. He was wide open."

The touchdown catch would be the start of a big day for Broussard, who had a career day catching five passes for 167 yards and two touchdowns leading the Spartans to their third win of the season.

"I wasn't happy with the way I played the last couple of games," Broussard said. "To have a good game and to get a big win makes it all better."

The next Spartan drive started at midfield after back-to-back personal foul penalties by SDSU cornerback Donny Baker.

Baker was ejected from the game after the second foul when he slammed SJSU tight end Jeff Clark's head into the ground after the play.

"I was embarrassed for our university and for our program," said SDSU coach Chuck Long about the ejection. "I would rather lose the right way, with class, than win doing what we did on the field today."

Ten straight Aztecs points closed out the first half, as SDSU trimmed the Spartan lead to 14-10 at the half.

"We were in pretty good shape at half," Long said. "We had some nice momentum, and then it fell apart on us."

The Spartans opened the second half with two big plays on offense, marching deep into SDSU territory.

SJSU kicker Jared Strubeck ended the team's momentum when he missed his first field goal of the season from 31 yards away, giving some more life to the SDSU comeback attempt.

Two chain links may have saved the Spartans from a nail-biting fourth quarter, when the Aztecs' fake punt attempt fell inches short, giving the Spartans the ball.

Two plays later, SJSU quarterback Adam Tafrales found Broussard for his second touchdown catch of the day, hooking up on the longest pass play of the season for the Spartans.

Tafrales added one more touchdown pass to wide receiver Chester Coleman in the fourth quarter, followed by a Strubeck field goal that gave the Spartans a 31-10 victory.

Tafrales finished the game 17 of 21 for 234 yards passing and two touchdowns, giving him a completion rate of 80 percent or better for the third time out of four games this season.

"It feels good to be winning," Jones said. "But like coach Tomey says, we can't take our foot off the pedal. This team has high goals."

GAVIN MCCHESENEY/DAILY SENIOR STAFF

San Jose State University junior Dwight Lowery intercepts the ball Saturday during a game against San Diego State University at Spartan Stadium.

The Spartans are 3-1 for the first time since the 1987 season, when they finished 10-2 with a Big West Conference championship and a berth in the California Bowl.

"It feels amazing, is the best way for me to put it," Tafrales said. "It's partially because of how we've done it, both on the ground and in the air."

Volleyball team loses to Hawai'i in 3 games

By Lindsay Bryant

Daily Staff Writer

The San Jose State University volleyball team lost in three games to the University of Hawai'i on Saturday at the Spartan Gym, despite rallying in each game.

The three-game victory over the Spartans was Hawai'i's 110th straight conference win, a streak that dates back to 1996. The Spartans succumbed to the wrath of the Rainbow Wahine volleyball team, losing 30-20, 30-25, 31-29.

Head coach Craig Choate said that after a rough weekend on the road, where the Spartans lost two Western Athletic Conference games, it wasn't ideal to come back home and have to face the Hawai'i Rainbow Wahine.

"After the weekend we had last weekend and coming back to Hawai'i, you have to play them eventually," Choate said.

The Spartans began game one lackadaisically by letting Hawai'i take a 20-11 lead early on, and with roughly half of the Spartan Gym filled with Hawai'i fans waving palm leaves and signs, SJSU lost the first game 20-30.

At the start of game two, the Spartans and Rainbow Wahine remained close until Hawai'i took an 8-7 lead and never looked back to win the game 30-25 and make the match 2-0.

Junior outside hitter Jennifer Senfleben poured in a team-high 15 kills in the three games, but the overall hitting percentage was .210, which was just not enough against 38 total Hawai'i kills and a .408 hitting percentage.

"I thought the game was on and off," said junior outside hitter Keri Anglin. "I just tried to do my best for the team and get pumped up."

The third game was close with every point, until the Wahine made a small run to get up 28-26, but with an ace by senior libero Jessie Shull, the Spartans tied the game at 29-29.

Two kills by Hawai'i's Sarah Mason ended the game 31-29.

Collett said all of the teams in WAC are competitive, and "this set the tone for what we need to work on."

SJSU Ice Hockey Club team opens season with 9-5 victory

By Julia Cooper
Daily Staff Writer

The San Jose State University Ice Hockey Club launched the season with a win on Saturday after it rallied to defeat the Cal Berkeley Bears 9-5 at Logitech Ice at San Jose.

The Spartans, down 4-3 at end of the second period, kicked their offense into gear in the third to battle back and score six goals in the last 13 minutes of the game.

Spartans team captain Adam Smith-Toomey said winning the first game of the season on the club's home rink boosted the players' confidence.

"We don't lose here, and we won't lose here," Smith-Toomey said. "Every game we play on our home ice, we will win, and just to pull it off today in our first game is huge."

Saturday's game was tight and fraught with back and forth scoring that put Cal in the lead for the majority of the night until the Spartans opened it up in the third.

Cal struck first, notching two goals in the eighth minute of the first period to take a 2-0 lead.

Freshman forward Mickey Rhodes put the Spartans on the board three minutes later, with both teams adding a goal each to close the first period with Cal leading 3-2.

The Spartans were unable to capitalize on a couple of five-on-three power plays in the second, but Spartans senior center Mason Nave tied up the game 3-3 while the Spartans were on the penalty kill.

As the teams engaged in a back-and-forth struggle for points, Cal took the lead once again 16:35 into the second with a shorthanded goal to put the Bears up 4-3.

In the third period, the Spartans started showing the offensive pluck that put them at No. 1 in the American Collegiate Hockey Associate West region last season.

After a few close goal attempts by Spartans in the first five minutes of the third, senior center Smith-Toomey evened up the score 4-4.

SJSU took a 5-4 lead when junior defenseman Paul Fuller added a goal at 10:21 into the third period. Seconds later, Spartans junior left wing Skyler Yu sent the crowd erupting into cheers when he scored again to put the Spartans up 6-4.

Cal scored its final goal of the game at 11:41 into the third period only to have Spartan junior left wing Sean Scarbrough answer back less than 30 seconds later to put the Spartans up 8-5. He scored again at 15:25 to finalize the Spartans' 9-5 win.

Scarbrough, who led the team in scoring last season with 59 points, said he slammed the glass as hard as he could after his first goal to let some aggression out after the lack of Spartan offense in the first two periods.

He said he was relieved when the Spartans came alive in the third.

"I won't lie," Scarbrough said. "I was kind of getting nervous after the second period, so once we opened the floodgates and had some goals, I started to relax."

Spartan head coach Ron Glasow said he also was worried entering the third period down 4-3 but was satisfied when the team fought back.

"We just didn't have it together yet," Glasow said, "but the guys somehow pulled it together and played. When your back is against the wall, you have to suck it up, and they played great. Under pressure they responded, and that's what you've gotta see from a young team."
